AMBLING FLAUNTED IN COMMISSIONER'S FACE.

Remarkable and conclusive proof that professional gambling running wholesale and openly within a block of the Los An- City Hall was obtained yesterday by Police Commissioner , according to statements made by him to Mayor Snyder other officials and to The Times. Without any attempts to al his identity or gain entrance into the place, Commissioner was able to see thousands of dollars paid out to winners see betting in the handbook headquarters and to watch gam- plying their trade in broad daylight on the sidewalk at ing and Third streets.

this occurred in spite of the issued by Chief of Police Pendegast, following a conference with Police Commissioners last , requiring all patrolmen make, within the next twenty- hours, a detailed investigation report of all vice dens, gambling and other sources of law on their beats.

GARDNER ADMITS ROBBERY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, May 28.—Roy Gardner, mail bandit, after defying postal authorities for four days, tonight confessed, according to officers, to robbing a mail car near Newcastle a week ago Friday night.

"I might as well tell the truth of the whole affair, it seems you will get it out of me anyway," the bandit is quoted as having said.

A brass key, said to have been used by the bandit in the robbery, is believed to have caused his confession. This key was found in a suit case in a room he occupied at a hotel in Roseville. The bandit was taken to Roseville in an automobile this afternoon, and when confronted with a chain of evidence, broke down.

ADMITS IOWA ROBBERY.

The bandit confessed, the officers said, to participating in a mail robbery near Centerville, Iowa, last September, when $50,000 was secured. He is quoted as having said one of his partners "got away with the money."

According to the officers the bandit said he had ridden on Southern Pacific train No. 3, between Ogden, Utah, and San Francisco, four times with the idea of robbing it and on one occasion cut a panel in the door of a mail car in an effort to gain entrance.

He is said to have confessed an attempted robbery at Colfax, Cal., where he is alleged to have concealed himself among mail pouches being transferred from a train to a depot, where it was to be sent to Grass Valley.

Many important questions await the attention of Mr. Blair. The first of general interest is the framing and promulgating of rules to regulate as far as possible under the aw the use of beer and other malt liquors for medicinal purposes.

Mr. Blair said that he would issue the beer regulations within the next few days and they would comply with the law as interpreted by Mr. Palmer. He considered it his duty to make it possible for physicians to provide beer for their patients if they deemed it necessary.

Martial Law Plan of Lloyd George.

Irish Rebels Will Get One More Chance to Obey Laws of Country.

Internment Camp to House 10,000 Prisoners Now Being Built.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright, New York Tribune.]

LONDON, May 28.—The government plans against Sinn Feiners in their efforts to block the application of the home rule act to all of Ireland are rapidly taking shape. Lloyd George will give the rebels one more chance to handle Irish problems in an orderly way and if this fails, his answer to their defiance will be martial law.

The 50,000 additional troops being poured into the island are a part of the government's program of force. Sinn Fein must accept home rule or have it forced on them, with military government and soldiers in place of parliaments.

The conclusion of the Irish elections has necessitated the formulation of a program of action. The final result in Ulster announced today gives the Unionists thirty-nine seats in the northern parliament against thirteen held by Sinn Fein and Nationalist abstentionists. For the whole of Ireland, the figures are forty-three Unionists and 137 abstentionists.

The northern parliament, where the Orangemen have a majority enough to make it an effective body, will meet June 7, despite the fact that it will be hampered in some details of the assumption of local government by the destruction of valuable records in the Dublin customhouse fire this week. But the southern parliament, which is not scheduled to meet until three weeks later, is not expected to meet at that time. The Sein Finn, who are in the large majority, plan to absent themselves and prevent the body from functioning. Instead the members of the southern body are expected to meet next week in an informal way, calling the republican members of the northern parliament, constitute themselves into reorganized Dail Eifeann (Sinn Fein Parliament) and proceed as before in defiance of the British government.

To meet this program of obstruction tactics, Lloyd George has decided to try first the administration of Southern Ireland through a committee, members of which would be nominated by the Irish privy council. It is feared now that enough men to accept the nominations cannot be found. But if this alternative to government by a southern parliament fails, Lloyd George will answer with troops. All the island except Ulster would be included under martial rule.

Military leaders in Ireland assert that a clear cut policy of pacification by the military has not been tried in Ireland because the Irish constabulary and the soldiers on duty there are controlled by different heads. They urge that the military leaders be given complete control over the police as well as the soldiers. This proposal is apparently gaining support.

As further evidence of the imminence of military rule in Ireland is a new internment camp now under construction there. It is being built to house 10,000 prisoners.

Uruguay Tires of League; May Withdraw Soon.

MONTEVIDEO, May 28.—Uruguay, which has been one of the most enthusiastic of the South American supporters of the League of Nations, is seriously considering withdrawal. The first move in this direction was made a few days ago, after the visit of the Chilean embassy, which is attempting to strengthen the A.B.C. alliance.

Deputy Rodriguez Groiero attacked Uruguay's membership during the debate on the paying of Uruguay's share of the League's upkeep. He said the nation must pay as a matter of honor, but that Uruguay's purpose joining the League was removed by the retirement of several American nations.

He demanded the Foreign Minister inform the Chamber what benefits the country received through membership.

Deputy Bachini said he did not believe in the League either as a factor in uniting the nations of the world or as a force to prevent war among its members.

Senate and House Start Battle.

Discord Threatens to Keep Country at War With the Central Powers.

Knox Resolution is to be Scrapped in House, New One Framed.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright, Chicago Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Discord, characterized in some quarters as "petty jealousy" between the House and Senate, has reached such proportions that it not only threatens to keep the United States in a technical state of war with Germany for an indefinite period, but also jeopardizes the movement for naval disarmament which the Senate unanimously adopted Wednesday.

The Knox peace resolution was passed by the Senate after long and careful consideration of form and substance. In order to place the United States on a footing of peace with the other Allied nations at the earliest possible moment, the Senate sat far into the night to bring the measure to a vote. A month has elapsed since the measure was sent to the House. The House Foreign Affairs Committee has not yet held a meeting on the resolution, although it is planned that a meeting be held next week, and predictions have been made that the resolution may get before the House the following week.

TO SCRAP RESOLUTION.

Republican members of the committee, however, already have determined to scrap the Knox resolution. They declare they do not like the language of the measure. It specifically repeals the declaration of war against the Central Powers. They regard this as a repudiation of the war against Germany. In the place of the Knox resolution, they have agreed to substitute the resolution drafted by the chairman of the committee, Representative Porter of Pennsylvania, which simply declares the war at an end.

Senators, when they heard of this action, today were indignant at what they characterized as merely "a jealous trick" on the part of the House, and an "attempt to make an issue of the difference between tweedledee and tweedledum." They pointed out that any peace resolution, if effective, would automatically repeal the declaration of war, whether it specifically declared so or not. They traced the beginning of the friction to personal jealousy between Representative Porter and Senator Knox, both of whom come from Pittsburg.

Both sides already have gone to the President with their troubles. The President was understood to have given his approval to the Knox

Germans and Poles to Negotiate.

Meanwhile Strong Armies Face Each Other Ready for Conflict.

Council of Ambassadors Takes First Step to Solve the Problem.

BY L. C. WALTER.
[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

POLISH INSURGENT HEADQUARTERS, May 28.—German and insurgent plenipotentiaries are assembling to negotiate an armistice under the auspices of the inter-Allied commission at Oppeln. More than 54,000 German troops are known to be concentrated in front of the rebel forces.

Five distinct groups, the largest 20,000, are operating in the Leschnitz-Annaberg salient, according to information obtained by the insurgent intelligent service. At least 12,000 were rushed to the front from Landsberg, on the Polish border, south through Rosenberg and Lublinitz to the Kolonowska railway junction, where, during the last few days, the Germans attempted to split the insurgents' northern group by driving through the center of the right wing against the Polish border.

GERMANS ATTACK FLANK.

Nine thousand men is the estimated strength of the German forces which attacked the left flank of the Poles, beginning at Kolonowska to a point where it joins the Oder group. The bloodiest fighting occurred in this region after the Germans had launched a counter-offensive a week ago in an attempt to separate the insurgents of the northern and center groups. After two days' fighting the German salient here reached a ten-mile depth, with Gross-Strehlitz and Gleiwitz as objectives in the turning movement.

Two further concentrations, one estimated at 9000 bayonets, to control the front from Ratibor south to the Czecho-Slovakian border, facing the southern insurgent group, and the other force, about 4000, holding the sector between Ratibor and Cosel.

AIRPLANE DROPS BOMBS.

A German airplane dropped bombs over the insurgent lines in the Rosenberg and Annaberg sectors yesterday, the missiles exploding in villages just behind the front. The population of the towns were thrown into terror, but there were few casualties.

An airplane hovered for fifteen minutes over Beuthen, dropping appeals to the population to overthrow Korfanty, while another machine dropped pamphlets over

FEAR UTES ON WARPATH.

Killing Cattle Rustler May Cause Renewal of Indian Trouble in Utah.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SALT LAKE CITY, May 28.—Fear of an uprising of Ute Indians because of the death of an Indian in a fight with peace officers today was stated in a message received by the United States Marshal from George Adams, former member of the Utah Legislature from San Juan county.

The message read:

"One Indian was killed when County Attorney Keller and Sheriff Hyde attempted to arrest Utes for stealing cattle. Sheriff calls for help. Posse leaving from Monticello and Blanding. Wires cut between Bluff and Blanding."

Marshal Nebeker said he could not respond to the call for help as it was a State case. Gov. Charles R. Mabey is now on his way from the East and is expected to reach here this afternoon. His secretary, C. Lamar Nelson, said that he had advised the adjutant-general to get troops in readiness to await an order from the Governor.

Marshal Nebeker believes that the Utes are from the southern Ute reservation in Colorado who have crossed the Utah line.

It is feared according to the marshal that there might be a renewal of the trouble which occurred in the district six years ago, when there was considerable fighting between farmers and the Indians.

Marshal Nebeker said that the Indians were accused of cattle rustling when they resisted arrest. A fight developed with one Indian being killed, and other members of the gang escaping, according to the meager information.

SITUATION TENSE.

The situation at Bluff and Blanding is tense, according to a wire to the Federal authorities here. The settlers in that section have appealed for protection, fearing a repetition of the Indian war a few years ago.

In turn, authorities at San Juan appealed to Marshal Nebeker. The Mashal declared that the residents of the little town of Bluff are in a serious predicament if the Utes attack the town. The settlement, containing only a handful of families, is situated between two high bluffs which would provide the redskins an ideal place to secrete themselves and take pot shots at the residents of the little town below them.

OLD WAR'S HISTORY.

It was in 1915 that one of these Utes killed a Mexican in Colorado and then came across the line. He got in with the renegade bunch numbering 250 Utes, according to Nebeker. The Indian police either could do nothing or refused to do

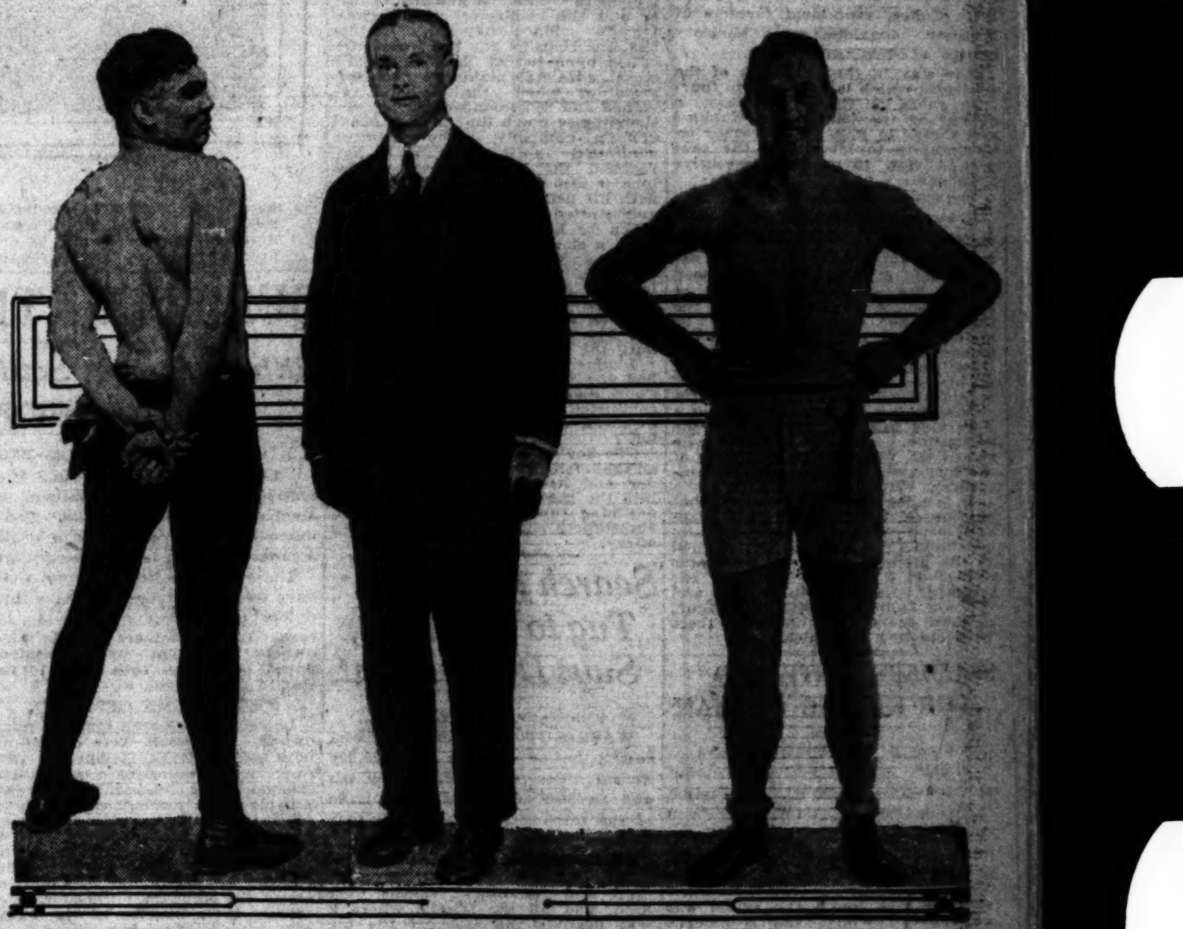
CARR SAYS FRENCHMAN DUE FOR SLOW MUSIC WITH NICE POSIES.

Dempsey Needs Only to Produce One Real Punch to Settle Opponent; Frenchman Trains in Secret While Jack Takes in the Coin.



Jack Dempsey. Tex Rickard, Who is promoting the fight. Georges Carpentier.

BY HARRY CARR.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

MT. VERNON (N. Y.) May 28.—Monsieur Georges Carpentier, from the gay capital which produced Napoleon and short skirts, has not as yet expressed his choice between cremation and a decent Christian burial. It looks to me, however, as though he had better make up his mind. He is due for one of the two when he mixes with our rough friend, Jack Dempsey, on July 2, in the fight for the championship of the world. It will be the Jeffries-Corbett fight all over again.

When they carried "Gentleman Jim" out of the ring, feet first, on that historic occasion his faithful and sorrowing seconds saw his lips moving and bent to catch the whisper which came in these words:

"He's too big and strong. You might as well fight a buffalo."

M. Carpentier is possibly not as well posted about buffaloes as Mr. Corbett, but his emotions are likely to be about the same on the evening of July 2.

Carpentier is training for the fight at the old Mathews farm at Manhasset, L. I. Bordering the county road is an old, rambling barn in which the French champion is doing his training. It's more secret than a Masonic lodge. When the folks stroll over from Manhasset village they can't even get on the front lawn, Carpentier even keeps the front gate padlocked. Ordinarily a training camp before a big fight is less private than the goldfish bowl that Irvin Cobb tells about. You snoop around and watch the gladiator taking his bath. On these occasions I have even been honored to the point of holding an extra towel for the great one. You watch him eat dinner and watch him box and sometimes it even falls to the lot of some fortunate and never-to-be-forgotten spectator to help gum the adhesive tape on the champion's hands.

DRUG STORE DOPE.

But all that the folks at Manhasset can find out about the Carpentier camp is by hanging around Doc Ormsby's drug store. Once in a while Edgar, the boy from the grocery store, is sent out to the camp with a package to deliver and he always loyally reports to the amen corner in the drug store.

"Feller out there named Gus," reported Edgar, "think his whole name's Gus Wilson. This guy seems to run the hull darn works. I just went out with a package and I seen Carpenteer smoking a cigarette; he takes two puffs and then Gus takes the pill right out of his mouth and throws it down on the ground and he says to him, two puffs is all you get."

Edgar also reported that he found a window of the old barn he could peek through right into the room where the Frenchman trains. The day following this important discovery by Edgar, M. Carpentier made formal application to the town clerk for a permit to carry a revolver. Under the circumstances, Edgar's window has not proved to be popular.

HE DOES THE "EXCITE."

The newspaper men have not been admitted to a much closer intimacy than the folks at Manhasset. Once or twice a week, however, they have regular press days, at which the details of the Carpentier menage are on exhibition. On these occasions, a strained formality of politeness obtains. Carpentier's manager is a little bubbling Frenchman named Francois Descamps, who was himself a fighter in Paris. M. Descamps seems normally to be always either in a state of excitement or grief. The last time the newspaper men were permitted to enter the training camp Descamps rushed at them with his shoulders shrugging up and down like the valves of an aeroplane engine and both arms flying like a loose piston rod.

"What for you say am excite?" he demanded of one recreant scribe, who had written of him as having an excitable disposition. When the situation was explained to him he asked the extremely logical question, "Well, if I am not to get excite for Georges, then who does get excite for Georges?" The answer was quite as logical, "Why not let George do it."

FRENCH CHEF, TOO.

In addition to Descamps, there is Marcel Marcot, the French chef whom Carpentier brought from Paris to give him the feed he is used to now that he is here. Marcel is desolated because Georges will not eat the usual orderly and respectable petite dejeuner of the French. He has fallen into the habit of eating an American breakfast, the proportions of which appall M. Marcel. Instead of the delicate array of toast and coffee befitting a French breakfast, Carpentier now demands four or five eggs, fruit and coffee.

"Sacre," shrieks M. Marcel, "it is not a proper dejeuner, it is a dinner."

For luncheon the Frenchman has another dinner and in the evening another dinner ending with ice cream Marcot. Just before going to bed Carpentier comes around to the kitchen and asks plaintively if there isn't anything to eat.

"But," comments M. Marcel, "when he go into see ring wit M. Mons. Dempsey he shall be ver strong man."

SLAM THE COOK.

In addition to preparing all this food M. Marcel also acts as sparring partner for Carpentier on the side. This system has its advantages. I have known many cooks upon whom I would like to have handed a bat in the eye after the meal.

Carpentier is training as Jim Corbett used to train for his fights, all nerves and fussiness. It seems to rattle him to have the fans looking on at any of his impromptu performances. Descamps almost weeps at the insistence of the fight fans to see him in the act. "What for they should see him box. He is not to fight until July 2, then let them see." So he performs his training screened from the public gaze except on two days a week, when with Gallic resignation they open the doors and make a regular show of it. In the middle of the barn, Descamps has rigged up a regulation fight ring. In it he has a punching bag, a rowing machine, a lot of pulley weights and a bag filled with corn. This corn bag has been painted with grotesque human features, which monsieur gayly mauls. Its purpose is to toughen his hands and strengthen his wrists. In the presence of awed spectators Carpentier

HOUSE MAY KILL BORAH AMENDMENT.

Bitter-Enders in Senate Are Worried; Administration is Keeping Quiet.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, May 28.—While there is some fear on the part of the bitter-enders in the Senate that the House may cripple still further the Borah disarmament amendment to the naval bill there is every reason to believe that in whatever form it finally reaches the Chief Executive the President will take no action under the amendment.

While for obvious reasons there is no statement from the White House on this subject, it may be said on the highest authority that there will be no discussion of disarmament except in the Supreme Council, and upon recommendation of that body some disarmament progress may be made.

If there is no such recommendation any step toward disarmament is regarded as futile.

While no expression can be secured from the administration, it is known that it regards the amendment as harmless, and it is looked upon with the tolerance of an administration which does not want to start a fight.

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) May 28.—James M. By this development, he said, millions of men have been forced to live in comparative mental and physical idleness.

"Work, all-conquering work—it is of that, not talk, that the world has supreme need," he said.

ASK GOVERNOR TO SHOW MERCY.

Delegation of Farmers Pleads for Clemency.

Men Convicted of Burglary Have Many Friends.

Right to Appeal is Refused by the Courts.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, May 28.—A large delegation of farmers, business and professional men of Stanislaus county waited upon Gov. Stephens today and requested that he ask the Third District Court of Appeals to withhold sending down the remittiture in the case of J. R. Hopkins and John Coffee, prominent farmers of Modesto, convicted on a burglary charge of stealing chickens.

The stay in the execution of the sentence, which is from one to fourteen years in the penitentiary, is sought by the friends of Hopkins and Coffee to give the Governor an opportunity to investigate the case with a view to granting executive clemency.

CONVICTIONS UPHELD.

Conviction of the defendants was upheld by the Third District Court, and the Supreme Court recently denied their petition for an appeal. Unless the Governor interferes or the Appellate Court adheres to the request, the remittiture will be handed down next Tuesday and the defendants will go to prison.

Petitions containing the names of about a thousand residents of Stanislaus county urging executive clemency for Hopkins and Coffee were filed with the Governor by the delegation. Among those who signed the petitions are members of the jury and T. B. Michael, the complaining witness.

It is alleged in the petitions that Hopkins and Coffee and their wives and three other persons were on an automobile ride at night and stopped at the Michael ranch to pick some apples on a farm. While in the orchard, it is declared, Michael and his son came out with a shotgun, covered them and charged them with stealing his chickens.

MAN KNIFED OVER WIFE; YOUTH HELD.

Boy Accused of Slashing Jealous Spouse Following El Centro-Street Attack.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

EL CENTRO, May 28.—James Cope Hensley, 16-year-old schoolboy, is in the County Jail and William Alexander, fruit store proprietor, is in the hospital with a severe wound in his side, said to have been inflicted by the boy with a pocket knife after what the police say was a quarrel precipitated by the jealousy of Alexander, who believed the boy was paying too much attention to his wife.

Prior to Mrs. Alexander's marriage she and the boy's family were friends in Oklahoma and her brother and the youngster were close friends. Since they came to this city, the Hensley boy has frequently called upon her at her husband's store. He was making such a call yesterday when the husband returned and reprimanded the boy for spending so much time in Mrs. Alexander's company. The argument continued until man and boy reached the sidewalk, where the man is said to have struck the boy with his fist. The lad broke away and started to run, but was overtaken by his adversary. He then drew a small pocket knife, it is asserted, and slashed Alexander across the right side. The blade passed between two ribs, and is believed to have pierced Alexander's lung. He was taken to the hospital and the boy was detained by witnesses until the arrival of the police.

Justice Griffin, this morning, certified the boy's case to the Juvenile Court and an investigation is being conducted by Probation Officer Swanson and Dep. Dist.-Atty. Bitler.

The boy denies that anything other than friendship for Mrs. Alexander and her brother ever entered into the case, but he refuses to say anything further regarding the circumstances surrounding the cutting affray.

Search for Lost Tug to Continue, Says Department.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 28.—A search that swept more than 300,000 square miles of the Pacific by sea and air has ended without a trace of the missing naval tug Conestoga being found.

Several cruisers, thirty-six destroyers and several squadrons of aircraft and auxiliary vessels were used, and all the islands where it was possible the crew of the tug might be were examined, the Navy Department's message today declared.

The department still hopes that the crew will be found alive, and search will be continued.

ULSTER :: ARMED :: FOR :: ELECTION :: BATTLE.

Volunteers Prepared Well to Keep Down Fighting at Polls.

On the eve of the elections in Ireland, the first to be held under the new system of proportional representation, Ulster looked like a region in the war zone. Police and military swarmed everywhere and the volunteers were continually at drill. Armored cars were stationed in many quarters. The fact that extra precautions were taken probably accounts for the quietness that prevailed.

QUIBBLING TIRES PREMIER.

Either Strike Settlement or Legislation, Lloyd George Tells Miners.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, May 28.—Prime Minister Lloyd George again met the executive committee of the miners' union this morning in an effort to find a solution of the coal strike. The conference was not productive of any immediate progress toward a settlement, but the miners' representatives arranged to meet in their headquarters to discuss the Premier's statement.

The Prime Minister is reported to have told the miners' delegates that unless an agreement could be reached by the miners and the mine owners, legislation woud be introduced to compel both sides to resort to arbitration.

PROPOSITION OFFERED.

Later Lloyd George met the mine owners. Proposals were handed to both parties for a temporary arrangement leading to a permanent scheme. The temporary proposals provide for a gradual scaling down of wages until they reach an economic level, wrich the industry is capable of sustaining, based on the grant of £10,000,000 from the Exchequer and surrender by the owners of the standard profits for three months in the districts in which government assistance is required.

The government grant, however, will not be given until arrangements for continuing the agreement have been arrived at between the contending parties.

ONE OF THREE METHODS.

With regard to a permanent scheme, it is pointed out that if the parties are unable to agree on terms for a continuous period, the matter must be decided by one of three methods:

(1.) A national wages board to be composed of an equal number of owners and miners shall be established under a neutral chairman.

(2.) A tribunal of three persons shall be established to decide the matters at issue.

(3.) The questions in dispute shall be referred to a single arbitration decision of a body or person selected and shall be binding on both parties for a year thereafter, subject to three months' notice by either side.

POPULISM WAVE WARNING.

Economists Say Danger Can be Forestalled by Currency Stabilization.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Warning that a wave of populism is destined to sweep over the Middle West was given by economists here today before the newly organised Stable Money League. The danger, they said, could be forestalled by a proper stabilization of the currency, and a committee was appointed to report a plan for stabilization.

"The next eighteen months will witness a severe crisis with dangers of another rise of populism on the forms, such as this country experienced in the '70's, unless sound currency is instituted," declared H. A. Wallace, editor of Wallace's farmer, and son of the Secretary of Agriculture.

FARMER—FERTILE SOIL.

"The farmer at the present time, and probably for several years in the future will furnish a fertile sail in which new ideas of all kinds may grow. Last year the average renter in the United States, after paying his rent, had nothing left as a result of his labor, the return averaging not over 5 cents an hour. I am making this statement advisedly as the result of a rather careful statistical investigation and not merely as the emotional reaction from observation of specific instances. Cash rents for the coming year have been reduced perhaps 70 per cent of what they were last year; but the prospective prices, judging from the grain futures in Chicago and the cotton futures at New York, are such that with merely average weather, the average tenant of the United States will be very fortunate indeed to realize as much as 10 cents an hour for his labor."

WAR INFLATION OVER.

Mr. Wallace pointed out that while the war-time prosperity period has carried many farmers through the last year, it cannot carry them through another year. As a result the long suffering farmers are "searching valiantly for economic nostrums."

Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale University replied to criticisms of his plan for stabilizing the dollar, made by a committee from the American Bankers' Association. He found that some of the bankers, while they recognized the evil, preferred to do nothing rather than stir up the question. On the other hand, a great many bankers recognized the evil of unstable money and believe that a healthy agitation could bring about the remedy.

"It is the old question of progress vs. standpatism," said Prof Fisher.

NEW GOVERNMENT TO RULE IN VLADIVOSTOK.

CITY OCCUPIED BY TROOPS FORMERLY COMMANDED BY KAPPELL.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

TOKIO, May 28.—The latest press dispatches from Vladivostok connection with the occupation of that city Thursday morning by troops formerly under command of the late Gen. Kappell, state that a new Pre-Amur government has been formed, and that M. Merkudoff, chairman of the non-Socialist organization has been nominated for president.

The convocation of a constituent assembly for the Pre-Amur region also is announced in this advice.

Leaflets have been found in the streets of Vladivostok, demanding the massacre of Jews, according to the advices, which add that Medviedeff, former Premier of the revolutionary government in Vladivostok, has been arrested.

ALLIED AGREEMENTS ON FINANCES URGED.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LISBON, May 28.—Recommendations that governments throughout the world take steps for financial readjustment to include nonissuance of paper currency not required for commercial purposes, immediate means of credit to German debtors and equitable settlement of exchange questions were made in resolutions adopted yesterday by the International Industrial Conference.

An understanding among the Allies on loans, reductions of debts due them and extensions of time also was urged.

PICTURE BRIDE SHOT; POLICE SEEKING JAP.

HUSBAND CHARGED WITH WOUNDING WIFE, WHO HAD LEFT HIM.

CHICO, May 28.—S. Ato, a Japanese, still was at large today, following the shooting last night of his picture bride of a year, Mrs. Mari Ato, who lies in a serious condition at a local hospital.

Ato, according to H. Incuye, secretary of the Japanese Association here, entered the association rooms, where his wife had taken rooms after leaving him, and shot her, the bullet penetrating her head and inflicting a wound which caused paralysis.

Ato and his wife were married in April, 1920, according to Incuye, who said the bride came from Japan, but demurred to the ceremony after her arrival. He said she consented to a "trial marriage."

The couple were railroad car clearners. It was erroneously reported last night that Ato had been shot and killed by his wife.

WIRE MEN SENTENCED IN FRAUD CONSPIRACY.

L. D. Baker and Hugh M. Cawley, formerly telegraph operators for the Western Union, who were accused of criminal conspiracy to defraud the company out of money received for messages, were sentenced yesterday by Judge Willis to six months at hard labor on the county roads. A demurrer to the first complaint against them was sustained by the court. Yesterday the prosecution filed an amended complaint and the two defendants pleaded guilty to criminal conspiracy, a misdemeanor.

PRINCESSES ARE ABUSED.

BERLIN, May 28.—How Korfanty's insurgents captured the castle of the Duke of Ratibor and forced the Princesses Ratibor to serve as waitress and drink to insurgents' toasts, was told by a British officer, member of the plebiscite police, who arrived in Berlin today. The Britisher was especially angry because the Ratibor family belongs to the English kingly line.

"The insurgents who captured Rauden Castle, home of the Ratibor family," said the Britisher, "demanded food. Then they ransacked the cellars, finding many cases of champagne. After a few drinks the officers demanded that the Duchess wait on the table. The Duchess refused and the two princesses agreed to wait on the table, providing their mother was spared. The insurgent agreed and compelled them to completely disrobe.

"Then the princesses were forced to join the insurgents in drinking toasts. The food was served on dishes bearing the Stuart royal arms which was inherited from an ancestor, who was Queen of Bohemia, daughter of King James of England. Finally the princesses were allowed to return to their mother."

MAY SOLVE PROBLEM.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, May 28.—The first official step towards a solution of the Upper Silesian problem was taken at a special session of the Council of Ambassadors this morning, when that body instructed the plebiscite commission at Oppeln to make unanimous proposals for splitting the disputed territory into three parts, one to be administered and occupied militarily by Germany, another by Poland, and the third to be made into a neutral zone under an Allied commission.

The action of Paul Cambon, the French member of the ambassador's council, in agreeing to the scheme, marks the beginning of French acceptance of a compromise plan which, when presented several weeks ago by the British and supported by the Italians, they rejected.

The Ambassadors met following a telegram from Col. Percival, the British member of the inter-Allied plebiscite commission, and Gen. De Marisini, the Italian member. Gen. Lerond, the French representative added a codicil explaining that he was not able to concur because the French government had previously rejected a similar offer.

The telegram announced that the sole solution of the problem could only be reached through the creation of three zones, permitting the Germans and Poles to occupy regions where they had received majorities and permitting the Allies to concentrate policing troops in the third disputed region in sufficient numbers to maintain order in the entire region until the question was solved.

The fact that M. Cambon concurred in the instructions sent to Oppeln gives rise to a belief that Gen. Lerond must have indorsed his Italian and British colleagues' proposals, though certain quarters insist he would rather have resigned than submit to such a course.

The success of the Anglo-Italian project after it had been repeatedly rejected by the French is taken to mean that Quai d'Orsay came to the conclusion that the United States backed the independent zone plan, especially since Ambassador Wallace voted in favor of it this morning.

It is expected the status of Upper Silesia will be left thus until the Supreme Council meets at Boulogne in an attempt to solve the problem.

GERMANS CONTINUE WARFARE

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, May 28.—M. Briand has presented a note to the British Foreign Office, pointing out that the Germans are continuing operations in Upper Silesia, and suggesting that the plebiscite question await the restoration of order with the arrival of British effectives.

FIFTY DRY OFFICERS DUE FOR GRIDDLE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, May 28.—Fifty prohibition agents in four States are involved in evidence which will be presented to the Federal grand jury here next week, investigators announced today. Internal revenue operatives for several weeks have investigated prohibition enforcement agents in Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and Michigan.

Organized grafting among the officers by which saloonkeepers were systematically "shaken down" was uncovered.

The evidence has been turned over to Dist.-Atty. Clyne, by Col. A. C. Emshaw, in charge of the investigation.

PRETTY POSIES FOR SOMEBODY.

Carr Thinks Carpentier Will be Recipient.

Jack Commits Considerable Mayhem Daily.

Frenchman in Nice Form; But One Punch Needed.

fusses around with his machinery. Also he shadow boxes. For the uninitiated it should be explained that when one shadow boxes, one punches and slams and beats up an imaginary opponent. Carpentier turns shadow boxing into a little drama. His face is lit with the viciousness of the attack, with the glow of combat and with the triumph of victory in turn.

SHADOW BOXING SNAPPY.

If you can say that a man is beautiful, then Carpentier is beautiful at his shadow boxing. His face and body or more Greek than French. He has the slim waist, the broad symmetrical shoulders and the fine torso of the old Greek statues, his muscles are long and like ribbons of steel. His blows snap to their target like rubber elastic bands. He belongs to the same species as Kid McCoy, Jim Corbett and Bombardier Wells. Corbett beat old John L. Sullivan by marvelous footwork. It is possible that Carpentier may bring about a similar coup. During his exhibition for the newspaper men M. Georges ordinarily entered and left the ring by jumping over the high ring ropes. The ropes of a fighting ring come to the arm pits of an ordinary-sized man. Carpentier easily vaulted these ropes from a standing position without a preliminary run.

When Carpentier arrived from Paris, his skin looked gray and pasty. With his week or so of exercise he has gained the pink satin look of a trained athlete. Until now the Frenchman has done very little boxing and this little is strict seclusion. Two famous old negro fighters are his counsellors and his boxing partners; Joe Jeanette and Sam McVey.

OLD SAM'S HISTORY.

Old Sam started in the sugar beet fields of Oxnard and made his way to Paris, where he joined a troup of boxers, giving exhibitions in the leagues of France. The other two boxers in the troup were Francois Descamps and a little peaked-faced youngster named Georges Carpentier. The colored boy from the California beet fields used to teach the little Frenchman what he knew about blows. He taught him to whip his right around in a hook that landed like the kick of a Missouri mule. Now, a worn out, old fighter, Sam is back to put the finishing touches on the education of his protege and to help make him champion of the world. Sam boxed with him in private the other day.

When he came out of the farmyard gate he talked to the newspapermen about it and he said he was a little bit of a shaver when he knew him in France. He didn't know a thing about boxing, but how that boy could hit. His footwork is what is going to puzzle Dempsey. I figure it will be a case of which one hits the first good lick. Says Sam:

"HE SURE CAN SOCK."

"Dempsey, he sure can sock, but he always hits flat-footed and has to set himself. Carpentier ain't going to give him no time for that. He will be moving too fast. Dempsey is figgerin' to punch the boy in the stomach, but he will have a hard time to do that when he sees the crouch in which Carpentier fights. He will be all bent over like Jeffries."

Jeanette, the other colored veteran, drives up to the training quarters every day in his own car and takes a hand. Jeanette has made a lot of money by fighting battle after battle with Sam Langford, and is one of the smartest boxers ever in the ring. I should say that Carpentier's corner will, at least, be long in the matter of brains when the fatal day comes.

EVERYTHING'S OPEN.

Dempsey is training at an old naval air base near Atlantic City. There are two ugly old frame buildings backed up against the back wash of the bay. They house the champion and his training retinue. In contrast with the secrecy of the Carpentier quarters everything is open around Dempsey's place. There are a lot of yapping dogs and men, sweaters and bottles of rubbing lotion and trainers' towels. You are likely to find a bum from the Bowery or the Attorney-General of the United States in the group.

Dempsey is one of these fighters with a slow pulse like Bat Nelson and Ad Wolgast. He hasn't any more nerves than a deep sea clam. I remember the day that Wolgast fought Joe Rivers for his lightweight title, a day that was to make or break his fortune. I went in to see him just before the fight. He was asleep. Somebody woke him up and he asked drowsily: "How much money is there in gallery by now?" When they told him he dropped back saying sleepily: "That's all I wanted to know."

There's a curious thing about these calm, pugnacious scrappy, bullet-headed boys of that type, they love to read. I never knew one who did not. And they always have such a dreadful struggle doing it. And that's Dempsey. He found a good-sized library in the place, the kind of books that would appeal to soldiers. He has manfully tackled the job of wading through them all. With deadly set determination he had laid out for himself the job of reading all the books in the shelves and he'll do it if Carpentier licks him or not. To tell the truth, Jack doesn't seem to have the faintest interest in Carpentier. Over at the other camp the Frenchman talks all the time of Dempsey.

If you ask Dempsey about the fight, all he ever says is, "Yep, I guess he's a good tough feller all right," and goes back to his books again or his dogs. Dempsey is a little taller than Carpentier, and was eighteen pounds heavier. He hits a blow that would kill an ordinary man. Nobody ever got the full force of it and displayed any further interest in the procedings. Jim Flynn, the old fighter, tells me that Dempsey's weakness is that he gets tired after about eight or ten rounds.

ONE PUNCH—SLEEP.

Carpentier's training which includes hurdle running and walking and other exercises for the wind indicates that he relies upon this; that he intends to run Dempsey to death and then knock him out. The trouble with this theory is that Jack only has to land one of those awful punches to end the drama. With the idea of getting himself accustomed to have one of these brick skyscrapers fall into the middle of his tumtum, Carpentier has brought from France a giant heavyweight named Journee, who roughs with him. Of course, fighting with Journee is about as much like fighting Dempsey as meeting a piano is like getting hit with a ten-inch T.N.T. shell.

There is nothing secret about Dempsey's boxing and nothing subtle out there. He boxes with anybody who is sufficiently tired of life to risk it, and anybody is welcome to look on who has the price. Dempsey and his manager, Jack Kearns, are frankly out for the dough. They will probably make $25,000 out of the tickets they sell to the training camp, and another $25,000 out of the films that have been taken. Whichever way this fight comes out, it will make both Dempsey and the Frenchman rich. Considering the rate of money exchange Carpentier will be a Parisian millionaire for the rest of his life and his children's children will rejoice at the might of grandpa's fist.

It must be a swell job being one of Jack's training partners. "Somehow I just can't make myself fight easy," the champ explains, "I intend to make it light and nice but when I get in the ring with one of these guys I just get started, that's all."

Douglas Fairbanks, friend Bull Montana, our good old roughneck friend with a chawed ear and a staggering appetite for spaghetti, has so far survived with Jack Renault, the Canadian heavyweight, and a few others.

Jack Clifford, the Brooklyn heavyweight, tried it for a few days but the last time they managed to bring him to with smelling salts, he packed up his duds and departed on the trolley, flinging back over his shoulder the crushing remark, "I ain't going to be assassinated every day for no forty-five a week."

Other ambitious young sluggers, however, have taken his place. While the two old negro fighters at Manhasset are giving advice to the Frenchman and polishing his technique, Jack is gaily beating up training partners as they come, then back to his frightful struggle with his books and his dogs. It is to be a fight between a staghound and a bull terrier.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Detective Kirk entered a second-hand clothing shop early today. He was trailing two burglar suspects.

"I haven't seen a soul come in," the proprietor explained, offering to sell the detective one of the displayed suits.

The detective glanced at half a dozen or more clothing dummies, started out, wheeled around with revolver in hand and exclaimed:

"Watch me make some buttonholes in the clothes on the dummies."

Two of the "dummies" suddenly came to life and to jail.

RED REGIME IS FAILURE

So British State in Report.

Collapse Foreseen if Outside Capital Does Not Help the Situation.

Tendency Toward Control of State Increasing; Means of Travel Necessary.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Copyright, Chicago Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Russia is helpless and ruined under the Bolshevik economic and political experiment. The policies inaugurated by Nikolai Lenine, the soviet Premier, have collapsed, and there is no possibility of economic regeneration in Russia without the assistance of outside help from capitalist countries. This is stated in a report made by a British official committee appointed to collect information on the Russian situation.

This information is brought together in a British White paper, a copy of which reached Washington today, containing the British official report, which declared that "the power of officialdom in Russia has developed on a scale to which there is no parallel, and represents an attempt to control completely the conditions of work and leisure, of food and drink, of education and amusement, of travel, and even of the home life of every individual in a nation, whose population even now exceeds 120,000,000. The report added that recent evidence shows that the tendency towards state control is increasing rather than diminishing.

CONCLUSIONS REACHED.

The report deals with the economic and political situation in Russia. The final conclusions reached by the committee are given as follows:

"(1.) That a complete renunciation by the soviet government, by the Russian Communist party, and by the Third or Communist Internationale, of propaganda directed towards the destruction of the political and economic order existing in other countries, is the fundamental premise, without the acceptance of which there can be no question of capitalist aid in the economic reconstruction of Russia.

"(2.) That the possibility of extending credit to Russia on a scale in any way commensurate with her minimum needs will be dependent upon the faithful observation of the above condition.

"(3.) That the co-operation of the peasantry is indispensable to the economic reconstruction of Russia.

"(4.) That the settlement of the agrarian question on a basis which will provide inducements for agricultural production, now lacking, is essential to the provision of adequate supplies of food for the industrial workers in the towns.

TRANSPORTATION NEEDED.

"(5.) That the restoration of rail and river transport is necessary if such food supplies are to be conveyed with speed and regularity to the industrial areas of Russia.

"(6.) That the state of administrative incompetence and corruption into which the departments of the soviet government have fallen militates against the proper distribution of available supplies among the population, and must be remedied if the Russian worker is to be restored to the standard of health and strength necessary to re-establish the diminished productivity of his labor.

"(7.) That if the extraordinary commissions continue to exercise their present irresponsible powers, foreigners whose services in Russia may be necessary to execute contracts between the soviet government and foreign capitalists will be deprived of those guarantees of freedom and protection which are accorded to foreigners in other civilized countries, and this will destroy the possibility of any benefits accruing to the soviet government from such agreements."

ECONOMIC ISOLATION.

"It would appear, therefore, that the soviet government must decide whether they are going to maintain a policy of political repression at home and aggressive Bolshevist propaganda abroad, which will inevitably, whatever international treaties they may make, lead in practice to a continuance of their present economic isolation, or whether they will accept and honestly carry out the fundamental condition which can alone obtain from them the outside aid they so urgently need.

"If they decide to maintain the campaign for violent destruction of capitalism in other countries and the policy of ruthless repression, which makes it impossible for foreigners to live and to do business in Russia, then Russia will be of necessity left to her own resources. Then will the future show whether or not the combined effect upon the worker of persuasion as to the merits of Communism and of persuasion by payment for work done with the shadow of imprisonment and the bayonet ever present can restore the old productive power of Russia within the short time available for the experiment.

"If it does not, Trotzky, himself, admits that the Russian Socialist Society is on the way to ruin, however, it may twist and turn, and with the conclusion of Trotzky we agree.

TIME TOO SHORT.

"It is maintained by the Bolshevists that the soviet government has existed too short a time for considered judgment to be passed upon its success or failure, and that during the greater part of this period they have been prevented from laying the foundations of economic reconstruction owing to the civil war and the foreign intervention, which accompanied it.

"We are prepared to agree that their time has been short and their opportunities restricted. We doubt, however, whether so much human misery as has existed in Russia during the last three years has ever been the lot of any people within so short a time in the history of the modern world. While we are prepared to admit that the European war, the events following the first revolution, the civil war and intervention are contributing factors in causing the misery, it is impossible to disassociate the soviet government from a large measure of responsibility for the recent suffering of the Russian people."

NEWS AT THE STATE CAPITAL.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SACRAMENTO, May 27.—With the bill signing period nearing a close, Gov. Stephens and his household are preparing to pack their grips for Los Angeles, where they will spend five or six weeks during the summer. The Governor expects to make his getaway from the capital about June 15.

The Governor's visit to Los Angeles will be of particular interest to the residents of that city, and, in fact, the entire southern section of the State, for it is understood he will endeavor to alibi why legislative reapportionment was not accomplished at the last session of the Legislature in accordance with the constitution.

Incidentally, there is considerable speculation around the capital as to the time the Governor is likely to call the special session of the Legislature to consider the reapportionment problem. If Congress allots the new representative to which California is entitled, according to the 1920 census, before the middle of summer, the session probably will be called for the early fall. Otherwise, the session most likely will be held in November or possibly January.

The drive to have the Governor include in his call for a special session on reapportionment other legislative matters already is under way. The California League of Municipalities has requested Stephens to have the Johnson hydro-electric power bill, which provides for municipal ownership of public utility projects, considered at the session, and Assemblyman Chester Kline of Riverside county wants automobile legislation considered.

There is little likelihood the Governor will grant these or similar requests. A few days ago he told a group of representatives of the municipalities league that if conflicting subjects were considered at the special session on reapportionment the main issue might be defeated.

Public utilities publicly owned or privately owned?

This, according to delegates to the California League of Municipalities convention held here, will be the issue in the 1922 gubernatorial campaign.

Mayor Horace Porter of Riverside in emphasizing the so-called issue said he had informed Gov. Stephens during a private interview that hereafter "Governors and legislators will be elected on the proposition of whether they favor municipal ownership of public utilities."

California's wave of crime is due for a big slump in the next few weeks, according to Clarence S. Morrill, superintendent of the State Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation.

This State, explains Morrill, is the winter headquarters for crooks of all kinds, and with the approach of the summer months, he says, they make a general exodus for the large eastern centers.

"A careful check of the reports made of operations of criminals proves this fact," says Morrill. "We can tell almost to the date when certain of our old friends will again appear in our midst. This we have learned to do by keeping tab on the way they operate."

Counties of California are authorized to pass ordinances prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors under section 4041 of the Political Code. This is according to an opinion rendered by Atty.-Gen. Webb to George H. Moore, District Attorney of San Benito county. Moore asked for the opinion to clear up a situation in that county arising from the passage of a dry ordinance.

Atty.-Gen. Webb ruled in an opinion to G. H. Hecke, director of the State Department of Agriculture, that the department is not authorized under the fruit and vegetable standardization law to prevent the shipment East of pears or other fruits showing visible evidences of arsenical spray. Webb says that the spray residue does not constitute a defect in the fruit.

In an opinion to M. D. Lack, secretary of the State Board of Equalization, Atty.-Gen. Webb ruled that a leasehold interest in government oil lands is assessible as real estate to the owner of interest. He says collection of taxes thereon is enforcible by sale of the leasehold interest if no personal property can be obtained.

WOMAN MAKES NOTES AT MURDER HEARING.

MRS. LEVEE OF LOS ANGELES IS HELD IN NEW ORLEANS FOR KILLING HUSBAND.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW ORLEANS, May 28.—Mrs. Frederick R. Levee of Los Angeles, accused of shooting and killing her husband, an attorney, was held for trial by a jury in the Criminal District Court without the benefit of bail after she had been given a preliminary trial by Judge Dowling in the First City Criminal Court today. James Wilkinson and Van Buren Harris, her lawyers, protested against the hearing, but the District Attorney said he wanted it in order to get the statements of several witnesses to the shooting who might not be able to remain in town.

The coolest woman in the courtroom was Mrs. Levee. She was dressed in business attire. She had a notebook and took down everything that was said. It was the first time in the history of local courts that a defendant had ever made notes at a trial.

S. B. Lemle, Corp. Michael Buckley, L. J. Leblanc and Herbert F. Darnell, a student, all testified that Mrs. Levee had shot her husband as he turned his back on her and started to walk away. She did not wince as they recounted how she fired at the man. She seemed stolid and even bold. Mrs. Levee says she is satisfied to wait in jail until she is tried.

GOVERNOR HONORS MISSOURI REQUEST.

TWICE-TRIED MAN TO BE RETURNED FOR THIRD MURDER TRIAL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, May 28.—Gov. Stephens today honored the request of Gov. Hyde of Missouri for the extradition from Escondido, San Diego county, of Charley Blackburn, charged with first-degree murder.

The crime for which Blackburn twice was tried was the alleged murder of Jasper Francis, a wealthy bachelor of Camden county, Mo., on Nov. 10, 1915. Blackburn was alleged to have beaten and shot Francis. He was tried twice and each time the jury disagreed as the evidence was said to be largely circumstantial. He fled after his second trial while his bonds were temporarily exonerated.

It is alleged that after Francis's death, Blackburn attempted to make use of papers conveying the property belonging to the dead man.

RUMANIANS WORRIED OVER TROOP REPORT.

RUSSIAN MINISTER DENIES RED ARMIES ARE MASSED AT BORDERS.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, May 28.—The Rumanian government is said to be anxious concerning the concentration of about thirty Russion soviet divisions southwest of Kiev, according to dispatches received by he French Foreign Office.

RIGA, May 28.—M. Tchitcher, Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, has sent to Riga a general denial of reports that there has been concentration of soviet troops at various border points. Denial also is given to reports of insurrection in Tambov and Kursk provinces and activities of "green armies" in the governments of Petrograd, Pskov and Novgorod. All these reports, Tchitcherin declares, are pure inventions.

STATE HAS CHANCE TO CONVICT WOMAN.

"KISSING BLONDE" AND MONTE CARLO OWNER IN CHICAGO TO TESTIFY.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, May 28.—Belief that the State had more than an even chance to convict Mrs. Cora Isabella Orthwein of the slaying of Herbert P. Ziegler, was expressed today by Asst. Prosecutor Heath, following statements made by the "kissing blonde" and John (Jack) Barry, reputed owner of Chicago's million dollar "Monte Carlo."

Barry told how Ziegler met and became interested in Mrs. Charlotte Lewinsky, the "kissing blonde," finally becoming so infatuated he wished to break with Mrs. Orthwein. He said Mrs. Ziegler often appeared worried because of Ziegler's aenions o he blonde. Barry indicated Ziegler had "cut him out" in the rivalry for Mrs. Lewinsky's attentions. Both Barry and Mrs. Lewinsky will appear as witnesses when the case goes to trial Tuesday morning.

Barney Lewinsky, husband of the blonde, began suit for divorce during the day.

WILL SHIP WOOL EAST BY WATER.

SPOKANE (Wash.) May 28.—Most of the wool in the Pacific Northwest this year will be shipped East via the Panama Canal because of high railroad rates, according to A. C. Balch, prominent sheep man, at a meeting of the Spokane Stockmen's Club today.

"In shipping to Boston," it is much cheaper to send the wool by rail from Inland Empire points to the Pacific Coast and then ship by water," Mr. Balch stated. "One sheep-raising firm has shipped all its wool to Boston by water this year and another expects to do so. There is little difference in time of transit."

SOUTHARD MARRIAGE IN HAWAII DELAYED.

NAVY MAN IS UNABLE TO PRODUCE DIVORCE PAPER FROM INDIANA.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

HONOLULU (T. H.) May 28.—Paul Vincent Southard, Navy petty officer, was unable today to fulfill his announced intention of remarying his wife, held here in connection with the death of her fourth husband, Edward Meyer, in Idaho.

Southard planned the remarriage in order to remove all possible doubt of the legality of his marriage to her in Los Angeles, but he was refused a license to remarry because he could not produce the decree of divorce which he said was granted him in Indiana from his first wife last October. His former wife, he said, lives in Anderson, Ind.

Doubt was cast by Southard on the legality of his marriage to the woman held here because the ceremony was performed less than one year after his divorce in Indiana.

Mrs. Southard leaves here for the mainland June 1, according to present arrangements, in charge of V. H. Ormsby and Mrs. Ormsby, deputy sheriffs of Twin Falls, Idaho, who came here to effect her extradition.

George K. French, Honolulu attorney, received a cablegram today from W. P. Guthrie and Homer Mills, attorneys of Twin Falls, saying they had been retained by Mrs. Southard's parents to defend her. The cablegram requested that Mr. French call on Mrs. Southard.

HINDU SHOT DOWN.

Mexicans Steal Wife, Sister-in-Law of Border Rancher.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CALEXICO, May 28.—M. Sharef, a Hindu farmer residing west of this city, was shot and perhaps fatally injured and Diwan Singh's wife and sister-in-law and most of his household effects were stolen late yesterday by three unidentified Mexicans, who are believed to have been relatives of the girls and who were opposed to their living with the Hindus. The raiding party escaped across the line.

The girls told the Hindu they had been mistreated by their parents and appealed to him for help about two weeks ago. After he had sheltered them for a few days he and the elder girl, Clara Moreno, 18 years of age, were married at San Diego. They have since lived with him.

When the Mexicans had almost stripped the small house, Sharef appeared to borrow some tools. The guard shot him down. The trio, with women and their loot in the machine, sped across the Mexican boundary.

The Moreno family, of which the girls are members, is one of the best known in the local Mexican colony, having made Calexico their home for a number of years.

MUSIC WEEK

Few of us realize the influence of music. Beautiful music inspires noble thoughts—noble acts. It is one of the world's greatest influences for good, lifting us out and away from things sordid—cleansing, purifying.

This week Los Angeles will participate in the National movement for uplift through music. There will be free concerts in the schools, theaters, in the parks, in the streets and in some business houses. At some of the concerts a nominal admission fee will be charged. Lend your influence toward the success of this worthy movement. At least hear music wherever you can.

FANTASY MARKS RANCH OPENING.

Uplifters Take Possession of Santa Monica Retreat.

Frederick Warde Plays Chief Role in Forest Play.

Luncheon, Barbecue, Jinks Precede Main Number.

The elaborate celebration by the Uplifters of the formal opening of their ranch, near Santa Monica, came to a climax last night with the dedication of their camp fire circle through the presentation of a woodland fantasy with Frederick Warde in the chief role.

The day's program for the organization began with a luncheon at the Athletic Club, after which all of the members motored to the ranch, where an inspection of the property was made and various sports were indulged in until 7 o'clock, when a barbecue was served. At 8:30 a "low jinks" entertainment was presented under the direction of W. J. Dodd, on this program being an address by Frederick Warde, a futurist song with cubist music by President H. M. Haldeman, songs by Harold Proctor and Fred McPherson, as well as several numbers by the club quartet and orchestra.

The fantasy, which had as its keynote the welcoming of the new owners by the spirits of the woods, began at 10 o'clock when Earnest C. Warde, as a satyr, came through the forest under the glare of limelight to call out his woodland subjects.

Finally, after all of the other spirits, including not only those of the woods, but those of the arts as well, had been unable to light the pile of wood around which the circle was formed, Frederick Warde, as Uplift, succeeded where they had failed and the big logs blazed up as a symbol of the fellowship and good cheer of the organization which had found its home in that magnificent canyon.

Those taking part in the play, which was written by Dr. Paul Wismer, were: Ernest C. Warde, Hays Rice, Dr. J. Lester Adams, F. O. Bristol, Philip Hansen, W. J. Dodd, Fred McPherson, Ted Shawn and Frederick C. Warde. The music was by Louis F. Gottschalk and the lighting effects were under the direction of S. E. Crabill, who was also chairman of the general committee in charge of the celebration.

Grand Muscle Haldeman took an active part in all phases of the program and was cheered and congratulated by the membership for the success to which he had brought his dream of an adequate home for the organization.

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEF.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Senators are concerned over the long delay enforced by House leaders in bringing an end to an action on the peace resolution. The charge is being freely made that the House is jealous over Senate leadership on foreign affairs and will seek to scrap the Knox resolution and substitute the Porter resolution.

Before the newly organized Stable Money League today warning was given by H. A. Wallace, son of Secretary Wallace, that a wave of populism is destined to spread over the Middle West unless proper stabilization of the currency is soon accomplished.

Chairman Penrose of the Finance Committee declared today that prohibition enforcement is inefficient and wasteful and that it must be rehabilitated.

Senator Cummins conferred with the President today on the railroad situation, but would not discuss details of the conference.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover and Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, author of pending coal regulation bills, will confer here in June with representatives of the coal industry to discuss measures for extending a degree of Federal supervision over coal production and distribution.

Farmers' organizations, suspicious because the packers are not fighting the packing-control bill now before the House, have appealed to the Agriculture Committee to put more teeth in the bill before its passage.

COMMISSIONER SEES GAMBLING.

denying the authenticity of the wire. The denial occasioned considerable comment in view of the fact that no one had accused the Snyder backers of levying on gamblers for campaign money.

One sentence of this telegram according to those who have seen it, reads as follows:

"Page, Curlin, Buck, McNutt, McDonald and others have promised liberally."

The Times investigation of last week disclosed the fact that handbook places conducted by Page, Curlin, Buck, McNutt, McDonald and others were running either wide open or with little precautions.

WHAT WILSON SAW.

Commissioner Wilson's story, as related to The Times after his conference with the Mayor, was that he arrived about 10:45 a.m. yesterday in front of 326 South Spring street and mounted the shoe shining stand. From there he was able to observe the cigar counter directly in front of him, on the north side of the little lobby in front of the former saloon. The shoe shining stand is on the south side of the same lobby.

Commissioner Wilson said he saw a line of men apply at the cigar counter. They were given small Manila envelopes, each one containing money in large bills. The men usually tore these envelopes open and counted the money on the spot. Discussion of the bets and luck was open and loud. In one instance the man behind the cigar counter argued with an applicant and told him he did not have any money coming.

"You bet $10, didn't you?" the man behind the counter said, according to Mr. Wilson.

"Yes, that was my bet."

"Well, you have no money coming," was the reply.

Commissioner Wilson was able to obtain the names of several men who collected winnings. One man, whose name and address Mr. Wilson has, informed the commissioner that he had won $200 on a race bet. Some of the envelopes passed contained hundreds of dollars, and thousands changed hands while Mr. Wilson watched.

Mr. Wilson later said he was informed by the man behind the counter that Bob Sherwood was the man who owned the place. Later a man who said he was Sherwood acknowledged this to the commissioner.

"Bob" Sherwood is a well-known Los Angeles gambler.

After watching for some time the commissioner called the police station and asked that some officers be sent out at once. The paying was still in progress. The procession moved on without any apparent concern or police interference, Mr. Wilson said. There was some delay in getting an officer who understands getting gambling evidence so that altogether the open paying-off had continued half an hour before a member of the Purity Squad arrived and with Commissioner Wilson questioned the men who were being paid and those who were doing the paying.

Their story, according to Mr. Wilson, was unsatisfactory. Mr. Wilson and the officer gathered up the bits of envelopes. No other evidence was available at that time. These torn envelopes represented the winnings in the race the day before. They carried the names or initials of the men who placed the bets, the prices made to them and the names or abbreviations of the horses. The bets were mostly on the Louisville races.

At the conference at the City Hall, Police Commissioner Wilson was told that it is difficult to get adequate evidence for the prosecution of felony charges against bookmakers. It was admitted, however, that there is a misdemeanor ordinance covering the possession of racing form charts, which all "bookies" have. Persons arrested on these charges can be prosecuted in the police courts. No arrests for having form charts were made for nearly a month along Spring street until after The Times, in last Sunday's issue, May 22, exposed the gambling activity and gave the list of places where gambling was in progress. Ten arrests were made from May 25 to May 28, at 336 South Spring street, 326½ South Spring street, 317 West Third street, 330 South Spring street, and at 326½ South Main street. Some of the men found in these places were charged with being vagrant and idle. In two cases men arrested since May 25 forfeited their bail.

Bets placed by Times investigators yesterday were accepted at 336½ South Spring street, at 120 West Third street and 118 West Third street. Gambling activity was also noted in near-by known handbook places.

WILL WED AT DANCE.

Fireman and Bride to Get Sendoff by Black Gang of Battleship

The "black gang," the engineers' force on the U.S.S. Texas, will give a dance on the decks of the battleship next Saturday night, with a wedding as a feature of the festivities. The men will provide a thirty-pound wedding cake and a purse of $100 to give Mr. and Mrs. Frank Speckler, the bride and groom-to-be, a good start in their matrimonial venture. Mr. Speckler is a member of the Texas crew, being a fireman of the first class. About 3500 guests are invited and the affair is expected to be one of the most successful held by Navy men here.

UTES MAY GO ON WARPATH.

anything and Marshal Nebeker went down to San Juan with a fugitive warrant and a posse of twenty-five. They met the Indians near Bluff and a young white boy by the name of Atkins was killed and Cordova, another white man was shot through by several bullets, but recovered.

Nebeker maneuvered and separated the Indians into two groups, one-half bad, and the other half almost as bad. The former he succeeded in inducing to return to the reservation. The other eluded pursuit and going into Comb, Wash, a a ridge near Bluff, constructed a fort that commanded the country for miles. They were dislodged from this place and finally driven to Mule Deer and thence to Douglas Mesa.

By that time the entire southeastern part of Utah was aroused and the Marshal had a force of men sufficient to surround the Indians and force their surrender.

MME. CURIE ABANDONS PLAN TO SEE COAST.

MAY COME AS FAR WEST AS GRAND CANYON IF HER HEALTH PERMITS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 28.—Mme. Marie Curie, co-discoverer of radium, on advice of physicians, today canceled her plans for a trip to the Pacific Coast, scheduled to begin next Wednesday.

She will, however, leave next Wednesday for Chicago to fill dates in the West and visit the Grand Canyon. It was decided, however, that university functions arranged for her in California would prove too trying.

This announcement was made officially after a consultation of physicians called when she returned from Pittsburg, exhausted by the cordial reception accorded her.

Her friends said there was nothing alarming in her condition. While the announcement was being made she was preparing to go for a short motor ride.

Some of the scientist's friends, however, expressed the opinion that before Wednesday her physicians might command her to cancel even her trip to the Grand Canyon.

She is due to sail for home June 23.

Two physicians examined Mme. Curie, and, although they did not make public their diagnosis, it was learned she was suffering from an anaemic tendency and slight affection of the kidneys.

Late today Mme. Curie visited Memorial Hospital, where she was shown how radium was used there. She then returned to the home of Maj. and Mrs. William B. Melloney. Tomorrow she will motor to an unnamed Long Island summer resort to remain until Tuesday.

Mrs. Melloney explained that the gray-haired little woman had suffered a severe strain since her arrival. If, as planned, she goes as far as the Grand Canyon, some scheduled events planned for her journey will be dropped.

DUTCH FLAG ON SHIP AT LAUNCHING.

Tank Steamer Scopas First of Three Being Built for Foreign Company.

With the tri-color of Holland floating from the stern and the whistles of various industrial plants sending out a noisy salute, the Dutch tank steamer Scopas was launched at the plant of the Southwestern Shipbuilding Company at the harbor at 2:55 p.m. yesterday.

Just as the vessel started from the ways, Mrs. William MacDuffie, wife of an official of the Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Company, crashed a bottle of champagne against her bow. The Scopas is the first vessel ever built in a Los Angeles Harbor shipyard to fly a foreign flag.

Many prominent persons were present at the launching of the tanker, among them being Mr. and Mrs. MacDuffie, J. H. Tathouse, general manager of the Shell Company, Pacific Coast representatives of the Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Company, owners of the Scopas; O. B. Kibele, works manager; W. F. Howard, vice-president, and J. A. Talbot, all of the Southwestern Shipbuilding Company, and William Talbot and W. H. Riggs of the Llewellyn Iron Works.

The Scopas is the first of three 8400-ton tankers under construction at the Southwestern plant for the Dutch concern. The vessel is the twenty-third hull built at the yard since the laying of the first keel three years ago. The home port of the Scopas, and her sister ships, the Silvanus and Semiramis, will be at London.

The 11,600-ton flush-deck freighter West Greylock, thirty-third steamer to be built at the yard of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, will be launched on June 15. The steamer is being built for the United States Shipping Board, and is the third of its type to be launched at the yard, the first thirty steamers built there being of the 8800-ton type.

Presidio Golfers Must Omit Fourteenth Hole, Where Fledgelings Nestle.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28.—Golfers on the Presidio links were ordered today by Col. Thomas A. Pierce, commander of the post, to omit the fourteenth hole because a mother sparrow is raising her brood of four in the tiny depression. There is a "drive-slow" sign over the fourteenth hole today.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CAGO, May 28.—Do you want de who can cook and serve s and delightful little din-u want a bride who can a house without ruining nancially?

ou want a bride who dresses tly and converses intelli- y in dulcet tones that fall tly on the ear?

other words, do you want an ideal bride to minister to your comfort, your egotism and your pride?

The June crop is now ready and, although there were at least fifty, some of them have already been grabbed. If you are interested get in touch with Miss Enid Aubrey at the West Side Y.W.C.A., whose "Charm School" has just closed.

HOW TO HOLD.

For four months fifty young women have been attending the school, whose curriculum states that it is a course in "trousseau suggestions and home management," but which really has been a course of instruction in getting and holding a husband.

"I guess the school must have been a success," laughed Miss Aubrey. "At the banquet which marked the close of the school there were four new engagement rings and rumors of other engagements flew around."

Miss Aubrey started the school because every girl "really expects to be married some time."

"I wanted this school to sort of supplement their education," she said. "Of course, we couldn't compete with the regular night schools, but there are plenty of places where girls can learn out of books. What we wanted to teach them was the little things that really affect their happiness, to assist them to develop charm in a fine, practical way. And charm is the most practical thing in the world when it is the kind that comes with thoughtfulness for others' happiness and comfort.

CHOICE OF WORDS?

The course taught the art of conversation, the choice of words and the difference between interesting and boresome topics and the fallacy of dwelling long on one subject.

"We tried to teach the girls to direct conversations and to talk on topics other than personal ones," said Miss Aubrey. "And we drew attention to voices improperly pitched."

The devotees of Hymen were taught how to prepare attractive menus and to serve them, how to make objects to adorn the home, such as lamps, baskets and table covers; how to make hats becoming to their individual types; how to look like a girl on a poster even in the kitchen on a hot day, and how to nurse hubby when he falls ill from too much work or home brew.

Social Amenities.

"We ought to invite the Wombats to spend the evening soon."

"Can't do it now. They invited us when they had a quart. It would never do to invite them when all we have is a measly half-pint."—[Louisville Courier-Journal.

RAISE DEFENSE FUND FOR UNION LEADERS.

INDICTED LABOR CHIEFS COSTLY FOR BUILDING TRADES MEMBERS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, May 28.—A $100,000 defense fund for the union labor leaders who have been indicted for alleged extortion, is being raised by assessment of members of Chicago buildings trades unions, according to information given out by State's Attorney Gorman.

Meanwhile the Dailey joint legislative commission heard witnesses tell of graft payments of approximately $100,000 on a hotel and downtown office building.

Tracy Drake, hotel owner, testified that business agents of the carpenters' union demanded $16,000 and representatives of the electrical union demanded $3000 to permit work to proceed on his hotel.

Graft payments of $60,000 were made on the office building, according to testimony. Of the total amount, $40,000 was pocketed by the contractor and the rest given to a union business agent, it was declared. The agent had demanded $35,000 to permit the building to be completed, according to witnesses.

BEGIN UNIQUE BIG GAME HUNT.

Picks and Shovels Are Used Instead of Guns.

Scientists After Fossils of Prehistoric Mammals.

Declare Nebraska Was Home of Rhinocerous, Camel.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

AGATE (Neb.) May 28.—The annual big game hunt of trained geologists and paleontologists of the world is under way at the Agate Springs ranch near here. Instead of using high-powered rifles to bag their game, these expert hunters of rhinoceros, mastodons, camel and deer use a pick and shovel. The animals sought are not live ones, but are the bones of prehistoric earth travelers of a million or so years ago.

The Agate Springs ranch, owned by Capt. James H. Cook, extends along the Niobrara River for ten miles in Sioux county and is about twenty-five miles southeast of Harrison. On it is located what is said to be the greatest prehistoric bone quarry in the world.

MANY EXPLORATIONS.

Since its discovery thirty years ago, persons interested in the study of fossil remains have been making explorations. During the coming season, the quarries will be worked by the United States National Museum, Smithsonian Institution, under the direction of J. W. Gidley, and others. The American Museum of New York will have the usual party here taking what they desire but continuing the search for Dinohyus—an ancestral hog about the size of an ox in height and weight. A fine skeleton of the Dinohyus was found in 1904 by the Moril Geological Expedition. It stood nearly seven feet in height.

In prehistoric times, the place now called Agate Springs ranch is believed by some to have been a water hole, similar to the modern African water holes, where at times great herds of animals gathered to drink. Other scientists believe the place to have been once a lake and that carcasses drifted to this spot and their bones dropped.

CAUGHT IN EDDY.

Capt. Harold I. Cook, son of the owner of the ranch and consulting engineer, says it seems more probable that the bone bed is the result of a great eddy in a cove along the shore line of an immense river. The carcasses of various herds and individuals are believed to have been picked up by the moving water and lodged in the cover. This, he believes, would account for the partial segregation of types as well as the miscellaneous mixture of animals found in the quarries.

The Titanotherium, or giant beast, is the largest animal's bones to be found in this region. It is about the size of an elephant. The most common fossil mammal in the bad lands of Nebraska is the Oredon—an herbivorous animal about the size of the domestic sheep. As many as eight or ten skulls of the Oredon have been found frequently in a space no larger than the floor of an ordinary room.

HOME OF RHINOCEROS.

It has been discovered here by scientists that America is the home of the rhinoceros, the camel, as well as that of the horse and many other animals now to be found only in foreign countries or not at all. Cook says that Nebraska was the home of the rhinoceros and their wanderings led them into other parts of the world. At Agate, their bones and skulls occur in heaps. He says they became extinct in Nebraska at the close of the Pliocene age half a million years ago.

The fossils collected from the bone beds at Agate Springs ranch are entirely mammalian. Only a few of these, however, attract general attention, such as titanotheres, oredon, rhinoceros, horses, hogs, bovine, mastodons, mammoths, camels, deer and carnivores.

MEXICAN PYRAMIDS WILL BE RESTORED.

GOVERNMENT TO REBUILD AZTECS' WORK ON ORIGINAL LINES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN JUAN DE TEOTIHUACAN (Mex.) May 28.—Not only are the two great pyramids, those of the Sun and the Moon, situated near here, to be restored to their original lines but the Mexican government has made an appropriation for excavating and reconstructing the ruins of the great buried city surrounding the pyramids, which flourished more than 4000 years ago.

During the last few years immediately preceding the revolutionary period considerable work had been done in the matter of clearing away the accumulation of debris that covered the pyramid of the Sun, and it stands forth today as one of the great wonders of the world, according to archaeologists. This pyramid is three times as large as the great Cheops pyramid near Cairo, Egypt, and in its construction giant blocks of stone were used. It is 1400 feet square at the bottom. In height it is only 200 feet, and but for this fact it would be one of the most imposing structures ever made by man, it is stated. The pyramid of the Sun is smaller than the one of the Moon.

FOUND DEAD BY WIFE; SUICIDE, SAY POLICE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WOODLAND, May 28.—George Miller, proprietor of a soft drink parlor here, was found at his office desk this morning by his wife with a bullet wound in his heart and another in his head. Suicide is the theory of the local officers. An automatic revolver was found lying at his feet.

Business associates say he had been very successful. Miller was about 35 years of age.

TO ESTABLISH AUTO FERRY.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28.—The Southern Pacific Company is to establish an automobile ferry service between San Francisco and the Oakland Mole in the next few months, and has already appropriated $120,000 for the construction of a slip on the Oakland side, the company announced today.

CONSPIRACY CHARGED IN WILL SUIT.

Defrauded of His Share in Estate by Relatives, Says Son in Complaint.

Protesting against distribution of the estate of William Brett, who died last August 19, leaving property appraised at $34,339, George W. Brett, a son, yesterday filed a contest to his will, which leaves all of the property to the widow, Mrs. Ellen Brett.

The petitioner asserts that a purported will was filed, but that at the time of its writing the deceased was 97 years old and not wholly capable of understanding its import. It is charged by the petitioner that Ellen Brett, Albert B. Brett, a son, and William Ezra Wheeler, a grandson, entered into an asserted conspiracy to "cheat and defraud the petitioner and deprive him of his just share of the estate." It is charged they wrongfully and fradulently dominated the mind of the deceased, compelling him to sign the purported will against his wishes and to make and sign a conveyance of $300,000 worth of real and personal property to them without consideration. It is further charged they "falsely stated to the deceased and caused him to believe the petitioner was dishonorable in various prior transactions and had cheated and defrauded" the deceased.

In another suit filed in the Superior Court, the petitioner seeks to have set aside the conveyance said to have been made before the death of the deceased.

It was stated in the will of William Brett that various relatives, among them George Brett, the petitioner, were not bequeathed any property, as they had previously been taken care of by the deceased.

NAVAL PILOT KILLED WHEN PLANE CRASHES.

OBSERVER SERIOUSLY HURT; WERE TRYING OUT NEW SHIP IN TEST FLIGHT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN DIEGO, May 28.—Lieut. George T. Roe of Boston, Mass., Navy aviator, was instantly killed and Chief Machinist's Mate James P. Dudley of Virginia was seriously injured when the airplane in which they were flying fell 500 feet and struck on North Island this morning.

Roe was engaged in making a test flight of a Loening monoplane and Dudley was acting as observer when the fatal crash occurred. Officers at the North Island Navy air station said that the monoplane went into a power spin and that Roe was unable to straighten out the craft before it struck on its nose at the west end of North Island.

Roe was badly crushed, while Dudley suffered a broken jawbone and received other injuries, none of which, however, it is said, is fatal. The airplane was completely demolished. Roe was about 28 years old and had been in the Navy a number of years. He was attached to the Pacific Fleet air force and was stationed on the U.S.S. Aroostook.

HONOR PAID TO DEAD HERO.

Body of Sergt. Lynchik Lies in State Here.

Troops Stand Guard Around Flag-Draped Casket.

Patriotic Funeral Service to be Held Today.

Representing for all Los Angeles the undying and sacred memory of her soldier dead the body of Sergt. Morris Lynchik, slain by a German bullet at Ypres, while attacking a machine-gun nest, lay in state in Pershing Square all day yesterday and last night.

The body will be buried with impressive military ceremonies in Rosedale Cemetery today. Mayor Snyder will deliver an address.

In many respects one of the most somberly dramatic episodes in the history of the city, the placing of the slain soldier's casket in the center of the busy center of the city's only downtown park, drew a constantly changing throng that paused momentarily, silent and subdued, outside of a space kept clear by a military guard composed of Sergt. Lynchik's former comrades.

Mothers came to stand within the circle of silent watchers and to weep for sons who, like Sergt. Lynchik, went bravely forth to find a hero's death in a foreign land. There were many men, too, for whom the flag-draped casket embodied the living memory and the noble sacrifice of a dead son, brother or comrade.

Sergt. Lynchik died in action, July 23, 1918. Among the comrades who saw him fall was a brother, attached to the One Hundred and Eighth Infantry. The body was brought back to the United States and landed at New York, where a sister, Miss Evelyn Lynchik, took it in charge and accompanied it to Los Angeles.

The guard of honor guarding the casket in Pershing Square consisted of members of Co. B. Los Angeles Regiment of the National Guard.

Mrs. Elsie Selvy will sing patriotic songs at the ceremony today and burial services will be read by Chaplain Dodlan and Rabbi Moses Rosenthal.

The funeral procession will move from Pershing Square after 1 p.m. today, proceeding in Hill street to First street, thence to Broadway, in Broadway to Washington street, and in Washington street to Rosedale.

Music will be furnished by the Liberty Band, the Salvation Army Band and the R.O.T.C. Band. Those in the funeral procession will include former members of the Twenty-seventh Division, Grand Army of the Republic, Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled Veterans of the World War, Rainbow Division Veterans, the American Legion, Allied Troops, American Red Cross, the Salvation Army and various auxiliaries.

INSURE LIFE OF INVENTOR AFTER TEST.

Backers of Wonder Engine See Demonstration; Slight Improvements Needed.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

They insured the inventor's life for $10,000 yesterday, upon seeing the demonstration of his amazing multiplex engine, which he says will revolutionize power production and reduce costs at least 75 per cent and probably much more.

John M. Matoul, said inventor, was a proud man yesterday when he received sixty backers at the plant of the Daly company at 1027 Santa Fe avenue to show them the result of his handiwork and inspire them with the faith that his engine will indeed fulfill his and their dreams of fame and fortune.

The engine actually ran for more than an hour, started with the motor and at least proved its possibilities if many apparently trifling problems are overcome. It was obvious that much work and improvement still remain to be accomplished. To this end at least sixteen or eighteen of the inventor's faithful backers, themselves expert mechanics, took a hand, aiding the Daly company's mechanics in finding the solutions. All who expressed opinion took the attitude that the inventor has proved his theories possible and that all that is now necessary is the perfecting of details.

That the occasion was a tremendous one for these sixty backers was evident. Some of them had come with their wives and babies to watch the momentous demonstration. And they camped out at the Daly plant most of the day, with doors locked that no curious outsider might be admitted. They stood round in hushed but palpitating silence for hours with only a suggestion or comment from the workers and the rumble of machinery to break the silence. That queer-looking engine, seemingly crude in design and a jigg-saw puzzle to the uninitiated, was the cynosure of all eyes. When it was finally started the audience held its breath with awed exaltation. Even the babies ceased their prattle, seeming to understand that the result of this moment was to influence their whole future. And the great "Ah" that came forth when the queer levers and cylinders began to work was tense with human hope. For, if this machine proves all that is expected of it, every one of those sixty men and their families foresee an era of effulgent luxury. Almost all of them are workingmen, mechanics themselves for the most part, and no wealthy capitalist has contributed a cent to the large experimental expenses. They have staked their all, many of them, on this inventor's prowess and appeared to be satisfied that he had not failed them.

As the patents are not yet fully protected, there will be no public demonstration for a few weeks. In the interval the inventor hopes to make the few essential improvements.

PICKS HIS PRISON.

Confessed Forger Taken to Reno to Save Legal Fight.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA BARBARA, May 28.—E. H. Wright, who was arrested Friday at Los Angeles for the Santa Barbara police, on a charge of passing forged travelers' checks on a local bank, was started for Reno, Nev., today in charge of detectives of the American Bankers' Protective Association, promising that he will plead guilty in the Nevada courts to a similar charge.

Brought to bay here, Wright, when the officers say is a member of a national gang of crooks, informed the officers that he would fight and felony charge brought against him in California, though admitting the charges were true.

"Take me to Reno, where I passed eighteen forged travelers' checks for $50 each, and I'll plead guilty and go to prison, but not in California. I'll fight to the limit in this State," he declared, and so to avoid expense of a prolonged legal battle, the Nevada trip was undertaken.

The accused has but recently completed a parole term from San Quentin. He is 65, and declared that the State Parole Board would never listen to an application from him for another parole once he got back into a California prison.

AUTOMOBILE CRUELTY GETS DIVORCE DECREE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, May 28.—Judge Fred Rush of the divorce court heard a new one, when Mrs. Louise L. Allen filed a petition for a divorce from Ray Allen. Her charge was "cruelty with an automobile," which she explained as follows:

"In December, 1919, when we were taking a vacation in our car, my husband pushed me out of the machine and then ran the wheels over my foot."

Mrs. Allen also cited other instances of cruel treatment. Last Christmas, she said, she had a number of beautiful gifts for her husband, but this did not prevent him from slapping her so hard that she fainted. Judge Rush granted her a decree.

PORTLAND PREPARES TO COMBAT FLOOD.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND, May 28.—The city today began a campaign against the expected flood emergency.

Protection of water-front property from damage and prevention of a menace to public health are the two-fold object of measures initiated by Mayor Baker.

The Mayor conferred with heads of all city bureaus and instructed them to decide what is to be done in their departments in case of a serious flood.

JAPS SIDESTEP NOTE.

Not to Answer Hughes Yap Mandate Letter; Have New Proposition.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

TOKIO, May 28.—Japan, according to information here, has not yet sent a formal communication to Washington as an answer to Secretary of State Hughes's note on the mandate question, but will exchange memoranda in an effort to find a way to a direct settlement of the question of the island of Yap between Japan and the United States.

The opinion is expressed that Japan will offer some form of internationalization of the cables affected.

Although Japan will seek a political arrangement with America, says the Jiji Shimpo, it thinks the legal matters involved must be settled between America and the Allies as the whole.

INTERNATIONAL CONTROL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Proposals from Japan for internationalization of cables touching at the island of Yap probably will be in line with suggestions made at the Communications Congress, now in recess, it was said here today. The Japanese negotiators let it be known then, that Japanese were not averse to some kind of international control of the cables, provided that could be arranged without impairing the political control of Japan over the island under mandate.

American representatives at the conference were not willing to seperate the issues, preferring to settle one for all questions as to legality of the mandates under which Japan holds possession of Yap, the British occupy Mesopotamia and British colonial possessions control former German-owned territories and islands.

It was believed the Tokio dispatch had reference to this situation in speaking of the political as opposed to the legal issues involved.

So far no move has been made in Washington to begin anew exchanges on the subject. Officials on both sides have been looking forward to the consideration of the mandate question at an early meeting of the Supreme Council.

TAKE THOUSAND IN LOOT.

Pass-key thieves yesterday afternoon ransacked the apartments of Mrs. Jean Snyder of 1122 Georgia street and escaped with clothing and jewelry valued at more than $1000. According to Mrs. Snyder, who reported her loss to the police, the burglars entered her apartments while she was downtown shopping.

The Mountains or the Beaches, Which?

No great city at this stage of development ever offered such a partnership in joy and prosperity as this marvelous TUJUNGA vacation land of chaparral, purple sunsets, mellow evening atmosphere and super-abundance of soft life-giving mountain water.

So here we go! For our summer vacation campaign.

We do the land-banking for you at Tujunga.

Splendid level garden lots, 40 by 144 feet, without a rock, and ready for your hoe and the melons and the corn and free fried chicken! Roads all made, just a block off the cement pavement. Water pipes to every lot and electricity—all at $197 a lot. Pay $10 down and $4 a month.

Do you think we can keep that up forever?

Do you think there is enough of that kind of land to go around?

I do not.

Our salesmen say: "We can get more than that on these easy terms." But we say, "get the population—while the supply of land holds out. Keep down the price gates and let the multitude flow in."

In the Manzanita sector of the Tujunga project are the soft, green slopes of the North Verdugo Hills. Some of these lots are in chaparral; some in chin-high table grape vines, also figs; but poultry raising is forbidden. They are for rest and seclusion. Desirable restrictions in this sector prevail and tents or temporarys are not allowed, although artistically designed garages may be used as dwellings. Here the prices are the same plus the crops (when they occur) and the same easy terms (plus the value of made crops). In this section are clustered some of the best known families of the Southland. It is TODAY'S opportunity!

These lots all grow avocados, oranges, table grapes and figs, while they grow enormously in value. They do all this while you enjoy them as a vacation land, or a home retreat; with the easy payments of money that you otherwise fritter away on less happier week-end jaunts.

Week-day autos from our own office in Los Angeles at 10:30 a. m. We charge you a fee of $1, returnable if you buy, whereby you avoid obligation.

Visitors in their own machines, week days or Sundays, drive to Tujunga and ask for "Home Extension" tract manager, first office on the right as you enter Tujunga.

Burglar-Alarm Appliance at County Treasurer's Vault Proves Successful.

County Treasurer Hunt smiled yesterday as Undersheriff Manning and six deputies came running into his office three minutes after he had touched off the new electrical burglar appliance recently installed over the Treasurer's money vault. It was a test, said the Treasurer, but he remarked that more than $1,000,000 in currency, gold, silver and bonds was in the safe inside the vault.

which brought their crews from San Diego to the big party.

Venice and all its amusement places were thrown open to the sailors, but that which appealed to them mostly were the "eats," for nothing can get closer to a sailor's heart than mess gear. All night, in cavernous pits sunken in the beach sands, Joe Romero, the incomparable barbecue chef, spent the silent hours in preparing the huge feast. A hundred cooks and mess boys assisted him and at noon when "mess gear" was sounded the bluejacket guests launched their attack on the improvised galley.

AND THEY DID.

"Shove off!" one hard-boiled cook bellowed when the feast was ready—and they did. Forty-five hundred gobs concentrated their attack on a single objective—chow. Tons of delectable beef, huge tubs of beans, acres of spuds, enough ice cream to pave the Arctic Zone and enough pickles, if placed end to end, to girdle the earth, were handed out.

It was not such an orderly picnic, for naval officers did not supervise it. So chow was acquired by various tactics of naval warfare—bombing attacks with slabs of ice cream serving as bombs, submarine tactics and the like. And ere the close of day many were the bulkheads that were stove in in the gastronomic areas of hundreds of "gobs."

And it was all free. Nobody in Venice even had to ask for a meal. The "gobs" ate their fill, and yet tons of food remained. Then came the kiddies, next, their parents "who didn't want the food, but they'd eat it just to save throwing it away." Nor were the dogs forsaken, and when they had satisfied their hunger, the seagulls ate the crumbs.

DANCE SECOND BEST.

The generous distribution of the barbecue "chow" accounted for the small attendance at the public dance, which was held on the new Windward-avenue pier. Instead of adjourning to the dance hall, the majority of the "gobs" retired to the beach sands, where hundreds of them just stretched out and lay there, caring not a tinker's goshdurn for the rest of the world.

And the six navy bands played on, giving to Venice the finest assortment of music the resort had ever heard. True, there was some life in the party, for all the rides were open to the "gobs," and these were crowded throughout the afternoon and evening. Long lines awaiting their turn to enter the cars on the Race Through the Clouds, the Big Dipper and other wild rides, wound in serpentine fashion through the streets.

There wasn't much of a set program to the day's festivities. "Eats" and a good time for everybody was all that it amounted to. That is the reason why it was such a big success, a day of days which the men of the Pacific Fleet will not forget.

GOES NORTH TO URGE SHIPPING BY WATER.

FRUIT GROWERS' COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN ON WAY TO SEATTLE MEETING.

C. S. Whitcomb, chairman of the water transportation and export committee of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, left Los Angeles Friday night for Seattle, where he will represent California at the initial meeting of the all-western committee on water transportation.

This committee is composed of representatives from every growers' organization on the Pacific Coast, embracing the States of California, Oregon and Washington. Its formation was the result of a tour made by Whitcomb recently throughout the Northwest, where he found growers, of that section anxious to co-operate with citrus fruit and vegetable growers of this State to provide cargoes for ship lines with refrigeration facilities for carrying perishable soil products.

The object of the meeting is to take up every phase of water transportation, and especially to co-operate with ship line owners in order that sea movements of Pacific Coast perishable products may be placed on a firm and permanent basis.

Success of test shipments of deciduous and other fruits consigned to the Atlantic seaboard and European ports caused much interest in maritime circles.

The committee probably will remain in session several days.

FOR SPOUSE'S DEATH.

Heavy Damages Are Asked by Widow of Asserted Wire Victim.

Mrs. Myrtle Valenzuela, widow of Walter P. Valenzuela, formerly a lineman for the Southern California Edison Company, who is said to have touched a live wire and to have fallen from a pole on North Broadway, causing his death, yesterday filed suit against the company and the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation, for $50,000 damages. The death occurred on September 23, last. It was stated in the complaint the wire was not properly insulated.

JEWISH INSTITUTIONS REMEMBERED IN WILL.

Benjamin Kingbaker who died last May 21, leaving an estate of $125,000, made various bequests to Jewish charitable organizations, according to a will filed for probate yesterday. Among these bequests are: $500 to the Kaspare Cohn Hospital, $500 to the Jewish Orphan Asylum of Los Angeles, $250 to the Federated Jewish Charities, $250 to the Hebrew Union College of Cincinnati, and $250 to the Jewish Consumptive Relief Association. The remainder of the estate was left to relatives.

BEARS COME THROUGH WITH GLORIOUS VICTORY.

U. of C. Captures Collegiate Track Championships, Defeating Harvard by Margin of One-half Point.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) May 28.—By one-half a point a small band of University of California athletes won a collegiate track classic today. The Pacific Coast stars defeated Harvard 27½ to 27 in the struggle for first place honors at the forty-fifth annual games of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America. Far Western and Middle Western colleges have many times attempted to wrest from their eastern rivals an I. C. A. A. A. A. championship but not until today has success crowned their efforts. Tonight Cambridge was ringing with praise for California. The victory came at the finish of an afternoon of exceptional competition.

WOW! IT'S CLOSE.

When the final event was started Harvard was leading California by 27 to 24½. To win the title R. K. Hutchinson, lone California entrant, had to finish third or better in the 220-yard dash.

A bitter fight was on from the start.

On past performance Hutchinson could hardly expect to defeat either Allen Woodring of Syracuse or Al Leconey of Lafayette. It was a question whether he could lead Davison of Cornell, Maxam of Pennsylvania and Monie of Syracuse.

Interest among the 11,000 spectators, who included California rooters, was intense.

The finalists got away to a perfect start. Woodring, the Olympic champion, took the lead, Leconey was at his heels. For sixty yards the others were grouped. Near the halfway mark, however, Hutchinson began to pull away. At fifty yards from the finish he seemed to falter. But with a great spurt he picked up his speed again.

HUTCHINSON GAINS.

With Californians in the audience shouting at the top of their lungs, Hutchinson actually gained on the leaders. At the tape he led Davidson, fourth man, by almost twenty feet. Immediately the western contingent spilled over the stadium ramparts, and when the official announcement made California's triumph certain there was an impromptu celebration.

Seldom in the history of the meet has so close a finish been seen. The initial championship was staged in 1876, and the classic has continued with but one break, that of 1917, due to the war.

While Hutchinson's placing in the final race gave first place to his team, the work of the other Californians had sent up the point total.

Harvard men gave unstinted praise to the visitors, saying that the victory was well earned in view of the fact that California had but fourteen entrants against a field of hundreds. Harvard adherents found satisfaction in the unexpected strength and showing of their team, which under the coaching of Bill Bingham, a former Crimson athletic star, developed surprising scoring power and upset expectations of several of the other contesting teams. It was the first year since 1909, when Harvard won, that a team other than Cornell or Pennsylvania had gained first honors.

GREEN IS THIRD.

Dartmouth finished third with 20 points, one and one-half points ahead of Pennsylvania, 1920 champion. Leland Stanford, Jr., University, with but four athletes, finished fifth with 15 points. It was the scoring of the second California contingent that gave the victors a chance for first place.

Cornell and Princeton tied for sixth with 13 points each, and Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Penn State were tied at 10 points. Yale with 9½ points led Lafayette by half a point. Syracuse came next with 8; Georgetown collected 5 points and others to score were Rutgers, 4; Holy Cross, 3; Columbia, 1½, and Bowdoin, 1.

California placed men in eight of the thirteen events, Harvard placed in seven and Dartmouth in five. California won one first, tied for two other first places, won one second, two thirds and two fourths. Harvard won one first and tied for another, three seconds, one third, one fourth and one fifth. Dartmouth earned her twenty points with three firsts, a third and fourth.

After the meet California's many supporters swarmed to the dressing-room to congratulate Coach Walter Christie.

The coach grinned as he shook hands.

"Of course, I'm glad we won," he said. "Several times I had given up the meet for lost. But when the final standing showed eight of the boys had placed I was satisfied."

First place, 5; second, 4; third, 3; fourth, 2; fifth, 1. There were thirteen events. In the event of a tie for any one place, points were to be divided.

Sullivan Picks Carpentier to Beat Dempsey.

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) May 28. At the end of the second week of Jack Dempsey's training here we wonder whether Georges Carpentier is as well prepared as we think the champion is. We haven't had much of a chance to observe the Frenchman's condition, but looking at things from this angle, Georges will have to be in his very best mood to hope for an even break with the slashing scrapper, who will represent America in the international combat at Jersey City, July 2.

On the day we hopped the rattler for this burg we had just taken a peep at Carpentier behind those barbed wire entanglements in Manhasset, and while we had some set notions about the Frenchman at that particular moment, we decided to postpone our convictions. We happened to bump into Jimmy Sullivan just as we left the Carpentier camp. Jimmy fastened the old buttonhole on us, and purred.

"This bird Carpentier will take Jack Dempsey just as sure as you are alive. They did not think Corbett had a chance with Sullivan, did they? You could not make anybody believe Sullivan could be beaten. But Corbett grabbed him, didn't he? Well, you just watch it this time," concluded James.

French Champ Boxer Takes to the Road.

BY RAY PEARSON.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, May 28.—A day of work and play was held at the Manhasset training camp of Georges Carpentier today. It started with ten miles of road word at 6:30 o'clock in the morning and finishted with a stroll in the evening. In the interim Georges took a stiff workout which included the usual gym stunts and boxed three rounds, two with Paul Journee and one with Italian Joe Gans.

Much importance was attached to the boxing, as it was a "closed day," and we were informed that the punching was the most strenuous yet pulled off. We get the dope that the European champion permitted Journee to "sock" him merrily on the chin and body in order that his features may become hardened for the battle with Jack Dempsey on July 2 at Jersey City.

Tomorrow, it was announced, there will be only a light workout after which Georges is going on a fishing trip to Port Washington. At no training camp in the world are there such rigid and unfamiliar training regulations as at Manhasset.

SUDS ON THE FAT END AGAIN.

Seattle Wallops Tiger Pitchers Without Mercy.

Jacobs of Visitors Has Fine Roundhouse Curve.

Slim Love's Funny Bone Put Out of Commission.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

Good thing they play nine games this spasm, or Seattle would have tucked away the fat end of the series yesterday.

The Siwashes made it four out of five, by mopping up the Tigers, 7 to 4, in a game both succulent and sloppy.

Vernon, which seems to have had an impediment in its stride since returning home, resembled a one-man car on a four-track trunk line. No need of having Sawyer on the line to produce laughs as long as the felines frisk as they did yesterday. All that they lacked was a ball of yarn.

AROUND CIRCLE.

Might get more action by tieing a piece of paper on the tail of the Tigers, and let them chase themselves around in a circle. Or wrap their feet in paper and watch them dance up and down. Pussy wanted a corner of the plate, but Elmer Jacobs kept all the corners for himself. He bossed the corners like a string of traffic cops on Broadway.

Jacobs used a fast one on the inside corner to burnish the belt buckers of the home batters, and conducted a roundhouse curve over the far corner to induce fishing. And the Tigers fell into this simple trap. Jacobs was wild, but the Tigers were tame, so it didn't matter.

LED ONCE.

Still they were in the lead once, and pursued the visiting pitcher closely down to the ninth inning, when P. Samson Schneider's strength oozed out of his wrist, and he was battered for three runs. It was not surprising that P. Samson weakened as he toiled a full game at the grist mill in the bull pen on the day before.

Schneider was Essick's third entry, and his last hope. Wee Willie Mitchell was started after five days of warming up. But to warm over a soup bone from day to day isn't satisfactory. A soup bone, to be good, must be cooked. So Wee Willie will remain in an attitude of prayer waiting for warm weather. He was knocked cuckoo in the fourth, and Slim Love, who relieved him, was hit on the crazy bone. Thus the game became a madhouse. Slim pitched to only two batters, which was one too many. Taking hold in the fourth with the bases loaded, he forced Bates to hit into a double play.

Brick Eldred, first up in the fifth, cannon-balled a liner of Slim's pitching elbow, forcing him into the pit for repairs. Mr. Love hereafter will wear a boxing glove on his elbow to block these straight punches. Thus Schneider, useful, all-around citizen, became blended into the stirring picture. And until he weakened in the ninth, P. Samson had the Siwashes calling for government aid.

Tub Spencer, who had a hand bitten by one of J. Carlisle Smith's bloodhounds, circulated about the stand in his store clothes. His sore mitt is now unwrapped and yearning for more base runners to be thrown out.

BUM THROW.

Wisterzil's wild throw on Chadbourne's grounder in the first paved the way for an early two-run jump on the enemy. Hits by High and Edington and Locker's sacrifice produced the pair.

French's bobble in the fourth paved the way for even greater things as far as Seattle was concerned. This fumble put Eldred on first. The Nuxated Duke suddenly weakened and fanned, which reduced him to the rank of cast-iron royalty. But he proved later that he is something more than a tin duke worthy of nothing better than a tinfoil duchess.

After Kenworthy had fanned, Cunningham singled, Stumpf doubled and Adams and Jacobs cracked safeties. Two passes loaded the bases some more and unloaded Mitchell from the mound. With Love pitching, Bates banged into a double play. Four runs.

HUGHIE THERE.

High, who is hitting at regularly as a clock ticks, singled in the fifth, when Vernon moved up to within one of Seattle. Edington walked, and Truck Hannah, holder of the reliability run record around the bases, was hit on the meat hand with a pitched ball. Jacobs exuded a wild pitch, releasing High to the pan. Jacobs then settled, and was going so good by the sixth that such experts batters as Schneider and Chadbourne didn't even unshoulder their bats for the third strike.

Seattle forestalled a possible last-minute Vernon rally by amassing three in the ninth, on doubles by Lane and Eldred, a fielder's choice, and a single by the Iron Duke, who had been using a ten-penny nail for a cud.

Scotty Alcock's single started a one-run rally for the Tigers in the ninth, and thus ended the feeble struggle for existence. The score:

PATTERSON AND WOODCOCK MEET.

Fight Out the Finals of San Gabriel Golf Tourney.

Wilshire Man's Defeat of Bacon is a Surprise.

Four-Ball Medal Play Event to be Staged Today.

BY PAUL LOWRY.

Those who scan the results of the San Gabriel golf tourney while inhaling their grapefruit this morning may be surprised to find the name of H. N. H. Woodcock of Wilshire as one of today's finalists. But they aren't the only suprised parties. The man with the triple-barreled initials shocked a couple of rivals on the Mission Town course yesterday, and today hopes to account for the discomfiture of George Patterson in a 36-hole jog.

Woodcock licked D. A. Jacobs 3 and 1 in the morning round, and after lunch astonished all the seers by punching Bill Bacon to a 4 and 3 defeat. This was a severe upset of the well-known dope, but Woodcock deserved every inch of his victory. He was out in 38, being three holes up at the turn and playing admirably all the way. "Farmer Bill" was just a bit off his game, easily explained by the fact that he has been away from tournament play for over a year.

Elmer Ralphs, baron of Spring street, lowered his colors to George Patterson 3 and 2 in the morning, and the Annandale player continued his triumphant march in the afternoon, eliminating J. T. Gilmer, 5 and 4.

Victor Girard, general, never shot better in his life than against D. L. Darsie in the third flight, had one birdie, six pars and two holes over par on his card for a 38 for the first nine, and smeared his rival, 7 and 6.

He nearly caught a tartar in the semifinal round, pee-wee Andrew Getty carrying him to the nineteenth hole before succumbing.

Besides the finals today there will be a special four-ball best-ball medal play event this afternoon, open to all. The results follow:

COBB MAULING BERMUDA HARD.

Tyrus Boosts Average Considerably in a Week.

Speaker is Going Great Guns With Bludgeon.

Ruth Falls Into a Slump on the Western Trail.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, May 28.—Managing a ball club seems to be conducive to heavy hitting, for Ty Cobb, pilot of the Detroit Tigers, and Tris Speaker, manager of the Cleveland Indians, are giving Harry Heilmann of Detroit a terrific fight for the batting leadership of the American League.

Cobb boosted his mark from .395 last week to .411 for this week, according to averages released today and which included games of last Wednesday, while Speaker raised his last week's average of .378 to .408. Heilmann, although he suffered a batting slump, is fourteen points ahead of Cobb. Heilmann's average is .425 as compared with .454 a week ago.

COMES TO FRONT.

Severeid of St. Louis also has come to the front in grand style. The slugging catcher of the Browns has attained a mark of .381 and is in fourth place.

"Babe" Ruth, the king of home-run hitters, ran into a slump when the Yankees hit the western trail of the circuit. His batting average dropped from .378 to .345.

The big slugger failed to get any four-baggers while in Chicago, but in the final game at St. Louis, Wednesday, he cracked out a drive which was said to be the longest made at the Browns Park, and brought his total string of home runs up to thirteen. Shocker was pitching.

SOME STEALER.

Harris of Washington stole two bases while the Senators were touring the West and is showing the way to the base stealers with ten thefts.

Other leading batters for twenty or more games: Brower, Washington, .378; Sisler, St. Louis, .375; Tobin, St. Louis, .375; Stephenson, Cleveland, .363; Williams, St. Louis, .353; Ruth, New York, .345.

Grimes of the Chicago Cubs, struck his batting stride during his first invasion of the East and climbed from fifteenth place to fifth in the National League batting list. Most of last week's leaders went into a slump, Roger Hornsby, the St. Louis star, dropping from .457 to .435. However, he is safely entrenched at the top of the batters of the National League, who have participated in twenty or more games.

IS RUNNER-UP.

Snyder, New York's catcher, is runner-up to Hornsby, with an average of .365, while McHenry of St. Louis, who was in seventh place a week ago, is batting .360, and is in third position. Maranville of Pittsburg, who threatened to dethrone the St. Louis star a week ago, dropped to fourth place with .359. Grimes, who a week ago, hit .326, is pushing "Rabbit" with .358.

George Kelly, the New York Giants' slugger, who is leading the National League home-run hitters, failed to add to his total of eight and now is five behind the American League rival "Babe" Ruth.

Bohne of Cincinnati failed to increase his stolen base record. He leads, however, with eight thefts.

Other leading batters: Johnston, Brooklyn, .356; Tierney, Pittsburg, .352; Kelly, New York, .347; Barber, Chicago, .342; Hargrave, Cincinnati, .340; Cutshaw, Pittsburg, .340.

Manual Training School of Kansas City won the high-school meet with 22½ points, when Norton won the high jump and nosed out Beatrice, Neb., with 16, and Vallejo, Cal., with 15 points, which came from three firsts by Boyden, the Coast champion middle distance runner. FROMME WANTS TO BE FREE AGENT.

Indications are that the deal which was to have brought Tony Faeth to the Vernon club in exchange for Art Fromme will not go through.

A monkey wrench was thrown into the machinery yesterday by Fromme's declaration that he will not play with Sacramento. He finally reached this decision after a number of conferences with President Maier and Manager Essick. Fromme desires his release that he may play in the San Joaquin Valley League without being listed as a contract-breaker.

"This is my seventeenth year in organized baseball," said Fromme, "and I feel that such length of service entitles me to choose the place in which I shall round out my career. I have promised the Vernon officials that I will not play with any Coast League club if set free. To transfer my home to Sacramento means financial loss. It's simply out of the question. I came to Vernon a free agent, didn't cost the club a dollar, and feel that it should make me a free agent."

This is Fromme's version. The club's version probably is that he should have had a release clause in his original contract, and that it owes him nothing.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

INDIANAPOLIS, May 28.—Twenty-three anxious men are planning their part in the greatest contest in motor history. There was scarcely an idle moment on the track of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway today. The rules were suspended and the track thrown open for Sunday practice, although Eddie Pullen, scheduled to drive a Duesenberg, and C. W. Van Ranst, a Frontenac, have yet to qualify tomorrow.

Marvin E. Headley will not drive in the race. He was forced to withdraw the Frontenac he was slated to pilot, thus cutting the number of cars entered to twenty-three.

Tommy Milton and Smiling Ralph Mulford, driving Frontenacs, qualified at speeds of 93.05 and 91.7 miles an hour, respectively, for the ten-mile test course. Jimmy Murphy in a Duesenberg qualified easily, negotiating 93.6 miles an hour.

It is reported that Joe Thomas of the Junior Special team will not drive. His relief driver is Al Soules.

TRANSPORT OF MEXICAN ARMY HERE.

Will Carry Destitute to Homeland Free of Charge; Sails Early This Week.

The Mexican passenger liner Mexico, in the army transport service of the southern republic, arrived at Los Angeles Harbor yesterday from Mazatlan, coming here to carry 1500 to 2000 Mexican refugees back to their own country.

The Mexican government took over the Mexico from the Mexican Steamship Company of Progreso, in order to provide means of transporting a large number of destitute Mexicans in Southern California back to their native soil.

Efforts of the Mexican Consulate to secure reduced rates from railroads for the transporting of the destitute Mexicans back to Mexico failed, so it was decided to send a steamship after them. Practically all the Mexicans are poverty-stricken, and will be carried home free of charge on the steamer.

The Mexico is a vessel of 2558 net tons, and is commanded by Capt. Francisco Miranda. The steamer made the run from Mazatlan to the local harbor in five days. She carried two passengers, and a small amount of freight which will be discharged here, and is scheduled to sail for the return to Mexico tomorrow or Tuesday.

This is the first time in history that the Mexican government has sent a transport to carry back destitute Mexicans to their own country.

S'Matter Pop Artist Caveman, Declares Wife.

Although the pictures of a comic strip of a newspaper "funny" supplement, widely circulated, known as "S'Matter Pop," depicts perfect harmony in the home, C. M. Payne, originator of the pictures, yesterday was sued by Kathryn Danzer Payne for separate maintenance. The wife charges the artist used "caveman" tactics and several times threatened her.

The complaint, which was filed by Lyle W. Rucker and William J. Palmer, plaintiff's attorneys, charges that Mr. Payne took his wife to a lonely spot in his automobile, held a revolver to her head and said she had but five minutes to live. She says her life was threatened on other occasions, and once, she says, he dragged her around the house by her hair.

Because of the fear Mrs. Payne says she has for her husband, she sought and obtained a temporary restraining order to prevent him from entering their home at 1770 Vista Del Mar avenue. The couple were married on Dec. 24, 1904, it was stated in the complaint. They have two daughters, 13 and 15 years old. The artist receives a salary of $400 a week and a bonus, the wife states.

HOLD REVEL IN GARB OF EGYPTIANS.

Students Have Annual Jinx at Otis Art Institute; Don Novel Costumes.

Antony and Cleopatra were in town yesterday. The famous lovers were the big attraction of the first annual Egyptian jinx, given by the students at the Otis Art Institute.

The art students for many weeks have been making preparations for the jinx, and last night the results of their labors were much in evidence, for the Bivouac, home of the school, was transformed into a setting of Egyptian scenes, in which 200 young artists, bedecked in the costumes of the day of Cleopatra, danced and made merry.

The entrance of the institute was adorned with a huge canopy, and upon roses strewn beneath it the guests entered the studios. Canopies were hung in the corridors and were draped from the ceilings of the many classrooms, and these, with a flood of dimmed varicolored lights, added an exotic atmosphere to the place.

Around the walls appeared huge posters and placards, depicting scenes, characters and legends of Cleopatra's reign. These were the work of the students. Many unique features were also included in the novel arrangement, such as links of hotdogs strung from the ceiling and unpublished prints of ancient Egyptian customs.

The guests appeared in silken Egyptian costumes of their own design. Six vaudeville stunts were also included in the program. The grand march was led by Antony and Cleopatra, portrayed by two students of the school.

No One Chosen for President of Occidental.

No one has yet been selected to head Occidental College and no such selection will be made until next Wednesday morning, when the board of trustees will decide whom, out of a list of several, to call to the presidency.

This statement was made last night to The Times by an officer of the board of trustees. It was in direct contradiction to the reiterated publication of a statement that Dr. Remsen Dubois Bird of the San Francisco Theological Seminary has been selected.

When the trustees meet next Wednesday morning the name of Dr. Bird will be among those presented, however, and he is declared to have many supporters among the men who govern the college's affairs.

Dean Thomas G. Burt also asserted last night that no definite selection of a new president had been made so far as he knew.

Prof. Frederick Bird of Colombia University has been chosen for an associate professorship in history and political science, it was learned, although formal announcement has not yet been made by the board of trustees.

CITY TO HONOR SOLDIER DEAD.

Striking Tributes to be Paid Heroes of Many Wars.

Special Services in Churches Will be Held Today.

Vast Parade to Fill Streets Tomorrow Afternoon.

All Los Angeles today and tomorrow will unite in paying loving tribute to the sacred memory of the nation's soldier dead, preparations for local observance of Memorial Day being the most extensive in the history of the city.

The principal ceremonies and exercises will be held tomorrow, when all large business houses, Federal, State, county and municipal officers, schools and colleges and downtown office buildings and stores will remain closed throughout the day.

A Memorial Day parade will pass through the principal downtown streets of Los Angeles tomorrow and a joint commemoration program by veterans of the Civil War, the Spanish-American War and the World's War will be held in Bible Institute auditorium following the parade.

In all Los Angeles churches today special Memorial Day services will be held and this afternoon thousands of patriotic men and women will begin the decoration of graves in all local cemeteries. Grave-decorating ceremonies will be concluded tomorrow.

LEGION'S PLEDGE.

Buron R. Fitts, State Commander of the American Legion, department of California, yesterday sent the following message to the members of the World's War organization:

"The whole nation will pause today, to reaffirm with tender memories the ideals and principles given birth by the sacrifice of our comrades in wars of the past. In every community throughout America they will gather to honor anew those who have made the supreme sacrifice in defense of American ideals.

"The American Legion, over 50,000 strong in California, is founded upon those bonds that bind us to our dead comrades. We would be false, as would every man and woman in this nation, to those who have gone if we now defaulted in carrying forward the ideals for which they died. The American Legion will not forget, nor do we intend that the nation shall forget, the basic principles of loyalty, patriotism and pure Americanism for which we fought.

"We have before us a splendid example of practical Americanism in the work of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Spanish-American War Veterans. They stand squarely for law and order—it is a cardinal principle in the constitution of the American Legion. But we are not charged with the enforcement of the law—only to preserve its sanctity by an undivided, unswerving loyalty and devotion to the things it stands for and represents.

"In reflecting with tender thoughts upon those that are gone, it is not amiss to remember that thousands among us are suffering a living death. Our duty to the mangled living is only equaled by our sacred duty to the dead. They have sacrificed all that they are and all that they will be—all that remains is a torn and maimed body—given in defense of the same ideals for which thousands of others have died. It is regrettable that the American public is fast forgetting, and the deplorable condition in which they live is finally thrown back upon the shoulders of the American Legion and kindred veteran organizations for remedy. But we assure them, as well as the mothers, wives, sisters, fathers and brothers of our dead, that we have not forgotten, nor will we forget, and each member offers them what measure of consolation is his to give."

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION.

Mayor Snyder yesterday issued the following Memorial Day proclamation:

"In tribute to the memory of those brave men, who have fallen upon the field of battle, that their country might live and glorify the principles for which it was founded, I call upon our citizens to lay aside their business cares for a day and join with the veterans of our different wars in the exercises they have planned for Memorial Day.

"Let every merchant and every family in this city fly an American flag from their place of business and their homes on this occasion.

"The largest Memorial Day parade ever held in Los Angeles will march down Broadway at 1:30 that afternoon, and I hope that the line of march will be taxed to its utmost by our people in honoring the veterans in parade.

"Addresses will be made by distinguished orators at the general meeting to be held in the Bible Institute, commencing at 2 o'clock, and all who can should attend."

VOLUNTEERS' SERVICES.

Fred H. Solomon, who entertains newsboys at dinner each Christmas, has announced he will give a dinner Memorial Day for all veterans of '61, who have no relatives with whom to dine. He asks Civil War veterans thus situated to communicate with him before 3 o'clock tomorrow at Solomon's Penny Dance De Luxe, 920 South Grand avenue. ROY GARDNER ADMITS HOLDUP eral hours the bandit announced at 3 o'clock this afternoon he was ready to confess, the officers said. He was taken to the Federal Building, where he made a detailed statement of the Newcastle affair and takn in an automobile at 4 o'clock to the scene of the robbery.

He told the officers he had boarded overland train No. 20 at Roseville at 9 o'clock Friday, and soon after the train had left the yards entered the mail car.

His story to the officers follows:

"I had been in Roseville since May 6 and had ridden on No. 20 four times in an effort to enter the mail car. Friday night I was lying on top of the car when in going around a curve the telescope arrangement between the cars opened and I slipped in. I experienced no difficulty in entering the mail car proper.

RIPPED OPEN POUCHES.

"The mail clerk was asleep with his hat over his face. I had expected to encounter four clerks, as it was my impression that valuable mail was carried on the train. I had four straps with me which I had intended to use in tying the clerks. I removed the clerk's hat and drawing my gun told him to put up his hands. I then put his hands behind him and then tied them. After making certain that the clerk was securely tied I proceeded to rip open the mail pouches. It was my impression that a valuable shipment of mail was contained in one of the bags.

"Of course, it was necesary for me to work quickly and I opened fifty-one sacks before the train turned the last curve for Newcastle. Becoming aware that we were close to Newcastle I pulled the cord in an effort to stop the train. There must have been some combination known only to railroad employees as I experienced much difficulty in slowing the engine.

THREW MAIL IN BRUSH.

"Finally the train slowed down and I gathered mail I thought was the most important, compelled the mail clerk to hold a pouch in his mouth, put mail into it, took it and jumped off. I ascertained that the mail I had selected was worthless and threw it into the brush.

"It must have been about 11 o'clock when I left the train. Getting back to Roseville was my next worry and I started out in the general direction of the town following as closely as I could a route I had selected in a preliminary survey of the robbery.

"When I got about a mile and a half from Rocklin I discovered a small cave and decided to spend the night there. I threw away two mail keys I had stolen to open mail bags and hid my overalls in a clump of brush, about 200 yards from the cave.

WENT TO ROSEVILLE.

"When dawn broke I left the cave and went to Roseville, where I went into a hotel and ate breakfast. It was the first time I had eaten since 8:30 the night before. At 8 o'clock I went into a barber shop and then went to a hotel and went to bed.

"It was amusing for me to read in the papers about the daring robbery and the search for the bandit."

Gardner took the officers to the spot where he had thrown away the keys and they were receovered. He drew a small compass from his pocket near the cave, studied it closely and said: "Now, if you gentlemen wish to make my story right up to the minute you must walk just 300 yards directly east and there you will discover the overalls I wore when I committed the robbery."

YALE RATES CUT.

Round Trip Cost Between Los Angeles and Bay City Pared.

R. C. Crowder, general passenger agent of the Los Angeles Steamship Company, who has spent the last few days here conferring with General Manager Frey and District Passenger Agent Cullen, announced last night that beginning June 1 and continuing through the month a special summer round-trip rate of $35 will be effective for all standard accommodations on the company's steamer Yale, berth and meals included.

This means that those making first reservations for the two round-trip voyages of the Yale each week (Mondays and Thursdays from Los Angeles, Tuesdays and Fridays from San Francisco) will have the privilege of selecting any standard stateroom on the vessel at the special $35 round-trip rate. Heretofore, choice of staterooms has cost $25 each way, or $50 for the round trip.

Both the general manager and district passenger agents of the Los Angeles Steamship Company are optimistic over the outlook for a splendid passenger business on the Yale during the coming month. Several large Los Angeles parties have already signified their intention of making the trip by sea to San Francisco and return and similar parties are in prospect from the northern port.

CONVICT JUMPS FROM PRISON-BOUND TRAIN.

Jumping from the rear end of a Southern Pacific train ten minutes after it had left Los Angeles at 8 o'clock last night, Terrence (Red) Kelley, who escaped from San Quentin in July, 1920, again forced his way to liberty from Parole Officer Madden of San Fernando. Kelley, who was serving a sentence of from one year to life in the penitentiary, was taken in company with another prisoner, Eugene Crosby, from the City Jail by Officer Madden and was on his way back to San Quentin.

Officer Madden reported to the Sheriff's office, according to Deputy Sheriff Harvel Bell, that the train would not stop for him when Kelley made his getaway, and first notified the local police from San Fernando. Kelley was handcuffed to Crosby when he left the City Jail, according to Jailor McMillan.

Kelly had been picked up in Chicago and brought here from that city en route back to San Quentin. Identification records here show that Kelley was arrested in San Francisco in 1918 on the charge of grand larceny, and was sentenced in that city in February, 1919, for robbery.

Up until a late hour last night Deputy Sheriffs Cooper, Cronin, Cubbage, Townsend, Hotz and Walker, the City Marshal of Burbank and his men, and Constable Porriar of San Fernando were searching the river bottom for Kelley.

WOMAN DASHES SELF TO DEATH.

Leaps Twelve Stories from Downtown Building.

Husband Blames Melancholia for Her Tragic Act.

Victim Prominent in Church and Red Cross Work.

Crashing headlong to the sidewalk from a fire escape on the twelfth floor of the Marsh-Strong Building at Ninth and Spring streets, Mrs. Vida A. Lee, 33 years of age, a victim for the past two months of melancholia, yesterday morning ended her life. A telephone wire which turned her plunge saved the lives of several pedestrians.

A little son born March 23 of this year, the second child of the dead woman, according to her husband, Henry M. Lee, a well-known local attorney, was the indirect cause of the suicide. With the birth of the boy the mother, according to Mr. Lee, began to fail.

Slipping past a trained nurse, her mother and her husband, Mrs. Lee left her home at 228 South Harvard Boulevard at about 4 a.m. yesterday. At about 6 o'clock she was missed, and Nick Harris detectives were employed at once by the distracted husband to locate her. She was not found until her crushed body was picked up on Ninth street beside the building from which she had leaped.

PLUNGES TO DEATH.

From what investigating officers were able to learn from Traffic Officer A. C. McGuire, who saw Mrs. Lee make the fatal jump, the woman, fully dressed for the street, took the elevator to the twelfth floor of the Marsh-Strong Building at about 10 o'clock yesterday morning. She climbed to the fire escape at once and walked past the windows of the offices of M. O. Hooker. The offices were empty.

Climbing from the fire escape to the cornice of the building Mrs. Lee removed her hat and placed it with her purse on the fire escape. Then she seated herself on the cornice and waited until the street below her was clear. Patrolman McGuire, who saw her just before she leaped from the building, shouted to her to get back on the fire escape, and then yelled to pedestrians to clear the street. After swaying back and forth several times Mrs. Lee plunged head first toward the sidewalk.

Just in time to save their lives, Patrolman Maguire hurled into the gutter two women who stepped from the building. A man and a woman who alighted from a street car and walked into line with Mrs. Lee's fall were saved when she struck a telephone wire and fell several feet away on the sidewalk. She was dead when onlookers reached her. The body was removed to the Bramble Funeral Home.

In a statement to the police Mr. Lee, who before he began the practice of law was a newspaper man, declared that his wife had been under the care of several physicians and was attended by trained nurses.

Following a meeting at Mrs. Lee's church, during which the entire membership joined in praying for her recovery, the sick woman improved to such an extent, according to her husband, that a motor trip north was planned. They were to have started tomorrow. Following an evening of planning and packing, Mrs. Lee retired late Friday night. Her nurse, believing that the patient would sleep through the night, went to her own room. After everyone was asleep Mrs. Lee slipped from the house.

Mrs. Lee was active in church and Red Cross work. She was a graduate of Butler College in Indianapolis. Funeral services will be conducted Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock in the Wilshire-Boulevard Christian Church.

FILMS AS RIVAL OF BARD'S PLAYS.

Cinemas to be Shown in Shakespeare Memorial Theater.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

STRATFORD ON AVON, May 28.—Astonishment has been caused here by the announcement that the Shakespeare Memorial Theater is to be used as a moving-picture theater when the building is not needed for the production of Shakespearean plays. The governors of the memorial association made the decision on the recommendation of the executive committee, who urged that only high-class films be shown. It is understood that financial considerations led the association to take the step, which, in some quarters, is regarded as a desecration.

RAIN IN FOOTHILLS.

Fraction of Inch Gauged at Sierra Madre and Glendora.

A slight fall of rain visited the foothill section yesterday and contributed a fraction of an inch to the season's total. The fall was over a very limited section, with reports from Glendora showing precipitation of .11 of an inch and Sierra Madre .23 of an inch. This brings the total for the season at Monrovia up to 23.23 and at Sierra Madre to 23.53, as compared to 22.42 and 23.15 for last year at this time.

Meeting Described as Being Very Cordial.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, May 28.—George T. Summerlin, American Charge d'Affaires in this city, had a conference with President Obregon last night and it is said he handed to the President a memorandum from the State Department in Washington. No official statement was made regarding the meeting, which was described as extremely cordial.

NO ULTIMATUM.

The memorandum brought by Mr. Summerlin upon his return from Washington was said to be in no sense an ultimatum which called upon Mexico to sign a treaty or protocol as a condition to recognition. It also was asserted that it was not an embodiment of the report on Mexico submitted by Albert B. Fall, present Secretary of the Interior, when he was a member of the United States Senate.

Last night's conference between President Obregon and Mr. Summerlin was hurriedly arranged as soon as the Foreign Office was advised such a meeting was desired by the American Charge d'Affaires. The Test of Comparison

YOUR purchase of an automobile, if wisely made, will be determined only after a down-right, relentless, thorough comparison of values.

Your first impression will be favorable to those cars which dare invite comparison.

Your investment will be made in that car which stands the acid test—with a wide margin to spare.

You buy other things that way—why not automobiles?

Compare Today's Oakland Six with any car you may be thinking of buying.

Then judge for yourself which car possesses the greatest value for you.

You can prove Oakland value if you will. It is easy to do.

Above all, test Today's Oakland overhead valve engine. Compare it for power, performance, economy.

You will learn that its new light-weight pistons are now made of an aluminum alloy that is very light and tough.

They are self-adjustable to the cylinder walls.

You will learn we are now honing the cylinder bores to the perfect smoothness of glass.

You will find them absolutely round and straight up and down.

You will find we have effected an exceptionally close piston fit, at the same time avoiding the possibility of their sticking or freezing.

In these new pistons we have created a piston efficiency that is not surpassed, if equaled, in any other engine.

Today's Oakland Six sells at $1145 for the open cars and $1815 for the closed models, f. o. b. Pontiac—$250 less than they sold for prior to May 9th.

What car at Oakland's price has a six cylinder engine? There is none.

What car at Oakland's price has as much horsepower—44 H. P. at 2600 R. P. M. or 1 H. P. to every 55 pounds of car weight? There is none.

Fractured Pants Bring Divorce to Home in Chicago.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, May 28.—Here's the story of a pair of fractured pants that broke up a happy home. Mrs. Clarice Pease told it in court today and received a divorce decree from Ira Pease, owner of the pants, a commission merchant, on grounds of cruelty.

On Oct. 4, 1920, Ira came home and said he had torn his pants. Clarice asked that he wait until later in the evening and she would mend them. This aroused the ire of Ira, who yanked off the pants—in the presence of Mrs. Pease's sister-in-law—and swung them about his head. The suspenders caught on a gas chandelier, tearing it down and allowing gas to escape.

This irritated Ira some more and, pantsless, he proceeded to chase Clarice down the street. Clarice said she outdistanced her husband and returned to the home. She has not seen him since.

The West Henshaw is due here tomorrow to load about 1000 tons of Southern California products for Japan, China and the Philippines.

The Isthmian Line freighter Steel Inventor, which rammed and sank the destroyer Woolsey several months ago while en route from the local harbor to New York, will arrive here next Saturday from the east coast on her first visit since her collision with the destroyer in which several sailors lost their lives.

"RICK" ENDS AIR JOURNEY TO CAPITAL.

Noted Flier, After Several Mishaps, Lands Safely in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker completed his transcontinental flight here early tonight, landing at dusk at Bolling Field. He was forced down by a thunder storm in the West Virginia Mountains at 3 o'clock, but resumed his flight in one hour.

Rickenbacker arrive at 6:15 o'clock after officers at the field had decided he had been forced down and would not come tonight. He went immediately to the officers' quarters for a rest, but refused to discuss his trip, saying he was "all in." He did not know at what point he had stopped in the West Virginia Mountains.

After resting he donned evening dress and went to the Metropolitan Club, where he was a guest tonight at a private dinner given by Gen. Pershing to officers of the first American unit sent to France on the steamer Baltic.

Rickenbacker left Redwood City, Cal., last Thursday and after delays due to mishaps to his machine and transfers to others, completed the transcontinental flight in a little less than fifty-eight hours elapsed time.

Fires from Hotel Room Window With Rifle;; Kills Self With Revolver.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN DIEGO, May 28.—Firing from the window of his room in the second story of a local hotel, A. J. Cannon shot and almost instantly killed his wife, Mrs. Kathleen Cannon, as she walked along the opposite side of the street this afternoon and then shot himself in the head. He died a the County Hospital several hours later.

Cannon used a rifle to shoot his wife, from whom he was estranged. A revolver was used by the man in ending his own life.

Mrs. Cannon came to San Diego from Texarkana, Tex., three months ago, and was followed to the city by her husband. Cannon made futile efforts to induce her to return to him, friends of Mrs. Cannon said.

Cannon, who was a former postal railway clerk, served in the United States Army during the war and was a quartermaster-sergeant in France. He was 43 years old. His wife was 39. There are four children, all girls.

"Friends, Romans, countrymen," he vociferated, "lend me your ears!"

Mr. Edison's questionnaire reminds us of the story of the Irishman who, while undergoing the civil service examination for policemen, was asked if he knew the distance between Boston and San Francisco.

"Well, no, I don't know the distance exactly," he replied, "but if that's goin' to be my beat I don't want the job."—[Boston Transcript.

WE ALL DID.

One of the girls had spoken of a friend who shed tears each time her birthday came around in view of her advancing age. All the other guests had been but mildly interested save the lawyer, who removed his glasses and remarked quietly:

"That's odd. I believe there was only one birthday in my life when I cried."

"And that was—" assisted the pretty girl.

THERE'S A STORY TOLD BY EVERY COMB AND BRUSH

And more often it's the sad story of falling hair and dandruff. Why is it so many men and women absolutely neglect their hair, except to brush it two or three times a day—asks Prof. John H. Austin of Chicago, over 40 years a Hair and Scalp Specialist. If only the hair could ache or cause pain, there would be fewer cases of baldness and more people would have a luxuriant growth of beautiful lustrous hair.

Prof. Austin, who now has offices at Hamburger's, says that people who are at all troubled with any kind of hair and scalp trouble, such as itching scalp, falling hair, excessively oily hair, dry and brittle hair, dandruff, split hair, gray or faded hair, should have their hair examined at once under his powerful microscope.

During the last five years at Hamburger's Prof. Austin has made thousands of free microscopic examinations of the hair and scalp.

FREE MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATIONS of the hair and scalp, Prof. Austin's private office, Second Floor, Hamburger's. Hours 10 to 12 and 2 to 4 daily.—[Advertisement

XTRA DRY, FORECAST FOR STATE WHEN WRIGHT ACT'S EFFECTIVE.

l Hounds and Home-Brew Sniffers to be Multiplied ndefinitely Under Law That Starts Functioning Soon; City and County to Get Evasion Revenue.

xtra dry" is the forecast for California.

roceedings are to be speeded up on the precipitation circuit. It is no longer a question of if you will, but of drink if you can.

nter the Wright law. It is a State measure designed to make California as dry as dry , whatever that will be. It provides that all State, city and county officials shall enforce olstead Act, the national "bone-dry" measure that made the country in many places about y as a sponge in its native habitat.

will mean much in California, as much in Los Angeles, for city the police already are as a blotting paper agency al ordinance created before prohibition was decreed. most communities the police such power.

ever, Los Angeles may have dry ordinance, which will be keeping with national pro- than the old one. It will position No. 1 on the ballot municipal elections.

the police will not be the only hounds.

Wright law means, in the pat- of the streets and alleys, that copper, dick, constable, game forest ranger, smokestack and garbage man will be the California breezes for a of alcohol. Bootleggers, home- hair tonic druggists and all of bibblers are thunderstruck prospect.

EEK REFERENDUM.

California dry bill, which is Wright bill's given name, was by Assemblyman T. M. of San Jose, passed both and has been signed by the . It will go into effect unless a referendum petition, circulated, is filed in due If the referendum is success- bill will be on the ballot in 1922, and cannot be en- before that time.

Those courts full of them, especially the police as well as enforcement officers have in culprits. The would enable all mu- to pass ordinances for of the Volstead Act collect fines for violations —and here is the good news—would go into city or county treasuries. Where municipalities have dry ordinances, as in Los Angeles, police courts might handle dry cases; otherwise the Superior Court will try them. The Wright Act is not the Harris Act under another name, as it is considerably different from the Harris Act voted down at the last general election.

CONFUSION AND DELUGE.

Los Angeles' dry ordinance, the Gandier law, was passed March 31, 1918, and by using it the city gets the fines as it does not have to turn prisoners over to the Federal authorities.

There has been some confusion about this, however, and more confusion is expected when the Wright law gets working. It is bad enough when Federal, State, county and city sleuths step on one another's toes, but the jumble of moneys derived from fines—there's where there is likely to be a sharp difference of opinion. The Federal courts, however, will be glad to be rid of the deluge of booze cases.

The portions of the Los Angeles city ordinance under which bootleggers and other dealers in liquors are prosecuted are:

"(1.) Section 4—It shall be unlawful to have, keep or maintain any alcoholic liquor in any place of public resort or upon the premises of any club or association within the city of Los Angeles other than such place where liquor may legally be sold or served, provided that this shall not apply to the keeping of alcohol for scientific or mechanical purposes."

Also under the same section:

"It shall also be unlawful for the proprietor or manager of any place of public resort, club or association, where any alcoholic liquor may not be legally sold, to permit therein the drinking of any such liquor."

Under Section 13 of the same ordinance, it says:

"Any violation of this ordinance shall constitute a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500) or by imprisonment in the City Jail of Los Angeles for a period not to exceed six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

FOR FIRST OFFENSE.

These sections of the ordinance are used when blind pigs, houses that sell soft drinks that aren't, and the like are raided. For a second offense, however, a Federal charge is filed because in such event the Federal laws are more severe. In cases of moonshining, where whisky stills are used, Federal charges also are filed.

Prohibition has operated pretty effectively in Los Angeles, according to the evidence of figures. Arrests for drunkenness made by the police here in 1917 numbered 16,430; in 1918, 9520; 1919, 5340; 1920, 3277. But 1921 efficiency does not seem to be so great as 1920, for in January, February, March and April of last year, 799 arrests for intoxication were made while in the first four months of this year 1900 have been made.

The ordinance to be voted on here June 7 is a municipal edition of the Volstead Act. Similar measures have been taken at Sacramento and other cities. This is being done as an aid to the Federal government, which hasn't had the men and means to arrest and prosecute. The proposed ordinance was passed by the City Council, but the wets got busy with a referendum petition. A referendum election would have cost too much, and so the Council repealed the ordinance, but slapped it onto the ballot as No. 1.

This ordinance would supersede in fact, the Gandier ordinance because it is drafted to operate with the national prohibition law. It also would fit into the scheme, as nearly as anything appears to fit, of the Wright Act.

WILL BE VALUABLE.

The Wright Act, when it becomes effective, will be a valuable aid along the California-Lower California border, where smuggling of the stuff made in Old Mexico or imported there from Europe, is easy by the very nature of things. It takes many eyes to detect a fat Mexican woman made only slightly fatter by the application of seventeen hot water bottles not filled with hot water, strolling through the brush. Then they make wine in California, a natural consequence of growing grapes, and the United States officials recently began action to seize and sell some wineries, the proprietors of which are accused of making other than Chautaqua circuit grape juice.

The enforcement of the liquor laws has been conducted by the Federal government ever since the passage of what is known as the wartime prohibition law. The Volstead Act came in Oct. 28, 1919, and the constitutional amendment June 17, 1920.

United States Commissioner Long took office April 30, 1918, succeeding the late Daniel M. Hammack. From that date up to the present he has had 2125 cases on his calendar that have been tried, and of that total more than 75 per cent arose from the violation of the liquor laws in one guise or another. Day after day his entire time has been taken up with liquor hearings. His calendar today is completely filled with such prosecutions. The fees growing out of the trial of these cases, complaints, etc., have averaged Commissioner Long more than $2000 a year.

SOURCE OF REVENUE.

The assessment of fines under the liquor laws has been a prolific source of revenue to the government. From Sept. 1, 1919, to date more than $135,000 has been paid by Charles N. Williams, clerk of the U. S. District Court, into the United States Treasury on account of violations of the liquor laws. Of this sum, more than $100,000 has been paid in the local and San Diego courts, the balance at the sessions of the Federal court in Fresno. These figures do not include the total amount of fines assessed but only those paid.

The judgment of the court fixing liquor fines does not mean in all cases that they will be paid. This is especially true among some foreigners who are constant violators of these laws, but seldom pay the fines charged when a plea of guilty is entered or a conviction by a jury. The defendants go to jail, and after spending thirty days in addition to any other term imposed, take a pauper's oath and are released. And in most of the cases they go right out and again violate the law. They can't get away from the jail sentences, but when the judge fixes the

TIJUANA'S RED LIGHTS TO FADE.

Monte Carlo of Clean Sports and Beauty Spots to Rise Out of Iniquitous Chaos at Picturesque Border Resort, Declaration of Promoters.

Tijuana, iniquitous eyesore of Baja California, where vice has thrived beneath the protecting wings of gilded politicians and gamblers, is soon to emerge from its chrysalis. As the radiant-winged butterfly arises from its ugly pupa so shall a new and radiant Tijuana be born out of the unsightly shell that now hugs the Mexican boundary line, seventeen miles south of San Diego.

Such is the prediction of Jerome Bassity, San Francisco capitalist, who recently acquired possession of the property occupied by the Lower California Jockey Club. With several million dollars to back him up, and with the approval of President Obregon and of Epigmenio Ybarra, Governor of Baja California, Mr. Bassity stated yesterday, his engineers within a few weeks will begin preliminary construction work on the new Tijuana, a fashionable year-around pleasure resort and playground of millionaires, where privileges forbidden in the United States will be enjoyed.

Amidst the barren sand dunes that surround the existing Mexican town, a beautiful semitropical resort is to be created. Paved boulevards with ornamental lighting systems will honeycomb the sand dunes. Fashionable residential districts, where the man of wealth may erect his summer or winter home—for it is to be a year-around resort—will be surveyed and laid out.

The old town of Tijuana huddles against the international line along the west bank of the Tijuana River. The new development work will embrace over 400 acres of open land to the east and southeast of the present site. The race track, pavilion, clubhouse, grand stand and stables, though they are now a twenty-minute walk over hot sands from the existing village, will be in the heart of the new project. They are to be improved, with semitropical gardens surrounding them, and within the race track enclosure, now planted to grain, an artificial lake is to be constructed.

EXCLUSIVE SHOPS.

Business concerns will be located in an area to be set apart for them on the west bank of the river. Exclusive shops will be found in another area to be set aside for them. The civic center, with its municipal buildings, is to arise between the two areas, and adjoining the civic center, in the vicinity of the bullring, a residential section for those of moderate means is to be provided.

Along the esplenada, with its promenades skirting the eastern bank of the river, promenaders may stroll beneath the shady trees. Adjacent to the esplenada a large area has been set aside for business residences. In another quarter of the proposed townsite a modern hotel of 500 rooms is to be erected. Arrangements for other hotels are being completed. These are to be linked to the race track by a picturesque park. Cafes and shops will be likewise segregated, but conveniently close to the race track

An athletic field and polo grounds also will add to the pleasures available at the proposed resort. A midway, harboring numerous concessions, will adjoin it.

To the east of the San Diego and Arizona Railroad and separated from the business and amusement areas, it is planned to establish the exclusive residential section. A system of boulevards has been devised, all of which, in fan-like fashion, will taper northward to the Country Club and its surrounding gardens. Here, also just a stone's throw from the United States, the Greek Theater and the Horticultural Park will be situated.

Nor have the sponsors of the project overlooked the religious and educational sides of civic life. A church and a school are to be erected near the tract set aside for villa sites. The city will also possess an industrial area, a boarding house area, stockyards, light, power and water plants, in addition to a refrigerating plant and a reservoir. These will furnish the light, heat and water power to the city. The sewage, according to present plans, will be disposed of in septic tanks, to be located at the southwest boundary of the townsite.

Throughout the entire area will be sprinkled small plazas and parkways, each to be adorned by monuments and works of sculpture. Civil and landscape engineers are now in Tijuana conducting their preliminary survey for the Zaragosa Development Company.

"We plan to install modern water, electric, and heating and sewage systems, to irrigate the land, to lay out streets and boulevards and subdivide the property in such a way as to procure a beautifying effect that will attract not only America's wealthy classes, but the tourists of Canada and Europe as well," said F. E. Monteverde yesterday. Mr. Monteverde is the local legal representative of the Zaragosa Investment Company.

WINTER RESORT.

"Not only is it our purpose to make Tijuana a winter resort, but to construct our project in such a way as to keep it permanently opened throughout the year. We believe that Tijuana and its surroundings can be made into one of the most attractive recreation spots in the world, not only for wealthy Americans and Mexicans, but for those of Europe and Canada as well.

"In effecting our project our only preoccupation will be to foment the highest degree of morality in the

TORTURES BY SLAV REDS TURN FAITH TO HATRED.

Soul of Mittri Schwartz Americanized by Terrible Ordeal Under the Communistic Despotism.

BY S. FRED HOGUE.

It was my privilege during the last week to witness the final process of the Americanization of Mittri Alexandrovich Schwartz. The true narrative of the remaking of the mind of this Russian-born radical Socialist and disciple of Karl Marx, of the dispelling of his illusions, of the tortures of the Communistic inquisition, on a stage extending half way around the world, produces scenes that approach at times the primitive sublimity of the early Greek tragedy.

Just twelve months ago M. A. Schwartz of San Francisco, then an active member of the American Federation of Labor, organizer for the Amalgamated Street Railway Workers of America and national lecturer for the Socialist party, left California for Russia as a delegate to the second congress of the Third Communist Internationale.

He was accompanied by his wife, also a Socialist lecturer and members of the executive board of the Socialist party for the State of California. She was known to the Socialist press as Jessie M. Molle, and was, likewise, a delegate to the Third Communist Internationale.

VICTIM OF PRISON.

Jessie Molle will never again see the poppies bloom and hear the mocking birds sing, or clasp her chil- to her breast in her beloved California. She sleeps beneath the snows in faraway Reval, Esthonia, a victim of four months' privation and starvation in two Communist military prisons.

Her husband is back in California, only a shadow of the vigorous, stalwart worker who left here so happily a year ago, brimming with enthusiasm over the prospect of seeing with his own eyes the dear fatherland, which fourteen years before he had left crushed politically under the regime of the Czars, but which under the Red regime appeared as a land of promise to the workers of the world.

"I told my comrades when we were leaving San Francisco that it seemed like starting on a new honeymoon," he said to me last week with an appealing look of mental hunger in eyes so characteristic of the Slav mystic. "How glorious it all seemed! But how was I to know that I was leading Jessie in her funeral march?"

"I left the workers of Russia under the political rule of Nickoli Romanoff, an autocrat; but they enjoyed a measure of personal liberty unbelievable in the United States, where we have political freedom but a system of blue laws as bad as serfdom.

"I found them crushed, starving and helpless under the bloody despotism of Nickoli Lenine. Instead of gaining political freedom they had lost industrial freedom, social freedom,, religious freedom—lost even the means of supporting life.

BORN IN RUSSIA.

"I was born in Russia, lived there for thirty-five years, ten of which were spent in the Czar's army. I left my country a radical, seeking the political freedom which there was impossible. I associated myself with the Socialist groups in America. I campaigned for Eugene Debs and other Socialist candidates for national offices. I aided in organizing the street railway workers. I married an American woman who was devoting her life to the Socialist cause.

"When the Russian revolution broke I believed that the workers of the world were coming into their own. My wife and I were appointed delegates representing the Socialist party in the United States at the Third Internationale. We went to Russia, believing in the Communist government as we believed in God."

Here he stopped and passed his hand across his forehead as though seeking to drive away torturing thoughts. Then he proceeded in a changed voice:

"It was like a beautiful dream that turns into a nightmare. All injustice I had ever seen in the world would not equal that which occurs in the passage of a single sun in Russia now.

"I was the victim of my own illusions. They cost me my wife. I am on my way back to my two children in San Francisco, both less than ten years old. What shall I say when their eyes and their voices ask me for their mother? I can carry them only a few trinkets and the picture of the grave in which she sleeps and the coffin in which she lies.

FOE OF COMMUNISM.

"I can see farther now. There are griefs so poignant that they give to one a second sight. The a vital force!

"Theoretically music is a gratuity, a luxury; practically, it has proven itself to be a necessity. The simple truth is that one of the vital forces of a nation is its Music, and that in the accomplishment of a huge task wherein all its energizing processes are required the value of Music should be carefully regarded."
—Col. E. M. Markham.

CONSUL SCORES CRITIC OF CUBA.

Pastor's Slap at Morality of Havana Rouses Ire.

Representative Here Replies to Published Articles.

Attack Insults Women and Children, is Assertion.

The criticism of the morality of Havana by the Rev. G. L. Morrell in Heart's Los Angeles Examiner has brought forth a vigorous denial by Dr. Jose S. Saenz, Consul of Cuba at this port. Dr. Saenz in a letter sent to The Times says:

"The respect due to women, children and to the country which extends to us sincere hospitality was entirely overlooked by the eminent reverend gentleman, bringing upon himself by his rudeness the ill-feeling, the contempt which befalls all ungrateful men.

"As nature had to go through many a cataclysm and through an enormous length of time to reach its present degree of development and perfection, thus, humanity (and it is hard to admit it) has to go through the same process to reach a higher degree of betterment and development. Humanity is a proteus which we can penetrate only by taking all its aspects into consideration at one time.

IDLERS MET.

"It is to be regretted that in Cuba, my beloved country, the Rev. Mr. Morrell was denied the honor of visiting the Academy of Sciences, the National University, the Cuban Athenaeum, the Lawyers' Club, the farms, the sugar plantations and the homes of respectable people.

"The same thing happened to him that happens to most of us who come to this civilized and progressive great country without the knowledge of the national language. Our first acquaintances are made among those people who have no particular business to attend to and the adventuresome kind.

"There are things which should not be written, nor spoken of, nor thought of, even if they were prone to serve a good purpose. One runs the risk of extinguishing virtue's flame by blowing very hard, or of vitiating it if one feeds it with noxious gases. Logic should govern the world, but unfortunately, the world cannot and will not be governed by mere logic.

"I know that, although many men very often act, following the voice of their own interest, whether it be for good or for evil, this interest is not the only cause of their actions nor the standard of their morals. Men never measure the merit or demerit of their actions by the profit they derive from them: if it were thus there would be a moral for each case, and whatever means were used to attain the end would be justified. And this moral is the basis of tyranny.

PROTESTS CRITICISM.

"In the name of Cuba, in the name of the noble American blood spilled on Cuban soil, in the name of the Stars and Stripes that, together with the Solitary Star, has floated over Cuban soil, in the name of the worthy Cubans who sacrificed their lives for the love of their country so as to give our mothers and children a respected place in the world, I do hereby raise a protest before the American people, as Consul of Cuba and as a Cuban citizen, against the insults that the Rev. Mr. Morrell has so gratuitously hurled at Cuban women and their children, and against the American people whose very own work is thus outraged."

The article by the Rev. Mr. Morrell, which was printed in various cities in the United States, has aroused a storm of protest from Cubans resident here, announces Dr. Saenz, and has occasioned a protest from the Minister of Cuba at Washington. He thinks the article "will take more undesirables to Cuba than it will keep decent Americans away."

ALTERS DATE OF BROOKLYN EAGLE TOUR.

Newspaper Will Start Party to Hawaii via Los Angeles on June 11.

Responding to the desires of many prospective participants in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle's Hawaiian National Park dedication tour, the sailing of the Matson Line steamship Hawkeye State from Baltimore has been changed from June 1 to June 11, it was announced yesterday.

According to the tentative itinerary the party will return to Brooklyn on August 5, spending the intervening eight weeks in what is said will be one of the most remarkable 16,000-mile journeys ever undertaken by a group of American tourists.

Answering an official invitation from Secretary Albert B. Fall, the Brooklyn Eagle has organized a tour to the Hawaiian Islands to dedicate the Hawaiian National Park. By act of Congress the areas covered by the great Hawaiian craters have just been taken over by the Territorial government. These will be formally turned over to the American public in July, at the ceremonies in which the Eagle party will participate.

The party of about 125 persons will sail for Honolulu on June 11 from Baltimore, by way of Havana, Cuba; the Panama Canal, Los Angeles and San Francisco. The membership of the tour already includes a number of well-known Brooklynites. Preliminary reservations have exhausted all the available accommodations, but it is possible that there will be a chance for later applicants because of the dropping out of some of those who registered when the tour was first announced. Applications for membership may be filed with the Eagle information bureau, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The party will arrive at Los Angeles Harbor, June 27, and proceed to Riverside, through this city.

SKILLED PLAYERS IN "THE TEMPEST" CAST.

SHAKESPEARE MYSTERY PLAY TO BE PRESENTED IN HOLLYWOOD BOWL.

"The Tempest" will be given Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock in the Hollywood Bowl. Shakespeare's play of mystery will have a highly suitable setting, and will be produced by a skilled company of players. The Pilgrimage Play Choir will take part.

"'The Tempest' outspirits the most advanced spiritualist and is at the same time a veritable dissection of the human soul," says David Edstrom. "The cast of players that will produce the play is exceedingly good and all lovers and young souls who have not lost the capacity to thrill to the dramatic and the unusual should not lose the opportunity. The setting is perhaps the most wonderful in the world for just this play."

The following will compose the cast: H. Ellis Reed, Maryland Morne, Charles A. Smily, John MacFralane, Lorenza Lazzarini, Max Pollock, Albert Feller, Jeffrey Williams, Theodor von Eltz, Winthrop Kelly, Herbert A. NEW ISOLATION BUILDING OPEN.

Children's Home Institution Gets Needed Unit.

Made Possible by Commerce Bodies of City.

Society Places Thousands of Youngsters in Homes.

The new isolation building of the Children's Home Society of California at Twenty-fifth street and Griffith avenue has been opened. Its equipment was made possible by donations from the Commercial Board and the Advertising Club.

The new unit is for the detention of newly arrived children during the period they might develop contagious diseases and also is equipped for the treatment of any disorders, having in constant attendance a physician and nurse.

DRIVELESS INSTITUTION.

The Children's Home Society is supported solely by contributions from the public, but conducts no drives for funds. It co-operates with all agencies doing child-work in Los Angeles, and its usefulness is of a highly economic value. It is not an orphanage, but a clearing-house for children, all of whom are adopted and placed in private homes. In twenty-three years 1400 children from Los Angeles county alone were placed in homes; in all 3786 have been placed. Their detention and instruction at the home for from six months to one year and other costs made an average of $269 for each child. In orphanages it costs about $200 a year for the care of a child, and the average residence at that cost is of ten year.s

The society has several adoptable children at present. The inmates average eighteen, but forty-five children may be accommodated at a time. The society at present has 386 children under supervision for a period that lasts from six months to a year. Some children are not adoptable; these are placed in homes on contract until they are 18 years of age.

DONATIONS MADE.

Several organizations and individuals combined to equip the detention unit, in the building formerly used for the society's offices. The Commercial Board donated the physician's and nurse's quarters and hospital equipment, and the Advertising Club the sun parlor, which is a play room as airy as the out-of-doors.

The business and advertising men have taken a keen interest in the work of the society.

The Advertising Club contributed to the support of three little boys, while the Commercial Board selected another as its mascot, and donated a round sum for his care. The Ladies' Work Club of the First Congregational Church of Los Angeles donated and equipped three baby hospital beds, and the philanthropic committee of the Pomona Congregational Church a supply of sheets and blankets.

FARMER MARINERS.

In Illinois They Anchor Their Chicken Coops in May.

For Illinois River bottom farmers down Antioch way the month of May is always as merry as a movie, but this spring previous excitements have been surpassed.

Antioch farmers have to put anchors on their chicken coops and crows' nests on their barns, for the spring floods are likely to send the whole farm cruising. Every old-time Antiocher invariably refers to the barnyard as the fo'c's'le, and the plow boys hitch up their trousers like the mariners they are instead of tightening galluses, yokel fashion.

Oh, it's a gay life. One may plow and sow and reap like any farmer through the summer and shovel corn to the stock all winter, but just as soon as the snow begins to thaw there's a change. Then it's yo-ho, boys, and away for the bounding main!

Perched comfortably in the windows (they call 'em ports in Antioch) of their parlors (meaning cabins,) the Antioch farmers pass the spring days in seafaring fashion, shooting the sun, sounding bottom half a dozen times a day and chuckling over the amusing pranks of the freshet.

"By gum, there goes old Pete Brown's new chicken coop. I told him to nail her down. And, look there, would you? The Hickes's pigs is riding past on their barn door. . . . Mary lok out and see if our windmill's still fast!"

Such is the vernal routine of Antioch. This spring, as has been suggested, is outdoing the thrills of other years. So W. H. Smart, who owns a bottom farm just half a mile west of the town, says, anyhow.

"Never saw a spring like it," said he, bringing marine intelligence into Waukegan. "Good for me, too. I'm sitting on the deck the other day, hailing such craft as cow barns and fences and tossing a line now and then to a swimming pig when I sights a strange bottom moving toward me.

"'Shivers me timbers.' I sings out to the first mate, my oldest boy, Cast your peppers nor' by nor'east, will you, and see if you can make out what's just abaft us?'

"'I'm swizzled,' says he. 'It's a haystack, if I know a scow from a clipper.'

"And so it was. She comes up, all sails set, looking like a frigate, and steers dead ahead for my barn. That doesn't worry me, for the old barn's anchored fore and aft, and I waits for developments.

"Believe me or not, that haystack tacks about and sails into the barn door as neat as you please. Never see a cleaner docking, not in forty year of Antioch seagoing, man and boy. And she's still there."

Ah, yes! Farming's a great life down Antioch way. If you're born for seafaring.—[Chicago Evening Post.

Attractiveness of Advertising.

The man who doubts whether advertisements are read is living in the past, says the Shoe and Leather Reporter. Editors are beginning to fear they will be crowded out so attractive have the advertising pages become. The editor experiences difficulty in holding the attention of his readers today against the picturesque announcement of those who can have all the white space they are able to pay for.

READY FOR BIBLE OPERA.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

POMONA, May 28.—With final rehearsals and preparations completed, all is in readiness for the presentation of the biblical opera, "Samson and Delilah," which is to be given in the Greek Theater at Ganesha Park next Tuesday evening by the combined community choruses of Pomona, Upland and Ontario. More than 200 voices will be heard in the chorus renditions, while some of the leading soloists on the Pacific Coast will sing the solo parts of the production.

Extensive lighting arrangements have been made, and with the natural outdoor setting, the production will prove a rare musical treat to the large audience expected to attend.

S. Earle Blakeslee of Ontario has had charge of the chorus direction of the opera, which is being staged under the auspices of the Ganesha Players of Pomona. The production is to be repeated in the Chaffey Union auditorium at Ontario June 3, and is expected to be the first of a series of annual festivals of music in which all the cities of the Pomona Valley are to participate. Plans are already under way to stage the event next year on a larger scale than ever.

Mme. Anna Sprotte, Raymond Harmon and Harry De La Platte, all of Los Angeles, will be heard in the heavier solo parts, and will be assisted by many well-known soloists from the various communities in the valley.

The accompaniment will be played by the Ontario Community Orchestra.

DICE, DESTINY AND NICOTINE.

Galloping Ivories Playthings of Society Women and Shop Girls for Long Time—Distinct Feminine Lure in Cigarettes.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

Shall we confess or let Stanley take the blame?

You see, one Sanley E. Bailey, a dubious male of dishonored check propensities, is being accorded the distinction of having taught San Francisco society dames to shake dice. The San Francisco police are quite worried about it. Have they, indeed, failed in their protective duty towards the innocence of society dames? It apepars that the gentleman held "classes" at the stylish Hotel Del Monte, but without the sanction of the university extension.

HANNAH IF AH LOSES AH GOES TO WURK IF AH WINS—YO' TAKES IN WASHIN'
COME AWN YO' BOX CAHRS

It may be, of course, that Stanley did lead the unsophisticated social elect of San Francisco astray, but Stanley must be as old as Methusalah if he introduced the naughty squares into Los Angeles society. Bless you, dice and destiny have been the playthings of society dames and shop girls for lo, these many moons.

We've settled golf ties at the country club, partners at the dances, proposals of marriage and even the name of the new baby on the decisions of the shimmyful dice, never realizing that crime and sin lurked in the cute little cubes with their fateful dots. In our innocence we thought it rather jolly to have such a simple solution to our problems, destiny's mighty decisions ready to hand neatly boxed.

THOUSANDS LOST.

But in the light of Stanley's exposure, we sorrowfully perceive the San Francisco society dames' shame. For they, you see, lost—real money, too. Thousands, you know. And the more you lose the wickeder you are. Oh, yes, it is just as well to let Stanley take the blame for that.

When the saucy dice have gone against our own best judgments, anent say, the baby's name, for instance, we have suspected their innocence, doubted their impartiality. And if they allowed Stanley to mulct those innocent dames of all that money, they are certainly no gentlemen. Perhaps, after all, we have been unwise to let them associate with us.

One girl I know, who selected her husband with their aid, must be convinced of their mischievous intent. If she had trusted to her own judgment she couldn't have done any worse.

BAN ON SMOKING.

And on the very same day the news carried another dreadful item. The No-Tobacco League asked the Long Beach Board of Education to forbid its school-teachers to smoke. Long Beach, mind you. Now if that request had been addressed to New York, or San Francisco, or even cinematic Los Angeles, we might have believed that a lone school-teacher here and there may have been seduced to nicotinal crime. But we shudder to think that any feminine school-teacher in Long Beach could have so far forgotten herself.

The published request promptly conjured up visions of dashing vamps with ruby lips and blonde hair and short skirts puffing smoke in the face of shuddering childhood, especially as the board graciously undertook "not to dismiss peremptorily those teachers now employed who are smokers, but to investigate how extensively the weed is being used and to ask those who have the habit to cease smoking."

If this tentative admission can come from Long Beach, what can be expected of Los Angeles?

What, with society dames shooting craps, and school-teachers smoking cigarettes, we may well shudder for feminine emancipation.

Sisters, sisters, you may vote with the men, work with the men, study with the men, marry the men, but ye gods, you mustn't smoke and shoot craps with them. There must be a limit to this equality stuff. What is sauce for the goose is very, very saucy for the gander.

SO DAINTY, SO FEMININE.

Yet how natural that we should have fallen—what could seem more innocent to our unsophisticated eyes than those little square toy cubes decorated with dainty dots; those little white paper rolls from which smoke curls so gracefully? Such cute little things, so dainty, so—well, dash it all, so feminine. Almost like kindergarten playthings. Surely masculinity could not have designed such cutey little toys for itself.

And say, poor Eve did not invent cigarettes and dice, too, did she? Adam, Adam, where are you, what have you done to us? You said we were temperamental and hysterical, hypersensitive and illogical—and that you smoked because smoking soothed you. You said that we had faulty judgment, that we were capricious, never knew our own minds—and that you shook dice because you were good sports, accepted quick decisions and took splendid chances. Can you wonder that we adopted your remedies, imitated your fine manly sports?

And now look what you've done for us. Oh, Adam!

Barker Bros., being the largest retail distributors of Simmons Metal Beds in the world, display many exclusive patterns of these Beds.

As a matter of your protection you should demand to see the contents of the mattress you contemplate purchasing.

The greater portion of the better class of Barker Bros.' Own-Make Mattresses and Box Springs and many of the more desirable patterns of Simmons Metal Beds are included—at very important reductions—in Barker Bros.' 41st Annual Summer Sale.

The "Sleep of a Child" Blesses Those of Any Age—Whose Beds Are Right

There was a time in the lives of most of us when we could "sleep on a rock;" that was in the days when childish play and an untroubled mind made us blissfully impervious to the discomforts of a poor bed.

But, when the superb vitality of youth begins to wane, the tired mind is constantly on the alert to receive messages of distress from the subconscious mind, and sleep is seriously hindered.

Persons who have reached or passed middle age, and invalids, will find that sleep comes much more easily if the bed fits the body, offering no resistance to relaxation.

Barker Bros.' Mattresses and Box Springs Promote Sleep—Simmons Noiseless Metal Beds Allow Sleep to Continue Uninterrupted

Barker Bros.' Own-Make Mattresses are so soft and resilient that they yield to the slightest pressure upon them, instead of themselves imposing pressure upon over-strained nerves and muscles.

In spite of their scientific construction and the superior quality of the materials of which they are made, Barker Bros.' Mattresses are surprisingly low in price.

Barker Bros.' Box Springs supplement the fitting qualities of our Mattresses by possessing certain features such as individually hand-tied coils, which enable each part of the springs to respond to just that degree of pressure upon that particular part.

Simmons Metal Beds are so substantially constructed that there are no annoying sounds or movements to be conveyed to the mind of the sleeper.
They are made in the popular period styles and in the accepted finishes.

GLAD HANDS.

The new Secretary of the Navy hopes to spend a week in Los Angeles shortly. We hope so, too. Likewise, we may assure him that the week will be neither unpleasant nor unprofitable.

WHOLESALERS ALL.

A couple of dozen bandits got together in an eastern city and held up and robbed a freight train of six truckloads of merchandise with which they gaily and proudly drove away. It would be perfectly safe to call this wholesale robbery. This is getting to be a great country.

STRIPPED.

The government has taken Grover Cleveland Bergdoll's money and property away from him. That was about all that gave him the chance to disgrace himself in the first place. Had he had neither money nor property he might have behaved. Certainly he would not have been given notoriety.

THE SPENDERS.

The Illinois Legislature is proposing to double the State inheritance tax and also put an extra levy of one cent on every gallon of gasoline sold. Since Gov. Lowden laid down the cares of state the spenders are getting back into the saddle and giving the taxpayers something more to worry about.

HOW COME?

Senator Lodge is another of those opinionated persons who declare that the people of the United States voted against the League of Nations. When was the vote taken? It was the Republican National Committee who urged all friends of a League to vote for Harding as the surest means of obtaining an agreement. Are these to be now charged with purposely voting against their own desires?

CUPID IN COMMAND.

The new Chief of Police in Kansas City has sent out the word through his department that lovers in the parks and public places are to be let alone. If a swain would kiss his sweetheart at the mouth of the Kaw he may do so and crow about it afterwards. The town will be made a spooner's paradise if possible. It will be fine if Kansas City can be put to some use aside from separating sheep from goats.

A WOMAN'S PARIS.

Somebody wonders why it is that Paris can set the fashion for women all over the world, but can do nothing with the men. Frenchmen and Paris dressmakers design many of the smart styles for the ladies of England and America, but the Paris tailor wears no halo so far as the United States is concerned. The American Beau Brummel may have his togs created in London, but not in the French capital. The Frenchman is a wonder when he comes to adorn his woman, but his imagination appears to be circumscribed when it comes to arraying himself. Something black and shiny is about as far as he gets. About every twenty years he gets an idea. The men are becoming almost as capricious as the matrons in the choice of raiment, but Paris does little to stimulate the masculine fancy.

WHAT DO THEY THINK?

The United States Senate refuses to permit America to participate in any disarmament conference sponsored by the League of Nations or called by the nations parties thereto. Congress is going ahead with a construction program that is expected to give this country the largest navy in the world. The War Department is strenuously urging plans and appropriations for a much larger army than had originally been provided for. Societies have been formed to stimulate racial opposition to the Japanese; to fight for the freedom of Ireland and to boycott Great Britain. We are writing notes to this nation and that, telling them what to do in case of fire or how to behave at a turnfest. The question is, how far does this go in assuring the world that our ideals are all of peace and brotherly love? One wing of the Senate is clamoring for national isolation, but does this program sound like it?

KNOCKING THE DANCE.

The W.C.T.U. convention at Pomona, claiming to represent 6000 women of California, passed resolutions denouncing the dance and urging the State Superintendent of Schools and all other educational authorities to abolish any and all forms of dancing in the public schools and colleges of the State. They declare that even the folk dances in the kindergartens are sensual and that therefore no steps are safe. The surest salvation is to abolish 'em all. The classic posing of the ancient Greeks was but the prelude of the maddening St. Vitus dance of today. Knock 'em all in the head, say the good ladies of the W.C.T.U. If our young people must dissipate, let them flatten their noses against the window pane and watch the geraniums grow. The public schools must not and shall not be used as a junction point for all the roads that lead to perdition. Certainly those who would dance their way should not receive their training in the schools provided by our taxpayers. It was certain that this jazz business would stir the temperate women in time

FIGHTING THE RED PLAGUE.

WHO seeks popular applause must beware of uttering unpleasant truths. "The public," said Ruskin, "is a big baby that asks only to be flattered and amused." No one in his senses would accuse The Times of responsibility for unhealthy moral and unsanitary physical conditions that have been found to exist in a restricted section of the city of Los Angeles; but it has been roundly denounced by the malignant and thoughtless for possessing sufficient moral courage to expose them and demand that they shall be corrected. If our detractors could have their way, the violations of laws and morals would be condoned and The Times would be suppressed.

But it is a risky plan to try to clear a murderer by killing all the witnesses for the prosecution. The average morality of Los Angeles is exceptionally high, but it is not wholly free from the plague spots that infest all large cities. It is not and has never boasted of being "chemically pure." The existence of a vice district infected with germs of the red plague, has been signaled by the Federal authorities. Cost what it may, both must be eradicated.

Heads of the Navy Department have found in the reports of the medical officers of the United States fleet and of the local submarine base indisputable evidence of an alarming increase in the number of cases of venereal disease among the seamen granted shore leave to visit Los Angeles. They have traced the infections to the underworld here and they have made written remonstrances to Mayor Snyder and reported the conditions to the head of the Navy Department in Washington.

Three months ago, the Mayor received a written communication from Commander Shackford of the submarine base at San Pedro that the pitfalls of the underworld in the city must be eradicated or it might become necessary to refuse to the men shore leave to visit the city.

Within the last week a letter has been made public in Washington, in which Rear-Admiral Welles, commanding the Eleventh Naval District, appealed to the Navy Department for permission and funds to permit the navy itself to clean up Los Angeles without further delay. Since Capt. Shackford sent his communication to the Mayor there had been an increase of 206 cases of venereal diseases in the local navy hospital sheets in a single month. Far from improving, conditions were growing rapidly worse.

When copies of these letters were received by The Times, it could not, without a plain evasion of its duty, refuse to make them public. One of them had already reached the press in Washington. To have chosen the culpable part of silence, as certain other local papers did, would have been of no avail. Such a course was both dishonest and futile. The conditions are impossible of concealment. The press of Philadelphia tried to suppress warnings received from the Navy Department under similar conditions in 1918. The result was a sweeping order denying shore leave to sailors in that city. The culpability of the press only added to the scandal.

Public opinion is the most powerful force in the country at the present time. The Times has confidence that the truthful and not exaggerated statement of the conditions which it has given to the public will hasten the cleaning-up process which is imperative if the health of the city itself is to be protected. Does anyone imagine the criticism of the outside world would have been less severe if the facts had been concealed here and given publication elsewhere?

It is significant that the protests against the exposure of the vice conditions found by the Navy Department in Los Angeles have all come from sources that are now supporting Mayor Snyder for re-election. They say it is a political movement in the interest of his opponent. The authenticity of the copies of the letters from the naval officers published by The Times has since been attested to by the officers themselves. And The Times calls the attention of its detractors to the legal maxim, "Truth is never slander." If the Mayor's chances for re-election have been injured by reason of the vice expose, the fault lies with him for permitting such nests of vice to exist and multiply in the face of repeated official warnings and not with The Times for exposing them. That certain newspapers remained silent for political considerations simply discloses the depth of their moral degradation.

If the Police Commission had moved as promptly to destroy the vice nests of the underworld on the receipt of Commander Shackford's communication three months ago as it did to close the "Pink Rat," the communication from Rear-Admiral Welles would not have been necessary. But the fault is not with the Commissioners. The Mayor failed to take them into his confidence, and they were not aware the Shackford letter had been written until they were informed of it by The Times. The letter was then a month old.

Stung by the lash of indignant public opinion the Mayor and Police Commission have taken action which should result in the immediate cleaning-up of the vice-infested district. The police CAN do so, and if properly instructed, The Times has full confidence that they will do so, and that the city will not be subjected to the humiliation of seeing haunts of vice unmolested by the police but picketed by a navy patrol. There is no secret about locations. A number of the resorts are notorious. The inmates are known to the police. That they have remained undisturbed so long is a public scandal. The upright citizens of Los Angeles will not question the good faith either of the naval officers in demanding that the vice dens be closed or of The Times in showing that the present administration, despite repeated remonstrances, has permitted them to continue to exist. As for the element which cries that the clean-up movement will hurt business, The Times retorts that no honest business will be injured thereby, and that the more the other kind of business is discouraged, the better it will be for the moral and physical health of the community.

GREATER UNIVERSITY—STRAIGHT AHEAD.

A Greater Southern California demands a Greater University of Southern California. The attainment depends on the efforts of all our citizens.

Countless have been the agencies employed to advance the interests of Los Angeles and the Southwest. Home-product weeks, business expositions, citrus shows, floral pageants, live-stock fairs, marketing campaigns, parades, processions, posters, special newspaper issues, illustrated brochure—all have been called into the service and all have helped to advance the cause.

Of all our home-made products none is more vital to the solid establishment of a Greater Southern California than home-made education.

We do not mean by this that a liberal education obtained in other States will not find here many useful fields in which to apply that knowledge. Eastern education has done its part in the development of the West, especially in those early days before our own facilities had been rendered available.

Greater Southern California will require every year a greater army of foresighted leaders. To supply these leaders Los Angeles must have a greater home university. Western-trained men and women for western work is not narrow sentiment; it is broad, common-sense business.

Los Angeles is fortunate to possess in the University of Southern California such a home center of education. The growth of that university is a fine yard-stick by which to measure the growth of the whole Southwest. Moreover, it is the duty of all loyal sons and daughters of the Southwest to make sure that this educational growth continues to keep pace with the industrial growth, so that it may never be said that Los Angeles failed to support the most vital of all its wealth producers—home-made education.

Our University of Southern California has to appeal to the public for necessary funds to adapt its accommodations to the larger duties it must meet in accordance with the present vast and unprecedented developments everywhere taking place in this southwestern wonderland. For forty years the university has faithfully served the moral, civic and business interests of the public for whose loyal support it now voices an appeal.

How faithfully that service has been rendered can best be set forth by a brief review of what the university has accomplished.

From 1880 to 1903 the university kept pace with the early needs of Los Angeles. In 1903 President Bovard took control with a faculty of ten members and a student body of 328. At the present time the faculty consists of 371 highly trained specialists, thus outnumbering the whole student body in the year when President Bovard took control. Since 1911 it has issued 822 high-school teachers' credentials. In the same period 11,113 have received the degree of A.B. or B.S. and a large number have taken their master's degree.

In the last year the number of annual graduates has exceeded 500. An analysis of the student enrollment reveals the fact that at a conservative estimate 60 per cent of the entire enrollment of the university consists of young people from Los Angeles. If these same students were attending the State university their cost to the taxpayers would approximate $750,000 annually.

So it is evident that the university is bearing a large financial burden that would otherwise be shifted to the shoulders of the taxpayer. For, during the entire existence of the University of Southern California, individuals of Los Angeles have not contributed a sum to exceed $500,000. Taking these things into consideration, a request for help in liquidating the debt of $300,000 incurred for the completion of the new building is decidedly within the bounds of reason.

The university, while standing immovably for the highest standards of American Christian citizenship, is nonsectarian in its teaching and its faculty is composed of members representing many faiths and creeds. It is distinctly the university of the great Southwest.

But behind this universal appeal to all that is highest in the ambitions of Young America, demanding only in return clean conduct and lofty principles, stands that influence which, from the birth of our republic, has held our people to strictly Christian observances, that has combatted infidelity and false doctrines wherever they threatened to undermine our American institutions, that has helped to make the name of America synonymous with justice, temperance and amazing charity, that has aided this people in waging righteous war and demanding righteous peace, that today stands as a rock of Gibraltar against the storms of anarchy and the tides of gross materialism; behind the University of Southern California stands the mighty spirit of the grand old Methodist Church.

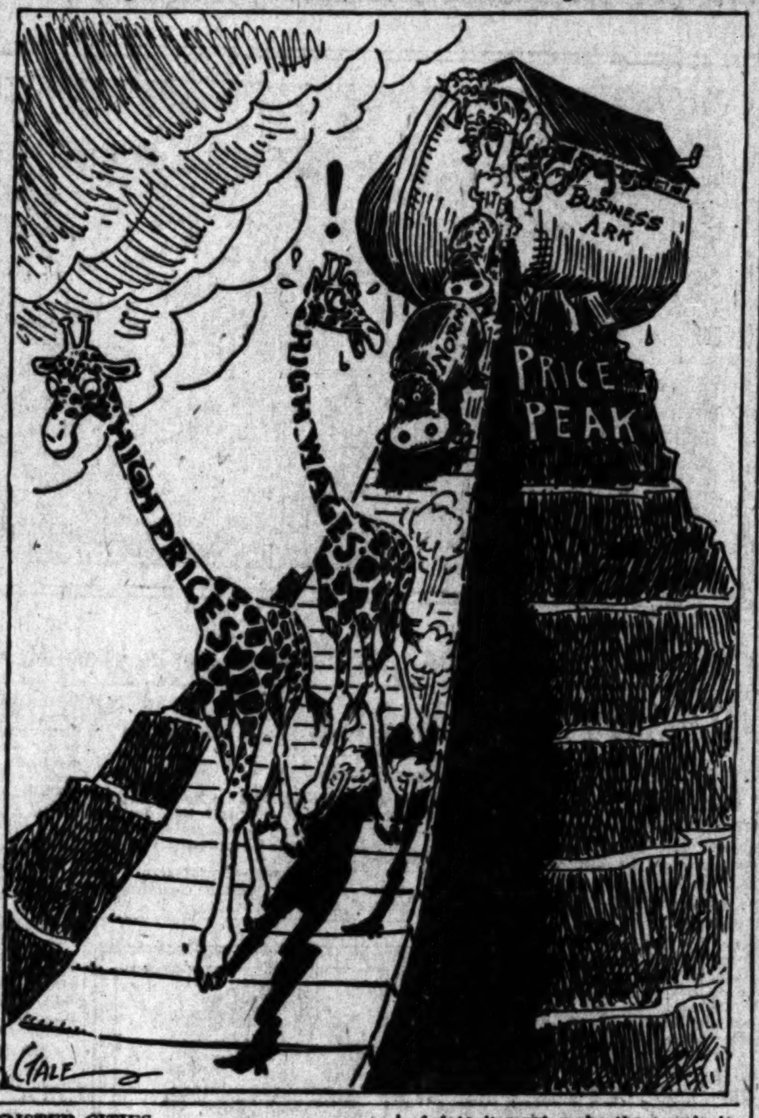
We are still sending food to the hungry in Russia. Sometimes it is thought that it would help some if the Russians would shave. They must lose a lot of nourishment in the brush.

"They Come Down Two by Two!"



SISTER CITIES.

They grew in beauty side by side—two sisters, born of the same fruitful providence, the same robust parentage; both favored of fortune and blessed in their inheritance.

The younger sister, Angela, was the perfect tom-boy type, with the sunburn in her hair and the freckles on her cheeks, alive with the love of adventure and the spirit of enterprise, but caring little for the conventions and graces of polite society.

The elder sister, Francisca, tall and slim, colored with the more delicate tint of mist and moonlight, was frankly artificial in her make-up and coquettishly choice in her style of dress, fully realizing that a beautiful body is ever more captivating when beautifully adorned.

In their girlhood days the fashionable Francisca was inclined to look down on her hoydenish sister, who, in retaliation, sometimes made faces at her ladyship.

But as years rolled by the younger sister outgrew Francisca—outgrew her in strength and stature and in the physical charm that springs from the free development of body and limb. And in the exuberance of youth she despised the artificial adornments so sedulously cultivated by her older sister in the north.

It was thus that the buxom Angela fell into error. For the carelessness that charms in the heyday of blushing sixteen sits with ill grace on the grown-up shoulders of six-and-twenty.

So, when in time the mature Angela came to mingle in the best society she was a little surprised to discover that in many quarters Francisca was attracting more attention than she was herself.

Whereupon Miss Angela began to take stock of her advantages and her mistakes. Then at last it dawned upon her that, while a fine bird must be strong on the wing, fine feathers also are not to be despised.

Now cities, as all true psychologists and a few Mayors have learned from study, no less than human beings, have individual souls. These souls, moreover, develop along the same lines as the growth of the city itself. A city that is not externally a city beautiful cannot possess a beautiful soul.

No one asks or expects to find in virile young Los Angeles the gray, artistic spirit or somber sense of classic estheticism that marks sedate Boston, hoary Oxford or antique Florence. No one, on the other hand, wishes Los Angeles to become a spiritual counterpart of Pittsburg or Chicago or Liverpool, merely big and bustling and shabbily self-confident. Los Angeles' business future is already assured.

But we do hope and we do believe that the time has arrived when Los Angeles should display as keen a desire for the beautiful and demand for the artistic as may be seen in our older, if less wide-awake, sister city at the Golden Gate.

For, if Los Angeles expects to develop a worthy city soul, she must attend to the adornment of her exquisite body; she must make herself attractive to the eye of the connoisseur; she must live up to the duty imposed on her by her natural environment and her noble heritage.

Architecturally, Los Angeles has not redeemed this promise. Architecturally, she has not held her own with less expansive San Francisco. Before she can claim real pre-eminence as undisputed queen of the Pacific Coast she must be first in beauty and art as well as in population, commerce, manufacture and floor space of her warehouses.

To attain this final distinction the first requisite is a dignified civic center. For many years our citizens have talked of such a civic center. Many specialists have been consulted. Organizations for city planning have been formed. Numerous maps and sketches have been made to impress on our citizens how Los Angeles will appear when this civic center has been added to the architectural beautifying of the metropolis. The Times has devoted liberal space, both in illustration and letterpress, to arouse a sentiment that shall lead to the installing of this desirable improvement.

But so far it has all ended in talk. Apparently we are no nearer our object than we were ten years ago.

This city still endures a City Hall so out of date it must make the angels in heaven "laugh themselves all mortal." This city still puts up with a Courthouse that began to crumble about the time Huerta proclaimed himself dictator of Mexico. This city owns, instead of a public library, that most useless of all symbols, the minus sign. This city sees nothing to carp at in a Hall of Records whose sole recommendation is bulk and convenience.

What structural beauty we possess is scattered and dissipated. There is no central point on which to focus the attention—no Acropolis, no St. Mark's Square, no Place de la Concorde.

The heart is the well-spring of all human activities. The civic center is the heart of the city. And Los Angeles has no civic center!

RIPPLING RHYMES.

LEAVING IT.

By dodges and hitches, by labor or fraud, we gather up riches, an elegant wad; the roll we are showing has made life a grind; and then when we're going we leave it behind. Ah, that is the dickens, the sting and the smart! It saddens and sickens the miserly heart. To leave all the plunder for others to blow! What marvel, what wonder we wail in our woe? The short-sighted niggard saves till he must die, and I will be jiggered if I can see why; amusement he dodges, all fun he eschews, and drearily lodges down there by the mews; to harvest a nickel his form he'll exhaust; his life is a pickle, a fluke and a frost. In coffers he's stowing all coin he can find, and then when he's going he leaves it behind. The last of his journeys has borne him abroad, and gifted attorneys camp down on his wad. And wastrels and spenders, his heirs and their kin, for frivolous splendors dispose of his tin. So it is with grieving the tightwads depart, their large bundles leaving, the joy of each heart. But over the river no bundles are known, no miser hearts quiver at sight of a bone. Some silvery pieces I've salted away to comfort my nieces when I'm in the clay; but not in my keeping such treasure you'll find, that I might be weeping to leave it behind.

FINANCIAL POINTERS.

BY N. W. PHILBROOK.

That only is real prosperity which makes one a better man.

No amount of money is worth a single lie, or one act of dishonesty or oppression.

The love of money is the root of so many kinds of evil that few men get rich without paying more for their riches than they are worth.

High finance will be called by its right name when Christ comes to judge the earth.

Better die an honest man than live and wax fat on usury and extortion.

No corruption fund influences the Judge in that city whose very streets are gold.

True riches are not always indicated by the clothes a man wears.

No man is so poor as he whose wealth has brought him a guilty conscience.

We brought nothing into this world except capacity, opportunity and accountability; we carry nothing out except conscience, character and destiny.

We may not here be rich or great, as the world counts these things, but the enduring honors and the eternal riches we may have if we choose, and after the others have passed into oblivion we may still, in the life that is really life, be both rich and great.

THE LANCER.

"I believe," says the Rev. R. W. Beetham, "that Eve possessed a sense of modesty that would put to shame many young women of today."

We wonder if his reverence refers to the period before or after she bit the apple. We have been led to believe that the lady was scrupulously innocent—and unclothed—prior to that regrettable incident, but that she became less innocent when she embarked upon the fig-leaf era. It was then that she learned to blush—and so did Adam—the implication being that blushing was evidence of a polluted mind.

But, says the New Era Magazine, "the sad thing about the modes of feminine dress is that our American girls are fast forgetting how to blush."

If, however, they are thereby getting back to the original innocence of Eve, must we deplore it? If Adam is doing all the blushing today, doesn't it perhaps imply that he took the biggest bite of that demoralizing apple—and it is still on his chest?

After all, blushing implies dubious and suspicious knowledge. Innocence and modesty are not necessarily identical.

"What a wonderful thing it is to meet a man or woman whose manners are instantly open and free—opening up a direct road between him or her and yourself." So says Edward Carpenter.

M'yes. But, all the same, Edward, it can be highly embarrassing and complicated at times, especially if any of our family are along. They are apt to misunderstand and think it was our fault. Like the Normal Hill cut, it is open to controversy. Some people prefer the winding bypaths, the direct roads are so obvious.

Gordon Selfridge is warning the British that the day is coming when the aristocracy will have to work. For our part, our pessimism goes considerably further; we foresee an imminent era in which the commission and rake-off gentry will have to go to work, when even the politicians will be required to justify their existence, yea, even unto the friends of the friends of the politicians.

"What is the use of staying at home and twiddling my thumbs?" asks Mrs. Elsie Morris, wife of Gouverneur Morris, the author. So she has started a facial-treatment shop in New York. Which means that she will now supervise the twiddling of the hired help's fingers in an effort to restore vanishing beauty and banish time's ravages from the faces of any ladies with the price. Perhaps she is setting a noble example to idle wives, perchance many of her sex may yet rise up to call her blessed. And then, again, perchance Gouverneur did not reap the golden harvest as a captive eminent author at Culver City that was anticipated. There was quite a lot of anxious thumb-twiddling down there, while the publicity agent did his darndest and the public panted impatiently.

Mrs. Rupert Hughes has gone to work, too. But her line is poetry. She has just published a book of verses designed to beautify the inner woman, while Mrs. Morris attends to the outer shell.

Carl Bronson is assuring us that there are pianos, harps and phonographs and violins in the great beyond, and that Debussy is enjoying a stylish musical vogue up there.

Like a jolly Bohemian apartment-house, as it were, with all the horrid restrictions off. We don't want to be hypercritical, but we can't help hoping there is a little celestial discrimination in the selection of phonograph records, and a plentiful supply of new ones. And one can't help being a little anxious about the ambitious novices? What happens to the rest of us in practicing hours?

But Carl Bronson is a musician, so he insists upon giving us an ultra-musical heaven. If the artists are promising us all their pet pictures, the sculptors their pet statues, the automobilists their favorite cars, the interior decorators their pet furniture and draperies and the plumbers their pet bathrooms things are going to be a little crowded in that great beyond.

When a play at the Little Theater is a frost we, the public, are blamed for a graceless lack of appreciation. We fail to support the higher dramatic art. We are uninspired Philistines.

But what can they expect when they have the whole interior of that gloomy Little Theater painted a dismal and oppressive blue? It is quite the most depressing blue extant and is enough to queer any play. The moment one enters the auditorium one has that hushed and subdued feeling that makes us begin wondering what we had for dinner. Any play that can make a success in spite of that overwhelming and disheartening blue must be brilliant and dazzling indeed. Any modern salesman will tell you he can't sell anything in a blue show-room, even at a bargain discount. The prospect becomes a pessimist forthwith, and the salesman himself can't believe in his goods. Don't blame us, blame the paint.

The rumored attentions of Charlie Chaplin are said to have been worth a $200-a-week rise in pay to May Collins, the youthful actress. Charlie perhaps foresees a new and inspiring role for himself, by which he can make ambitious young actresses famous overnight. There is, of course, the element of danger, but what gallant man would not brave that in so noble a cause? Besides, a simple understanding, with a couple of witnesses, would eliminate the most vital danger. My guess is that Charlie will be rumored engaged to at least half a dozen fair charmers before he actually puts his head in the noose again. THE LANCER.

POLICY OF SILENCE.

a conversation that lasted hours I found that one grief gnawing ceaselessly at his the ingratitude and insincer- the Socialists leaders and press the Socialist leaders and against him, it is said, a of silence that wounds deeply than the most bit- ciations.

"A representative of the Associated Press talked with me when I passed through Berlin on my way back from Esthonia," he said, "and the main facts of my experience had been telegraphed to this country. When I landed in New York the reporters of the big papers were at the pier to meet me. I refused to say anything to them. I had gone to Russia as a Socialist delegate and I felt that my report should be made to the Solialist leaders and press.

"I went to a hotel and telephoned to the office of the Call, the Socialist daily of New York. I spoke to the editor, whom I knew, and asked him to send over a reporter. He did so. I talked with his representative for two hours, gave him some of the most valuable pictures I had brought back with me and told him why, from a Socialist point of view Lenine and Trotzky have failed.

"Not a line of that interview appeared in the Call. I visited other Socialist editors and sent them the narratives of my experience. Not a Socialist paper in the whole United States would permit me to tell even the bare facts about my imprisonment and the death of my wife. Nor would they print one word about the misery among the working classes under Communism.

"Nothing coming from Russia is news to them unless it is something favorable to the Communist regime."

"Have you supplied this information to Upton Sinclair," I asked "for use in a new edition of his Brass Check?"

"Upton Sinclair!" he retorted in a tone that led me to expect interesting revelations. But he contented himself with adding in a tone of abject weariness, "They are all alike."

FINAL AMERICANIZATION.

Observing that expression of dejection and disillusionment it suddenly dawned upon me that I was witnessing the final process in the Americanization of Mittri Alexandrovich Schwartz.

His passage through the melting pot was a veritable Odyssey, but I realized that he had finally found his own soul, that for the first time in his life, he read aright the lessons of self-government.

In order to draw his mind away from his immediate personal sorrow, I asked him what the Russian working classes thought of Communism.

"The Russians of the working classes are only children," he replied. "Their ideas of different forms of government are as undeveloped as those of a kindergarten class in an American school.

"I talked with scores, hundreds of them in our common tongue, asking them all the one question, 'How do you like Communism?'

"'Commune,' they would reply with a blank stare, 'how do we know? What is it? Is it something to eat? We want bread. The Czar gave us bread and meat. Now they say we have Commune, but we have no bread. We cannot live on Commune. We shall soon all be dead. Commune only will be left; for it doesn't have to eat.'

TWO STANDARDS.

"From the first day we landed," he went on, "I discerned that something was wrong. I found we had four meals a day in the palace where the deputies were lodged; the workers seldom had two. That was repugnant to my ideas of Socialism which permits no class. We should fare alike, in the palace as in the cottage.

"Then I found three grades of soap. For the officials there was a fine quality of perfumed toilet soap," and he showed me a sample of cherry-red soap of excellent quality.

"Here is the soap for the men in the army and the clerks in the government offices," he continued as he produced a grayish white cake, evidently much cheaper and containing less fats.

"And here," he added with impressive gravity, "is the soap that the workers get." He handed me a hard gritty dark chunk that looked remarkably like a lump of adobe.

"A country that makes those distinctions in meals and necessary articles has not applied the principles of equally for all," he went on. "It is a government of privilege. These were my first impressions. I found them strengthened every day, almost every hour I was in Russia."

TELLS OF ARREST.

"Tell me about your arrest," I said.

"On the second day (it may have been the third, for I am quoting from memory) of the session of the Internationale, Trotsky arose and called to me:

"'Comrade Schwartz, how soon will the yellow in the United States turn to red?'

"I replied that I feared that the United States would be the last of all the great nations to embrace Communism.

"His black eyes snapped in disappointed resentment. A delegate asked me why I thought so. I replied that many of the workers in the United States were receiving as much as $1 an hour in pay, that they had bank accounts, that they owned homes and their daughters were attending colleges and that, when the migratory workers started their revolution, workers would be found fighting workers and capitalism would win.

"The next morning my wife and I were arrested, the order coming from Zenovia, head of the Extraordinary Commission and chairman of the 1920 session of the Third Internationale.

"I was cast into the grim Lubianka, known as Moscow prison No. 2. I found myself in a great chamber without furniture of any kind, no cots, no blankets, no seats; nothing but the bare cement. Forty-six others were in the room when I arrived.

"I stayed there two months. The number of those about me constantly varied. Almost every night some one was taken from the room down to the basement of the prison, where the executions took place.

NO NEWS OF WIFE.

"I heard not a word from my wife. At the end of the eighth week I was about the oldest in point of tenantcy in the prison room. All speculated on when my turn would come.

"It was slightly after midnight when the Red messenger came for me. I had been sleeping and was awakened to be led away. I knew where that nocturnal journey would end, that remonstrance was useless. I recall I felt my whole body numb. Despite my faltering legs I tried to nerve myself to meet death without giving my jailers the pleasure of seeing me wince.

"But when we reached the corridor they took me upstairs instead of down. I found myself in the office of the prison where a man was sitting writing at a desk. I braced myself mentally for the third degree.

"I was before Feldman, the prosecuting attorney of the Extraordinary Commission. After looking me over for a moment he said in a voice that he sought to make jovial:

"'Well, Comrade Schwartz, you seem to have been through pretty stiff discipline. You perhaps know you were arrested because your actions caused us to suspect that you premeditated leading a counter-revolution. But I have looked into the papers today and find that the charge is not sustained. We are going to turn you loose.

"I felt myself collapse. Falling on a bench I gasped 'And my wife?'

"'If we are satisfied with your conduct we shall let you both go, under certain conditions. If we permit you to return to the United States, what kind of a report will you take back? Will you denounce the soviet government?'

"'Give me my wife and let us return and my lips will be sealed,' I replied. 'Let me have her and see my children again and I will keep out of politics.'

"He looked me over for a moment through half closed eyes, seemed to be debating with himself. Then he asked quite sharply, 'Why?'

"'I have had enough of mingling with politics,' I said. 'We are too far committed to the Socialist cause to withdraw. All that remains for us is silence.'

"At that he came over to me, slapped me cordially on the shoulder and said, 'You take life too seriously. We have had so much on our hands that we were slow in getting to your case. But your troubles are ended now. You are going to see your wife right away.'

"A door at the other end of the room opened and Jessie was standing there. My heart leaped at first sight of her; then almost stopped beating as I saw how frail she was. A look in her eyes made me fear for her senses. I babbled:

"'Mother! Don't cry.'

"'Cry?' she repeated, in a voice that carried the chill of death. 'Mittri, I have no more tears. My heart is wrung dry.'

"We stood stupidly gazing at each other until Feldman came over to us and repeated that we were to be set free at once, that we might return to America. Guards came and took us away together. The next day brought, not the freedom promised, but incarceration in another prison.

"Feldman is simply a brute who takes his relaxation in submitting prisoners to mental torture. I have heard that he thus revenges himself for the death of some of his ancestors in the pogroms of former regimes. He is satiated with the cruelty of cowardice and every human feeling has been smothered by an excess of hate. Compared to him Robespierre was an angel of mercy. Trotzky is served by scores of monsters of that type."

Again his eyes were filmed by the look of a mystic, of a soul in torture. "And to think," he continued, "that these were the creatures I had idealized as the defenders of the rights of the working classes."

Space will not permit me to give the details of his experiences in the second prison, where life was rendered still more unsupportable by memory of the fiendish cruelty practiced by his captors.

His wife succeeded in getting a letter out of Tchitcherin, in which she said:

"We have worked twenty years to help you. The least you can do is to help us. I shall declare a hunger strike today and shall gain either liberty or death."

I experienced a sensation of national pride in hearing this note of indignant protest so striking in its contrast to the mute resignation with which Schwartz was accepting his fate. It was the blood of free America coursing in Jessie Molle's veins that spoke. She was not of the breed that bows its neck meekly to the scimiter.

Schwartz was still a victim of centuries of mental servitude. Her possessed temparment of the races of old and decadent Asia. To the decress of destiny he said humbly, "I submit." His American wife might die, but she would perish fighting. The contrast between those two mental attitudes explained why the working classes of Russia accept a servitude which would be intolerable, impossible in this country.

Subsequent events proved that this spirit of revolt was a rude shock to the Bolshevik dictators. They quailed before a new force that was more dangerous to their regime than all the revolts of the Kolchaks, Wrargels, the Denikines. It was this note that won for Schwartz his freedom.

Her husband and some of his cell mates learned of the decision she had taken. "One of them, Capt. Cooper from Florida, an American aviator captured in Poland," continued Schwartz, "said to me, 'If your wife goes on a hunger strike, she shall not go alone. I and two other Americans here will do the same. If she dies, we, too, shall die. It is all we can do to show our appreciation for her courage.'

"That was a brave man. They kept their pledge. Meanwhile we had been plotting an escape. My wife and I were released some days later. I left my brave comrades in the cell. I have learned since that they followed out the plan and actually did escape into Poland. It is the one ray of light in the gloom."

AMERICAN BRAVERY.

Another flash of American intrepidity. Bolshevik bars were not strong enough nor Bolshevik eyes sharp enough to keep these sons of liberty long in bondage. It is well for Lenine and Trotzky that America is so far away. Other intrepid spirits might be actuated by a desire to avenge Jessie Molle's death.

Five days after their release Jessie Molle died at Reval, Esthonia, in the arms of her husband. They had been given sanctuary by the Y.M.C.A.

When the Bolsheviki learned that Schwartz was going to make an address at Reval under the protection of the Esthonian government Gluchoff, the soviet counsel, sent for him and agreed to restore to him the $2500 which Feldman had taken from him when he was imprisoned, on condition that he would return at once to the United States.

He went first to Berlin, where his story aroused the indignation of the German commissioners, who had attended the meeting of the Third Internationale. Crispien, editor of the German paper, Freedom, was one of the delegates. An article which he published after talking with Schwartz throws additional light on his incarceration.

Crispien relates that Schwartz and his wife were missed the day after their arrest and that a rumor of their fate spread through the congress. He went with the other German commissioners and demanded to know what had become of them; and Zenovia, president of the congress, cooly assured them that they had started back for America. This the German commissioners believed until Scehwartz appeared in Berlin.

Crispin asserts in the article that other Socialist delegates to the congress from the United States had something to do with the arrest of Schwartz and his wife; that they told Trotzky they feared Schwartz would reach the United States at the same time they did, that he was going to denounce the Bolsheviki and Communism and that his report would nullify the fine effect they hoped to produce by their glowing accounts. So it was considered politic to send them into confinement until the seed should be planted and tended in this country by the other delegates.

REASON FOR FAILURE.

"What, in your opinion," I asked Scehwartz, "caused the miscarriage of Communistic government in Russia? What turned your dream into a nightmare?"

"It has failed because it is not a government of the majority," he replied. "Lenine is more despotic than any previous Czar. He has denied to the people the right of free speech, of a free press, of free assemblage and freedom of worship.

"Perhaps you do not know," he added "that no Communist is permitted to attend any place of public worship. If one attends any church, Russian, Catholic, Protestant, Greek or Hebrew, his name is crossed off the list of Communists and he sacrifices his right to preferential food rations.

"Hunger is the weapon with which the Communists rule. It is the most horrible thing in the history of the world; and it is done in the name of defending the rights of the proletariat.

"What will be the end? Either Lenine government will be overthrown from within or the Russian people will emigrate or perish. The peasants are right. Commune alone will survive, for commune doesn't have to eat.

"Threats of death have lost their force; although I know an authentic instance, confirmed in the Bolshevik official reports, in which 800 political prisoners were shot in a single city in fifty-six days."

LIKE INQUISITION.

I looked at this man whose voice had weakened from continuous talking almost to a husky whisper. His cheeks were sunken and his complexion was that of one in the last stages of tuberculosis. He had the general appearance of having suffered for months from a malignant fever. And I asked myself if I had not been reading an unpublished manuscript of the Inquisition. It did not seem possible that such cruelty and perfidy could exist in the twentieth century.

Then I marveled at the monstrous perfidy and unhuman cruelty of the Socialist press and leaders in this country, at their ostracization, and abandonment of this man because he had dared to tell the truth, because he sought to give the working classes of this country the real facts about conditions in Russia.

Every important detail of his narrative has been fully substantiated; yet they continue to defend Communism in Russia, lest the truth shall cause a revulsion against Socialism in the United States. It is depressing to reflect that such unscrupulous charlatans have a following still numbered by the millions, that at least a million dupes will continue to believe the whispered slander that "Schwartz tried to sell the Communists out to the capitalists and was caught in the act."

SCORES COMMUNISM.

In parting I said, "You have told me everything, but whether you are still a Socialist."

Again the look of mystic exaltation peculiar to the Slav reappeared. "I shall no longer be a stickler for names," he replied, "I believe in the expression of the will of the majority in their government; but I do not believe it can ever be expressed through Communism. I would rather see my two children go to join their mother than grow up to live under such a government.

"If the Socialists insist on protecting and upholding the monstrous iniquity that now prevails in Russia under the name of government I shall renounce Socialism. I shall never regain my respect for those who have closed their columns to me because my experience proved the falsehood of some of their pet theories.

"I shall keep the promise I gave to my dying wife to tell the workers of this country that we suffered in their cause. I am going to San Francisco to see my children now; but I shall return to Los Angeles to make a public address in Trinity Auditorium at noon next Sunday. I trust the working people of Los Angeles, the ones who used to greet my wife so enthusiastically when she came here to speak, will give me an opportunity to deliver to them in person her dying message to the workers of the United States.

"She is wiser than we now; and I like to think that her spirit will guide me in my work."

As I reflect now, after his departure, on the torture of heart he suffers in living over so many times those four agonizing months in Red Russia, I seem to have caught a glimpse of the faith that supported the early Christian martyrs.

"What a lesson for those still prating about the ultimates in the Americanization of Mittri Schwartz!

PLAN TRADE FAIR DETAILS.

Details of interest to the general public concerning the Market Week and Trade Exposition to be held in Los Angeles, August 8 to 13, were discussed yesterday by the committee in charge. Visitors will be admitted from 2 p.m. until closing time in the evening, except in the case of the buildings materials products, which will be open for inspection the entire day, undoubtedly, since these appeal only to local residents.

The matter of decorations was delegated to each individual exhibitor rather than assigning the general decorating to a professional.

The committee reports that locations in the Union Terminal have been reserved by so many manufacturing units in the last week that few choice places are left. The furniture industry has acquired an entire floor for displaying samples of the firms belonging to the association.

More floor space than is available on one floor will be needed by apparel makers, the committee was informed, and will therefore have to change about the floors assigned in order to give the largest amount of space to this industrial unit, which even then threatens to overflow to another floor. Approximately 30,000 feet each will be reserved by garment makers and furniture manufacturers.

The committee warns those who still wish to enter exhibits that reservations may not be available in a few weeks and especially will affect the food manufacturers and miscellaneous industries.

The food products and miscellaneous groups of producing units are also filling space in the seven-story terminal at a rapid rate. Although 350,000 square feet of exhibition space is provided in the huge wholesale building there is going to be no room left within a short time, according to the chamber's committee yesterday.

Another matter discussed during the last week by the executive committee was standard form of decoration. The decision was to leave each exhibitor the details of decorating in the space rented for his exhibit.

Seeks Divorce; Learns Husband is on Way Home.

After all hope of his return had been given up—bing—he announced he was on his way home.

Two years ago, John Stauffer, whose hobby is roaming, strayed to foreign lands without telling his wife, Mrs. Albina Stauffer. She heard that he was in South America and she waited and waited, but he did not return. Then she gave up hope. She decided that the only thing to do was to get a divorce, so she went to her attorney, Philip F. Dodson, and asked him to file papers. This he did Friday.

One hour after Mr. Dodson had taken the papers to the Hall of Records, a messenger boy rang the bell of Mrs. Stauffer's home at 1123 East Tenth street, and handed her a telegram. It contained the brief announcement that her husband is on his way home.

Mrs. Stauffer says that the request for divorce still goes.

Federal Building to Close.

The Federal Building will be closed tomorrow in honor of Memorial Day. There will be no court and no activity in any department. The usual holiday hours will be kept by the postoffice employees, which means that there will be no delivery of the mails. The only place open to business will be the parcel post window, where stamps will be on sale.

SPECIAL dishes are served after midnight at Gus Mann's Pot and Spigot Grill, 611 South Spring.

DROP LARCENY CASE.

After a hearing before Justice Brown, a charge of grand larceny of the contents of an express package, against Richard C. Mayfield, has been dismissed. It was charged that Mayfield, the defendant, received through a mistake a package meant for Russell C. Mayfield and kept it. The contents were valued at $100. Because of the inability of the complaining witness properly to identify the contents of the package, the case was dismissed and the defendant released.

DR. H. C. HINES GIVES UP SCHOOL POSITION.

RESIGNS LOCAL POST TO TAKE PLACE AT UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON.

Dr. Harlan C. Hines, for the past year assistant director of research for the Los Angeles public schools, has resigned, it was announced yesterday, to accept a position at the University of Washington as a member of the faculty of the college of education, where he will lecture on educational measurements and educational psychology.

While connected with the local schools Dr. Hines directed research work in the junior and senior high schools, centering his efforts on the mental ability ratings of the pupils. This work was the outgrowth of a program originated by Dr. Arthur H. Sutherland, director of research, designed to emphasize the proper placement of those pupils who are retarded because of ill health, a low level of mentality, and other deficiencies, and to assist teachers in a fair and accurate rating of their pupils.

Dr. Hines is a graduate of Wabash College and the State University of Iowa, and is a member of Phi Kappa Psi, Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Delta Kappa fraternities. He and Mrs. Hines, who was Miss Ruth Ann Wilbur of this city, will leave for their new home June 16. No successor has been chosen.

DANCE, SING TO WIN COIN AT BENEFIT.

Many Stars to Appear at Performance to Aid Fund for French War Orphans.

A benefit performance for the Tubercular French War 'Orphans' Fund, in which many stars will take part, will be held Wednesday night in Columbus Auditorium, 813 South Flower street. Los Angeles friends are supporting two of the Sunshine Homes operated by the fund in France. Fifty thousand francs is needed for prime necessities.

The toll of tuberculosis was especially appalling among the orphans of the poilus. Mme. Yvonne Sarcey Brisson established the rescue work, which is being assisted by groups in several American cities. She is the wife of the former Prime Minister, and daughter of the author and Parisian dramatic critic, Francisque Sarcey.

L. N. Brunswig of Los Angeles, on a visit to the devastated regions, became interested in the work, and Mme. Brisson asked him to get aid here. People of this city have supported two of the Sunshine Homes for the past two years. The villas and chateaux were donated, and all services are given without pay. In addition two homes were established by San Francisco and Marin county friends; one by New York, and others are about to be established by New Orleans, Chicago and Mexico City.

The program of the benefit performance will include one act of "Madame Sans-Gene," in which Mme. Rose Dione of the Theatre de l'Odeon, Paris, supported by fifteen stars, including Lionel Belmore, will appear; and numbers by Mme. Baroness de Pasthory, vocalist; Bekefi and his wife, Russian dancers; R. D. McLean, Shakespearean interpreter, and Will Rogers. There will be dancing after the performance. The ushers will be selected from American Legion and French veterans.

CRYER HAS FINE RECORD IN ARMY

Candidate for Mayor Won Respect of Comrades.

Difficult Duty is Performed With Rare Ability.

Lauded by Friends Won in War Against Spain.

BY CLAIRE WOOLWINE,
Captain of Infantry, Overseas Service.

Recently I met a member of the old First Tennessee Regiment, which helped to put down the Philippine insurrection back in 1899. It will be remembered that the Seventh California and the First Tennessee regiments were billeted together at Camp Merritt in San Francisco in the early days of the Spanish-American War.

There are two outstanding instances in that war where regiments became very chummy. In Manila the First California boys and the Thirteenth Minnesotas were buddies, and in San Francisco the Seventh California and First Tennessees became one and inseparable.

The Tennessee boys reached Manila in time to participate in the quelling of the insurrection, but the end of the war came before the "Fighting Seventh" received orders to embark, much to the disappointment of every one of those 1000 Angelenos.

RECALL OLD DAYS.

Anyhow, this old Tennessee veteran, now a prominent Los Angeles business man, and I got to talking of the days of 1898, when I happened to mention that George E. Cryer, our candidate for Mayor, was a top sergeant in the old Seventh.

"The devil you say," he shot back. "If Mr. Cryer was in the old Seventh California he can have my vote and the votes of every friend I can muster. There never was a better crowd of real Americans than those boys of the Seventh. We Tennesseeans discovered that in San Francisco.

"We tented together for months at Camp Merritt and we learned to love and respect the Southern Californians. Then we embarked for Manila, and to this day I have had a tender spot in my heart for the boys of the old Seventh. Yes, sir; Mr. Cryer can have my vote and the votes of my friends."

"BIG SUN" OF ARMY.

Anyone who has been in the service must inevitably recognize that dread and fearsome title "Top Sergeant." From the viewpoint of the doughboy, the destiny of the army—if not the country—literally depends on the top sergeant. He is the Army's "big sun" revolving in an orbit of his own making. In the judgment of the doughboy, the top sergeant can make or unmake, judge or misjudge with impunity, and can "willeth however his superiors may nilleth." He can send heartsinking convulsions up and down a company line, where a commissioned officer couldn't raise a tremor.

When a man has emerged from the Army as top sergeant, still retaining the respect and affection of his men and superior officers, he must have been one of those paragons, whom Shakespeare described as "infinite in faculty." He must have manifested the qualities of born leadership.

George E. Cryer did this. At the close of the Spanish-American War he was mustered out a top sergeant and presented by his company with a gold watch in testimony of the high respect and esteem in which each member held him.

PRAISES RECORD.

Recently his old captain, George S. Biggin, now in business in Redlands and Supervisor of the Third District of San Bernardino county, wrote the following letter with reference to Mr. Cryer's conduct while in the service of his country:

"In your recent letter you mentioned to me that you are a strong supporter of George E. Cryer for Mayor of your city. I am glad to know that he is a candidate for this office.

"I have known Mr. Cryer for about twenty-five years. He served with me in the Seventh Regiment as first sergeant of Company G, of which company I was captain, in the Spanish-American War of 1898.

"I can truthfully say that he was the most competent and most popular top sergeant in the Seventh Regiment. Of course, at the time he was a young man, but for efficiency, sound judgment and reliability he was a wonder. I predicted for him then a brilliant future."

Mr. Cryer is an active member of Roosevelt Camp No. 9, United Spanish War Veterans, in Los Angeles.

ADMIRED BY ALL.

Concerning Mr. Cryer's staunch loyalty to his country during the World War there is no question. As chief deputy District Attorney of Los Angeles county he was recognized alike by all classes for the able manner in which he discharged the duties of his office as well as for his kindness and friendship to service men who had come into conflict with the county's laws.

His acts as Deputy District Attorney were not announced with a fanfare of trumpets. He seldom was interviewed by newspaper reporters, for he had little to say. But everybody knew that the quiet, undemonstrative man down there at the end of the corridor was at work day and night mingling efficiency with kindness and unimpeachable loyalty.—[From the Associated Veterans, a paper published in the interests of the veterans of all American wars.

NEW DEAN CHOSEN.

Cleveland Man is Selected to Head Maclay College of Theology.

Dr. John F. Fisher of Cleveland has been chosen by the board of trustees of the University of Southern California as dean of Maclay College of Theology. Mrs. Fisher was chosen by the trustees of the university to occupy the chair of Christian missions.

Dean Healey of Maclay College of Theology will continue to occupy the chair of systematic theology. During the time he had been at the head of the college, fifty students have been graduated. Eighty former students of the college are members of the Southern California annual conference of the Methodist church.

Dr. Fisher will not take up active work until September.

NEED OF LIBRARY IS TOLD.

Prominent Angelenos Urge Citizens to Vote for Building Bonds.

Proposition No. 3 on the ballot at the municipal election will be for a bond issue of $2,500,000 for construction of a public library building, branch libraries and purchase of the necessary land. Los Angeles never has had a library building, the central institution being housed in an office building in very cramped quarters.

Advocates of the bond issue declare construction of a library would save municipal funds in the long run by doing away with rentals and the necessity, which has been frequent, of moving the library from one building to another.

PROMINENT BACKERS.

The proposition has many prominent advocates. Expressions from a few of them follow:

President Bovard, University of Southern California: It does not seem to be necessary to write any argument in favor of a library building for Los Angeles. It ought to be apparent to every intelligent citizen from the fact that we have no library building that the only wise thing to do is to proceed at once to meet this absolute need. I believe the only thing you need from me is to know that I am in hearty favor of the bonds necessary to furnish the funds to build the library building.

Director Comstock, Southwest Museum: The need of a public library building has long been felt by the scientists and literary workers in Los Angeles. I find in the various cultural and scientific associations a sentiment which is practically unanimous for a municipally-owned building. As a matter of civic pride, good business and immediate necessity, we should support this movement.

IMPERATIVE NEED.

Waldo M. York, former Superior Court judge and former member of the Board of Education: There is an imperative need of a library building in Los Angeles. The circulation of books has trebled in ten years, and it is now rapidly increasing, and the rented quarters, now inadequate, soon will be so congested as practically to deprive the public of the use of the books. Few realize the rapid growth of this city and the increasing popularity of the library. Four hundred thousand books! One thousand twenty-two books issued every hour! Los Angeles, the largest city of the Pacific Coast, and no library building! One of the largest libraries in the United States in transient quarters! Sooner or later we must have a library building not only adequate for this immense library, but sufficient to accommodate a library which will be more than double what it is today. I think the $2,500,000 bond issue which is to be voted on on June 7 should be carried:

Dr. Campbell Coyle of the Highland Park Presbyterian Church: A public library of 400,000 books, that has a staff of 200 persons, that annually issues 3,000,000 books, and that is serving so well the needs of this great city in so many different ways, is surely deserving of its own adequate building, where it can send its roots down in the midst of this manifold western life, and from its branches, reaching far and wide, pour its fruitage into the hearts and homes of all the people. The citizens of Los Angeles should rally to the very last voter and support this splendid enterprise at the coming municipal election.

WIDE INFLUENCE.

President Blaisdell of Pomona College: Los Angeles is peculiarly a city that is the center of a region. All Southern California converges into this city. The civic center of Los Angeles is therefore a matter of interest not only to its own citizens, but also to all who reside within this radius of influence. This center should be a worthy expression of that high type of civilization which here finds its home. The population of Los Angeles is preeminently a thinking and reading people. No interest is more important or truly representative than is its public library, its people's university, and without comparison to other needs, it is certain that Los Angeles cannot truly represent itself or serve its largest welfare until it has replaced its present congested library location with an adequate building in which to house this important concern of an unusually intelligent population.

POLITICS.

THE WATCHMAN.

Trend of Political Thought and Action.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

Leading Republicans of Los Angeles are getting behind George E. Cryer for Mayor and their support presages about the same kind of a landslide that swept the Republican party into power last fall. Among the latest to send their personal indorsements of Mr. Cryer to the Cryer campaign headquarters are Clara Shortridge Foltz, prominent woman attorney of Los Angeles, and sister of United States Senator Shortridge, Senator Henry Yonkin of the Thirty-eighth Senatorial District, and Richmond P. Benton, legislative representative from the Sixty-sixth Assembly District. All of these are prominent Republicans.

Mrs. Foltz wrote to Mr. Cryer: "It gives me the greatest pleasure to indorse your candidacy. Problems of the gravest importance confront our city, and your election insures their proper solution.

"The development of some of the most important municipal enterprises depends upon the hearty cooperation of the administration at Washington. While I am a thorough believer in nonpartisanism in municipal affairs, other things being equal, it appears to me that the selection of a Republican at this time to head our city government would insure greater harmony, as the voters have chosen a Republican President, a Republican Congress, and a Republican State regime."

Senator Yonkin, for years a leader in Republican affairs in this section, wrote: "It is with the greatest pleasure that I offer you my support in your present campaign for Mayor. Your marked fitness for the position and the esteem in which you are held by all your friends are recommendation enough for those who are not fortunate enough to know you personally. The firm stand you have taken on the issues of the campaign is one to which all good citizens can subscribe. Your legal training and former experience in public life, assure Los Angeles of a clean, efficient, harmonious administration after your election June 7, which is becoming more of a certainty every day."

In his letter Mr. Benton said that his absence at the legislative session at the State Capital had prevented him from doing much active work for Mr. Cryer before the primaries, but that he is now doing everything in his power. Continuing, Mr. Benton said: "I believe that the best interests of our city can be served by your election as Mayor, because of your training, experience and education, testified to by the splendid public service you rendered our city and country for several years. I also am firm in the belief that since we have a Republican administration in our national and State government, and since the present Mayor, who seeks re-election is a partisan Democrat, that the city of Los Angeles will receive closer cooperation and assistance from the Federal and State government by having a Republican as Mayor."

The campaign committee of Benjamin Bogardus, Ninety-first Division veteran, and the only World War veteran candidate for the City Council, find in checking over the organizations that have indorsed Mr. Bogardus that every patriotic and ex-soldier organization has indorsed their candidate. The committee announces that the latest indorsements are the Junior Order of American Mechanics, the Sons of America and the Patriotic War Work Society. Charles L. Lewis, war veteran, one of the campaign managers, stated two very good reasons for Mr. Bogardus's election, namely: He is the only man nominated, who lives south of Jefferson street, and he is the only war veteran candidate. Mr. Lewis further stated that "organizations, which have been preaching their 100 per cent Americanism, will now be given an opportunity of showing their appreciation of our war veterans by indorsing the candidacy of our only nominee for election June 7." Warren B. Bovard, also a war veteran, controller of the University of Southern California, has also assured Mr. Bogardus his support and that of the war veterans attending the university.

Friends of the $1,250,000 fire department bonds, which will appear on the ballot at the June 7 city election, as Proposition No. 5, have issued an appeal to the public, asking for support for the issue, which says:

"Vote 'Yes' for fire bonds (Proposition No. 5) for protection of life and property. Greater Los Angeles is only half protected against fire. The city needs 800 alarm boxes, including one at each school; 500 fire hydrants, twenty engine houses, twenty-five fire engines, and a central alarm station and system to cover the entire city. Where is your nearest firehouse? Where is your nearest fire alarm box? Where is your nearest fire hydrant? If the bonds carry the money will be used to supply the needed betterments and extensions."

The Board of Education contest is especially lively, although the reelection of Miss M. Jessie York, C. E. Seaman, C. J. McCormick and Grace B. Ashley of the present board is generally conceded, with Egerton Shore, an able business man of excellent standing, education and vision; M. C. Bettinger, whose years of experience in the Los Angeles schools will make it possible for him to render valuable service on the board, and Mrs. Martha C. (Lloyd W.) Harmon, who demonstrated her outstanding ability as an executive when she was president of the Los Angeles district of the Federation of Women's Clubs, leading for the remaining places.

The directors of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association have gone on record as strongly indorsing Proposition No. 3 on the city election ballot which calls for the voting of $2,500,000 for a new central public library site and building and for the establishment of needed branches. The directors of the Chamber of Commerce have likewise indorsed the library bonds, and the Chamber also believes strongly that the water, fire department and harbor bonds should carry.

Frank L. Cleaveland is a 100 per cent American, who has been indorsed for the City Council by a number of leading organizations. His record in the City Council from 1917 to 1919 was noted for public service to all of the people of the city. He is an expert accountant and a trained business man. Mr. Cleaveland is a member of the Sons of the American Revolution, past commander of the Sons of Veterans, vice-president of the Past Commanders' Club, and gave valuable service during the World War.

LETTER WRITER INDICTED.

Rev. Ananias Brown, colored, of this city, was indicted yesterday by the Federal grand jury on the charge of having sent to Rev. Charles Cooper of Shreveport, La., a letter dated Dec. 27, 1920, which contained objectionable matter. His bond was fixed at $3000 by Commissioner Long.

HARBOR GROWTH UP TO VOTERS.

Bonds Backed by Business and Civic Organizations.

Future Trade Depends on Poll Victory, is Assertion.

Plans for Improvements Are Outlined by Official.

The citizens of Los Angeles are called upon to vote at the city election on June 7, on an issue of $4,800,000 of revenue-producing bonds for the needed development of Los Angeles Harbor. The issue appears as Proposition No. 7 on the ballot. The Chamber of Commerce and other business and civic organizations are a unit in declaring that the bonds must carry if the continued advancement of Los Angeles Harbor as one of the great ports of the world is not to be halted.

Two years ago there were nine steamship lines doing business at the harbor; today there are thirty-seven lines, with applications from other companies being constantly received. Los Angeles Harbor has forged ahead of Seattle and other Pacific Coast ports and is rapidly overtaking San Francisco.

New business is knocking at the door of Los Angeles Harbor daily and it must be turned away unless the bonds are voted and the money spent for additional docks, wharves, dredging and on other development projects. The harbor bonds pay their own way, the revenue from the harbor being sufficient to meet all sinking fund and interest requirements. The bonds, therefore, cost the taxpayers not 1 cent.

IMPROVEMENTS PLANNED.

How is the money to be spent? President Gordon of the Board of Harbor Commissioners answered the question with a complete detailed statement, from which the following extracts are taken:

A new wharf and transit shed is to be built along the east side of Municipal Pier No. 1; additional facilities are to be provided at the cotton compress, and the railroad yard at the pier is to be enlarged at a total cost for all these improvements of $1,000,000.

In the West Basin, the city will carry on dredging not covered by the United States government plans and will build wharves and railroad tracks and streets on Terminal Island, all calling for a total expenditure of $400,000.

The operation of Fish Harbor has been one of the outstanding successes of the harbor, and if the bonds carry, $500,000 will be spent on its further development. A net-drying pier and boat anchorage will be installed, storm and sanitary sewer extensions will be made, a wharf will be built along the east side of the present fish pier and paving, sidewalks and other similar improvements will be made at the pier.

The belt line railroad, which connects all of the docks and wharves at the harbor, will be extended and improved, thus aiding shippers quickly to transfer their materials from vessels to railroad cars of transcontinental lines and to send them to all parts of the country. Three hundred thousand dollars is the sum allotted for these improvements.

ROAD WORK URGED.

Harbor residents have long urged the completion of Harbor Boulevard and this work will be done, at a cost of $600,000, if the bonds are carried, the boulevard then being finished from Seventh street to Municipal Pier No. 1 and the Submarine Base.

On the east side of the main channel it is proposed to spend $500,000 of the issue in building permanent wharves, wider approaches, more railroad tracks and an additional 1000 feet of transit shed.

For the installation of modern municipal ferries and terminals connecting the mainland and Terminal Island, it is proposed to spend $200,000, and adequate terminals will be built at both landings.

The United States government will soon begin its work of dredging and widening the main channel to 1000 feet and $200,000 will be required to build a sea wall to inclose the east city boundary, so that the dredged material can be placed there. The filled-in land will make an important water-front addition to the harbor as sites for industrial plants.

On the west side of the main channel, $800,000 will be spent in the city's taking over the Southern Pacific wharves, rebuilding a portion of the frontage and installing new transit sheds and railroad tracks.

For additional cargo-handling machinery, floating cranes and other equipment, $300,000 of the bond issue will be set aside.

The Chamber of Commerce and all other business and civic organizations are solidly behind the harbor bonds and it is predicted that they will, as they should, carry.

I'LL BE AS BRAVE AS HE.

"Good-by! We're coming back!"
He laughed in boyish glee.
As from the Overland he waved
A last farewell to me.

And I—and I laughed back;
I could not let him see
My bleeding heart, but trembling, tried
To be as brave as he.

Oh, lilies in a foreign field,
Oh, roses oversea,
You know how brave my hero was,
How brave then I must be!

You know when France ableeding lay,
When England failed to stay
That hellish line of conquering gray,
You know who saved the day.

The best we had, they led the way—
E'en Bob and his chosen band.
He knew what awful balances
Were trembling o'er the land.

"Can we do it, old man?" cried the heart of him,
Like a bugle his answer rang
In a shout to his men, "It's up to us!"
"Come on! Come on!" and they sang.

As they ran, and they sang—
And they died, and they died,
And they sang as they died,
And the echo was triumph worldwide.

Oh, lilies in a foreign field,
Oh, roses oversea,
Whisper to him as he's lying there,
I'll be as brave as he.

ALICE FREEMAN LUSK.

SEWER BONDS' DOOM LOOMING.

Insufficient Investigation of Problem Charged.

Consideration of Fertilizer Features Demanded.

Injunction is Threatened by Beach Municipalities.

Proposition No. 2 on the ballot at the June 7 election, which calls for the voting of $12,250,000 in bonds to build a new thirty-mile outfall sewer to the ocean, seems almost certain to fail, because of the conviction in the minds of a majority of the voters that there has been insufficient investigation into the entire question of Los Angeles sewage disposal.

The directors of the County Farm Bureau have taken a decided stand against the project, pointing out that before building a sewer at a staggering cost, the citizens are entitled to a thorough investigation into all methods of relieving the burden on the present outfall, as well as declaring that a sweeping inquiry should be made into the possibilities of applying to the land as fertilizer much of the sewage which it is proposed shall be poured into the ocean.

One of the outstanding criticisms of the issue is the fact that the entire sewer-building project was first proposed by City Engineer Griffin less than six months ago. It was only after opposition had been voiced that the suggestion made at the City Club that eastern experts be sent for to make an investigation, was adopted. The standing of the experts, George W. Fuller of New York and Prof. George O. Whipple of Harvard University, cannot be questioned, but they remained here less than two weeks and finally approved of the Griffin plans, adding $1,150,000 to the Griffin proposal of $12,850,000 for the issue, the additional being principally for the building of an experimental plant, where the possibilities of treating sewage and converting it into fertilizer could be tested. The City Council turned down the proposal of a $14,000,000 bond issue, reducing the amount to $12,250,000, as it appears on the ballot, and City Sewer Engineer Knowlton has stated at meetings held at the City Club that only the sewer could be built with this amount, which means that no money will be left for the experimental treatment plant.

Should the bonds carry, the beach cities have threatened to prevent, by court injunction, its operation, on the ground that the beaches adjacent to Hyperion, where sewage pours into the sea, are being strewn with wastes by the present outfall and will be doubly harmed by the new sewer. The City Engineer proposes, in case the bonds carry, to install screens at the outlet of the present sewer to end the nuisance at the beaches, but leading engineers have declared that screens will not end the conditions complained of, and further, the beach cities announce that they will prevent, by court injunction, the proposed burying of the screenings on the beach.

JUDGES WILL TRADE.

Trippet Going to Fresno and Bledsoe Will Sit in Local Court.

U. S. District Judges Trippet and Bledsoe will exchange places this week, the first-named opening court in Fresno, Tuesday, where the balance of the May calendar not disposed of by Judge Bledsoe will be cared for. It is expected that Judge Trippet will be so engaged the most of the present week.

Judge Bledsoe will resume his work in the local department Tuesday, when the case of the government against W. J. Conner, former head of the Master Pictures, Inc., and Edward J. Pyle, recently vice-president of the National Bank and Trust Company of Pasadena, jointly charged with conspiring to misappropriate the funds of a national bank, will begin before a jury.

It is understood the case will require several weeks. There are a number of depositions to be read, and many witnesses on both sides. Conner has been in the County Jail ever since his arrest, unable to furnish a bond of $15,000, but Pyle is at liberty.

HELD IN GIRL CASE.

Man Unable to Wed Miss Under Age Awaits Northern Indictment.

E. K. Bardwell, charged with violation of the Mann Act, in having brought Miss Daisy Nichols from Portland, Or., to this city, for an immoral purpose, is being held awaiting the arrival of an indictment from the North.

Through an arrangement with U. S. Commissioner Long, it was understood that if Bardwell married Miss Nichols, who is the mother of one child and expecting another, the charge would be dismissed; but no County Clerk would issue the license. The girl is not only under age, but she is said to have the mind of a child of 8 years.

A Mrs. Reasure, who says she is the common-law wife of Bardwell, and the Nichols girl were on either side of the prisoner in court yesterday.

Mrs. Reasure says she married a Canadian Indian twenty-five years ago and that "he must be dead."

EIGHT WIN TRAINING.

Disabled ex-Service Men Named for Course at Federal Expense.

Eight disabled ex-service men have been granted vocational training under the Rehabilitation Act by the district office of the Federal Board for Vocational Training, according to word received by the local office of the board. They are entitled to training for the line of work, which they asked for when applying for rehabilitation. During training they will receive $100 or more per month from the government to pay their living expenses. The eight men are requested to report to the local office of the Federal board at room 306, Wilcox Building, to arrange for their training. They are: George F. Scott, Lester Irvin Weeks, Karl E. Kennedy, William Earl Friend, Isaaic Thomas Branson, Joseph Clifton Moreau, Miles Blinn Sanford and John M. Kilroy.

INSURANCE HINGES ON FIRE BONDS.

Underwriters Laud Local Department, but Declare it Should be Enlarged.

Fire underwriters all over the world will watch for the returns from the city election on the night of June 7 to learn one fact: Did the bond issue of $1,250,000 for additions to the fire department facilities of the city carry? This is Proposition No. 5 on the ballot. The fire underwriters are interested in the result for upon the quality and extent of the fire protection given to the people rests the rates fixed for fire insurance in this city.

The fire underwriters declare that the Los Angeles fire department is first class as far as it goes, but say that there should be more of it if the city and lives and property are to be properly protected. Los Angeles should have one engine company for each 10,000 inhabitants. Today the city has but one company for each 20,000 or more people. The bond issue will go a long way toward remedying this condition.

BOARD URGES "YES."

The Board of Fire Commissioners, in asking for a "yes" vote on Proposition No. 5, on June 7, has issued the following statement:

"The bonds will be used to purchase fifteen new triple combination pumping engines, most of them going into houses to be constructed in strategic locations throughout the city. The new houses will cost $337,500; the new engines will cost $247,500. In addition four new ladder trucks will be purchased at a cost of $40,000. At present each engine company must protect an area aggregating ten square miles, while an area of five square miles is all that can be efficiently covered by an engine company.

"It is proposed to install 500 new fire hydrants in various localities. Los Angeles has grown so fast that the Bureau of Water Works and Supply has not been able to install fire hydrants fast enough to keep up with the phenomenal growth; therefore, the fire department will install sufficient hydrants to meet the present needs, and the Department of Public Service will then be enabled to keep up with the demand. This will cost $25,000.

SAME FOR TEN YEARS.

"For the past ten years no additions have been made to the fire alarm system, and there are whole communities which have no protection whatever in the way of alarm boxes. Should anything happen to the telephone system, and it is entirely possible that it may at any moment be placed out of commission, the larger portion of the city would be at the mercy of fire. It is proposed to install 1000 new fire alarm boxes, at a cost of approximately $500,000. While this will not meet the entire need of the city, it will at least give us the protection that is absolutely necessary until other funds can be secured for additions to the system.

"Los Angeles is now a city of the first class, and for several years has been out of the class of a country village; but the facilities with which the fire department is supplied would not be a credit to even a small country town. Los Angeles should realize that a metropolis must be equipped with a metropolitan fire department. The fire department does not ask for the impossible, but it is called upon in moments of dire distress to perform almost impossible feats with obsolete equipment, and the delay in receiving alarms, due to lack of a fire alarm system, does not better the condition; therefore, the fire department comes to the people of this city with an appeal to give it those things, which are necessary to enable it to meet the demands made upon it for protection of life and property."

CHINESE ARE NABBED.

Trio of Contrabands Arrested Near Indio to be Deported.

After trudging through the desert from the Mexican boundary line to Glamis, a station in the vicinity of Indio, three contraband Chinese, Lee Chew, Ty Sing and Ning Quong, were taken into custody by Immigration Inspector Morris and bought to this city and lodged in the County Jail. They were en route to Los Angeles and appeared at Glamis to take the Southern Pacific train, but were reported by the station agent, who thought they were contrabands. They will be ordered deported.

HELD AS MOONSHINERS.

Two Women Are Accused of Operating Still at South Colton.

Accused of having operated a sixty-gallon still at the home of Mrs. Cora Oliver on Congress street, South Colton, Mrs. Oliver and Mrs. Sadie Myers were held in $1500 bail each by U. S. Commissioner Long, yesterday.

Forty-five gallons of brandy and 200 gallons of corn mash were found on the premises, according to Prohibition Enforcement Agent O'Leary, who raided the place.

Ernest Wells of Montebello owes $1966.13, and has $60 to pay the same, according to a petition filed in the bankruptcy court yesterday.

VIADUCT BONDS ARE CRITICISED.

Million-Dollar Proposition Meets With Opposition.

Lack of Specific Contract is Noted by Opponents.

Fear Approval Would Peril State Board's Program.

Proposition No. 4 on the June 7 ballot, calling for the voting of $1,000,000 in bonds for the building of viaducts over the Los Angeles River and adjacent railroad tracks, has raised much discussion.

Those against voting the bonds at this time point out (1) that no specific contract has been drawn up pledging the construction of viaduct over all or any of the nine dangerous grade crossings which the people of the city, backed up by the engineers of the State Railroad Commission, agree must eventually be eliminated in the interest of public safety and convenience; (2) no specific agreement has been drawn up and signed by the railroads under which they are pledged to join with the city in the expense of building any viaducts constructed under the bond issue, should it carry, and the proportion of the railroads' share definitely set; (3) the resolution of the City Council calling for the presentation of the bond issue does not specifically state that the viaducts shall be built at places recommended by and under plans approved by the State Railroad Commission.

The railroads have already shown their opposition to at least that part of the commission's plans for a union terminal at the Plaza site by asking for and obtaining an order for a rehearing. Court action by the roads contesting the authority of the commission to issue an order for a joint terminal is expected to follow and it is feared by the opponents of the issue that the voting of viaduct bonds at this time would further delay the putting into effect of the commission's findings by efforts on the part of the railroads to show that a few viaducts over the tracks and the river had eliminated grade crossings and that no further action or money to carry out the complete program laid out by the engineers of the commission was needed.

Opponents of the bonds further declare that there is no necessity for the city to vote the viaduct bonds now and that to approve of them would be to endanger the entire program laid down by the State commission, which is exactly the result devoutly desired by those interests which have consistently opposed the carrying out of the commission's order to start work on a solution for all time to come of the entire grade crossings elimination and terminal problem of the city.

TRAINING CAMPS ARE TO REOPEN.

San Francisco and Seattle Sites Selected.

Physical, Mental and Moral Development is Goal.

Thousands Will Mobilize in July and August.

The spirit of Plattsburg, which gave to the nation 200,000 young Army officers during the war, is to be revived in July and August, when two citizens' military training camps are to be opened at the San Francisco Presidio and at Seattle, for men of the Western States.

These western training camps will be but two links of a chain in nine Army corps areas, stretching from the Golden Gate to Sandy Hook and from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico. Into these camps, during the brief training period, will be mobilized many thousands of seasoned and raw recruits desirous of devoting one month of the year in developing themselves physically, mentally and morally. Even as in the turbulent days, they will come from offices and stores, factories and foundries and from all other branches of the life of toil.

Applications for admittance to the camp at the San Francisco Presidio are being received at the headquarters of the American Legion, Post No. 8, Washington Building. As the camp will only accommodate approximately 1000 men, the application list will be closed on June 10.

CAMPS ARE FREE.

While in the past the camps of 1913 and 1914 were partly maintained by charging the applicants with nominal fees, the camps this year will be of no expense to the men while in training. The camps will be under the supervision of the War Department, which will pay all railroad fares to and from the camps, will provide all uniforms and equipment, meals, housing, bedding and other expenses.

Though all worthy applicants will be considered, the War Department desires to obtain as many as possible who have had previous military training. Age limits run from 16 to 35 years, and for men of approximately the same age separate companies are to be formed.

The revised citizens' training camps were created through an act of Congress adopted on June 4, 1920, which incorporated into it the essential features providing for the co-ordination of military and civilian agencies in a comprehensive system of national defense.

NATIONAL SYSTEM.

In the past each citizen attended the camps at his own expense. The cost, while not large, barred many who were desirous of attending. The present law makes the citizens' military training camp part of a national system of training for the national defense. The new law also provides that the government pay all the expenses. Citizens attending these camps will be under no obligations other than strict attention to instructions and observances of regulations during the training period.

The preface of the regulations for the camps states the purpose they are designed to serve:

"To bring together young men of all types, both native and foreign born, to develop closer national and social unity; to teach the privileges, duties and responsibilities of American citizenship; to show the public by actual example that camp instruction of the kind contemplated will be to the liking of their sons; that it will develop them physically, mentally and morally; and will teach Americanism in its true sense."

EMPLOYERS TO AID.

"In co-operation with the government, many large business firms throughout the United States have from time to time signified their willingness to grant employees time off with no deduction of wages in order that they may attend the camps," said one of the recruiting officers yesterday. "Thus not only may citizens generally receive this splendid training, which will be of the greatest benefit to them in energizing their bodies, quickening their minds, and strengthening their characters, without any expense on their own part for the privileges offered, but in many cases without even the loss of their customary wages. We may reasonably expect, therefore, that the camps will secure a thoroughly representative body of men."

Every effort will be made to safeguard the standards of the recruit at the training camps by encouraging attendance only of moral and upright men. A certificate of character will be required from all applicants. This certificate may be given him by a schoolmaster, clergyman, priest or rabbi.

ELABORATE PROGRAM.

Soldiers and Sailors Join in Memorial Day Observance.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, May 28.—Soldiers, sailors and marines will take an important part in the celebration of Memorial Day at Los Angeles Harbor, exercises to be held on both Sunday and Monday at the harbor and at Wilmington. Graves of soldiers and sailors in local cemeteries will be decorated with flowers, while the bay will also be strewn with wreaths and bouquets.

The program for Sunday includes services at the First Methodist Church, led by Rev. Thomas Grice, in which Submarine Base musicians will participate. In the afternoon an assembly will be formed at the Harbor View Cemetery, where orations will be delivered by Chaplain Matthews of Fort MacArthur, and Chaplain Kranz of the Submarine Base.

On Monday, the G.A.R., will meet at Wilmington at 10 a.m. to hold services at the Wilmington Cemetery. Henry E. Carter will deliver an address. At 2 p.m. school children will march from the Fifth-street school, San Pedro, to the First-street wharf.

All the ships of the Pacific Fleet will join with the Submarine Base in observing Memorial Day on Monday, when fitting ceremonies will be held. Each ship will furnish a company of sailors under arms, and floral offerings from all of the ships will be strewn upon the waters of the bay. A volley will be fired and taps sounded.

THE kitchen at Gus Mann's [illegible] and Oyster Grill, 611 South Spring, is one of its show places. It stimulates the appetite.

WATER BOND VICTORY IS PREDICTED.

Necessity of Additions to Aqueduct System Brought Home to Voters.

The municipal water system of Los Angeles has attracted worldwide commendation, and in coming before the voters on June 7 and asking for $3,000,000 for additions and betterments necessary to keep pace with the tremendous growth of the city, Chief Engineer Mulholland of the Bureau of Water Works and Supply and the members of the Board of Public Service Commissioners are dealing with citizens who have enjoyed the benefits of the tremendous Aqueduct system during the past eight years. The approval of the voters, therefore, to Mr. Mulholland's plans for the improvement of the storage and distributions part of the water system, will be enthusiastically given and the bonds voted, it is believed.

The bonds cost the taxpayers nothing. The water revenues meet the interest and sinking fund requirements. The citizens by voting "Yes" on Proposition No. 6 on June 7, simply give their approval to the use of the city's credit in borrowing the money with which to build needed reservoirs, trunk lines and mains.

THOUSAND A MONTH.

The enormous growth of the city is daily seen at the offices of the water department, where more than 1000 requests a month are being and have been for a long period received for new water services. From all parts of the city come constant demands for adequate mains. The demands must be met if Los Angeles is to go ahead. People must have water. The rushing waters of the Aqueduct can be supplied if the trunk lines and mains are built and the supply can be kept constant if additional reservoirs are constructed for storing water to be used during the dry summer months.

If the bonds carry the expenditure of nearly $1,500,000 is proposed for the construction of new reservoirs, apportioned as follows: Tujunga, $650,000; Encino, $446,000, and Stone Canyon, $338,000. An additional $486,000 will be spent on a trunk line connecting the water system and the Tujunga reservoir.

MANY OTHER PROJECTS.

Other projects planned in the event the bonds carry—and all of them are vitally necessary—are as follows:

Crystal Spring conduit renewal, $125,000.

Twenty-four-inch steel line from Western avenue to Compton avenue via Slauson avenue, $146,000.

Enlargement of the San Fernando Valley pipe system, $100,000.

Twenty-four-inch cast iron line on Twelfth street, from Main street to Central avenue, $65,000.

Twenty-four-inch cast iron line on Hooper avenue from Sixteenth street to Vernon avenue, $150,000.

Santa Fe avenue industrial district trunk line, $161,000.

Boyle Heights relief trunk line, $100,000.

Miscellaneous supply trunk lines and booster plants, $233,000.

This program of water storage and distribution development, as outlined by Mr. Mulholland, is expected to meet with general approval, for it will care for the needs of the city, which cannot be properly served until the improvements are made. The improvements cannot be made unless the bonds are voted. An overwhelming "Yes" vote on Proposition No. 6 is, therefore, expected.

CHRISTMAS SLIGHT IS HER CHARGE.

Spouse Spurned Yuletide Dinner With Family for "Other Woman," Says Wife

A husband's failure to eat Christmas dinner with his family is regarded by Mrs. Maud M. Eastman, young and attractive wife of a proprietor of a chain of dairy lunchrooms, as ample reason for seeking a divorce, for in a divorce complaint filed Friday, the husband, Ralph E. Eastman, is accused of such an offense.

Mrs. Eastman is popular in Santa Monica Bay society. She married Mr. Eastman at Portland, Or., in 1913, and they have two children, Muriel, age 6 years, and Betty Jeane, 1 year old. While residing in San Francisco, her complaint states, her husband struck her in the face and absented himself from home for long periods.

During the past few months, while residing in Ocean Park, she charges, Mr. Eastman attended a public dance hall with other "female persons," and remained away from home as late as 2 a.m.

She declares that on last Christmas Day he failed to purchase Yuletide gifts for his family and refused to eat Christmas dinner with her, choosing, instead, to enter one of his own lunchrooms with another woman, where, in the presence of his employees, "they proceeded to indulge in a very elaborate Christmas dinner, frequently embracing her and addressing her in endearing terms." Then, on March 10, she further charges, she found a photograph of another woman in her husband's possession and a letter referring to the strange woman, which caused her great humiliation.

E. Marion Crawford, attorney for Mrs. Eastman, refused to comment on the case.

"ROLLER" CONVICTED.

Man Charged With Robbing Policeman to be Sentenced Tuesday.

The sensational shooting of J. J. Diamond and the arrest of Edward A. Marion, the latter a young Navy man, for "rolling" Policeman J. U. Lucas, who pretended to be intoxicated, were recalled in Judge Cole's court Friday. Marion was tried by a jury which brought in a verdict of guilty. He will be sentenced next Tuesday.

The story was that Marion obtained from Mr. Lucas an Ingersoll watch and $2.50 in money. Mr. Lucas, after the purported robbery, promptly knocked down Marion and called to a brother officer, D. A. Baker, to get Diamond, who was escaping. Mr. Baker shot and wounded Diamond, who later succumbed. Marion denied that he robbed the officer.

punishment at so much cash and so many days in jail, they serve the days, but do not pay the fine, escaping through a loop-hole in the law allowed indigent violators.

CROWDED CALENDARS.

One of the greatest objections to the Federal court handling violations of the liquor laws is that the calendars are crowded with the litigation, the most of it of the most inconsequential sort, with the effect that important cases involving great issues are left untried. Weeks have ben spent by the two departments of the Federal court here trying liquor cases, and other important litigation simply had to wait. Sometimes several days are consumed in cases involving the illicit sale or handling of liquor in the smallest quantities.

By agreement between Judges Bledsoe and Trippet Monday afternoons are devoted to the consideration of these matters, pleas, sentences, etc., in some instances the balance of the week being consumed in various other phases of the same character of work. The froway, unkempt, dirty sort of defendents who are weekly marshaled before the court recall nothing quite so much as the individuals summoned to the sessions of the sunrise court, and it is necessary to disinfect the court rooms after the conclusion of the afternoon's session. All races, conditions and ages are represented in the line. The exhibition is a sad one because high-class conditions ought to be in evidence in a Federal court, where issues of great moment are determined. The spectacle is that of a police court.

PASSING THE BUCK.

D. J. O'Leary, who, since the death of "Lucky" Roberts, and the resignation of Agent Fry, has been the sole Federal prohibition enforcement agent in Los Angeles county, says much confusion exists between the city and the Federal authorities as to which under the present status of legislation has the sole handling of liquor prosecution cases. The city is supposed to have sole jurisdiction in these matters following recent legislation, but at this time only certain offenders are haled into the police court.

No attempt has been made to enforce the county prohibition law. In cases where an individual is charged with illegal drinking the city handles the matter; where it is a charge of transporting the buck is passed to the Federal authorities. The lawbreakers themselves prefer to be tried by the city courts, as the fines are small as a rule, and they pay them willingly.

Agent O'Leary says it will be some time before the present tangle is unraveled and a thorough understanding reached as to which power shall be invoked for the punishment of the liquor law violations. Now it is in a hazy state and neither one or the other knows exactly what to do.

When it falls to the lot of the county to prosecute violations of the Volstead Act, supported by the Wright Act, the overcrowded Los Angeles jail will be bursting with prisoners. Probably most of the bootleggers will be put to improving the county roads, which are so dry they are dusty.

The Wright Act will place a heavy burden on the county courts, the District Attorney's office and the county peace officers, it is declared. Violations outside incorporated sections of the county would be prosecuted in the justice courts first, and within incorporated limits preliminary hearings would be in the police courts.

GROCERS WANT TO HELP LOWER FOOD COSTS

Not to Blame for H.C.L.

The idea that the rank and file of grocers throughout the country are boosting prices for the sake of realizing exorbitant profits is absolutely false.

Retail prices have gone up because the retailer has been compelled to put them up. The grocer has to pay more for his goods, more for rent, more for clerks' salaries; consequently, must charge more.

Shortage of raw materials, of productive labor and a demand that has far outstripped production are the direct causes of present-day prices. As a rule, the grocer is transacting business on the same percentage of profit as in the days of low selling prices.

Grocers depend upon you for a livelihood. They know just as you know that to cheat in any way, shape or form, would kill their trade outright. Common sense says that no intelligent grocer will attempt to "kite" prices beyond legitimate profits. He can't afford to.

BUSINESS NOT A BED OF ROSES

For Man Behind Counter

Because of a scant supply the grocer often has serious trouble in procuring merchandise. He has to stand the sharp cut of complaints from buyers because of high costs. He all too frequently is blamed, when absolutely blameless. And is not, on a whole, making a wider margin of net profit than he did when conditions were normal, trade better satisfied and business transactions decidedly more pleasant.

The grocer is your servant. He is in business to serve your requirements. He doesn't make you a slave to high costs. He is in exactly the same boat you are in. He sells goods you want and ask for. He must meet your demands or get out of business. He has no choice in the matter. He can't go contrary to your wishes.

The consumer can do more towards restoring prices to normal levels than the grocer can. This can be accomplished with positive certainty by buying only food products of sound value and proven economy. Careless buying and rank extravagance are unquestionably vital factors in maintenance of high costs.

When a consumer forces a grocer to sell a sixty-five-cent article where a thirty-five-cent article would answer the purpose equally well he is encouraging production of high priced goods of short value and hampering the manufacture of food products of sound value and fair prices. On the other hand, when the consumer insists on goods of inferior worth he is inviting inevitable waste that stands for loss rather than economy. In such occurrences the consumer, not the grocer, is at fault. For, remember, the grocer must give you what you want despite the fact that he would rather supply your requirements with goods of sterling value at a minimum cost.

FOOD PRODUCTS

Of Utmost Purity and Food Value

If you will but consult your grocer regarding the true values of different grades of goods, you most assuredly will increase the purchasing power of your dollars and strike straight at one of the main roots of high costs by weeding out extravagance.

What the buyer demands more than any other one thing determines the market price of commodities of all sorts. If you demand full-value foods, insist upon having them, you will get them and at legitimate prices. Persistent demand for top-price goods of questionable value will then be sharply curtailed and production stimulated in lines of maximum merit. And with this increased production will come lower costs, just as sure as day follows night.

The solution of the problem so far as the consumer is concerned is simply this: select only proudcts of recognized value, sold at lowest prices permissible under present conditions—eliminate waste—don't encourage the production of price-heavy products—co-operate with your grocer—don't lose sight of the fact that he must cater to your wishes. Your demand for the right type of goods is the best means at your command to straighten out topsy-turvy conditions which are a burden to the conscientious manufacturer, the square-dealing grocer and the consumer who are putting forth every effort under the sun to reduce the high cost of production, high cost of merchandising and high cost of living.

Mr. John A. Ulman, President of the National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States, an eminent authority on food values and intimately acquainted with manufacturing and marketing conditions, urges close co-operation between retailer and consumer and careful discrimination in the selection of merchandise—as a means of restoring prices to normal and promoting the distribution of the best grade of goods.

STAGE SET FOR GIGANTIC SHOW.

Many Celebrities to Appear in Actors' Fund Fete.

Festival to be Held Next Saturday at Speedway.

Everything from Rodeo to Pageant on Program.

The stage is all set and all filmdom is working to present to Los Angeles an extravaganza of amusement events, which is to be produced next Saturday at the Beverly Speedway, Daniel Frohman, supervising head of the Actors' Fund festival, declares it will be the greatest festivity the West has seen.

This is what the Actors' Fund of America, under the auspices of Frohman, is contributing for the entertainment of Los Angeles and Southern California:

A mammoth six-ring rodeo with 300 cowboys, riders and western players, including such stars as Douglas Fairbanks, Tom Mix, Dustin Farnum, Tony Moreno, Roy Stewart, Hoot Gibson, Buck Jones, Will Rogers, Harry Carey and others.

A pioneer day pageant, with an Indian attack on a prairie schooner caravan.

A Roman derby between four chariot teams, the race to be the same as that seen in the "Queen of Sheba" production, with Tom Mix and "Snowy" Baker among the riders.

"Snowy" Baker's twenty native Australians in an Australian stockmen's bush picnic.

Tod Sloan, daddy of all jockeys, in an exhibition race.

Roy Stewart in an exhibition with his trick pony.

Buck Jones as the frontier minister with his old chuck wagon.

An automobile race, with Antonio Moreno in his diminutive 500-pound racing car, competing against a Stagg-Packard.

SPECTACULAR PAGEANT.

Events that will be staged in front of the grandstand during the night will include the spectacular pageant, "The Adornment of Woman," in which 700 men and beautiful women of the film world will participate. This entire performance is to be presented under the direction of George Hopkins of the Famous Players-Lasky studios, and will include the following celebrities:

Elinor Glyn, Claire Windsor, Dorothy Dalton, Ruby De Remer, Mary Thurman, May Allison, Eva Novak, Kathleen Kirkham, Shirley Mason, Rosemary Theby, Priscilla Dean, Pauline Frederick, Edith Storey, Irene Rich, Florence Stone, Kathleen Clifford, Ruth Renick, Ethel Terry, Dorothy Phillips, Ruth Roland, Dagmar Godowsky, Elinor Faire, Margery Daw, Alice Terry, Gloria Swanson, Ethel Clayton, Virginia Hammond, Phyllis Haver and Mildred Harris.

The Marion Morgan dancers will appear in a bacchanale dancing feature; Frederic KoVert will present a special feature; the Celeste Ballet has arranged a delightful pageant; the Mack Sennett and Christie studios bathing girls will be seen in "Fashion's Frivolities;" Betty Compson, Bebe Daniels, Wanda Hawley, Julia Faye, Lila Lee, Shannon Day, May McAvoy, Ruth Miller and Kathleen Williams will present "Fashion's Dream of Luxury," including fifty girl models; Douglas Fairbanks will offer a scene, including a sword duel from "The Three Musketeers;" Mary Pickford will appear with her company in a scene from "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

The evening's program will close with a dazzling fireworks exhibition.

Charlie Ray, accompanied by twenty-five society girls in gingham dresses, will conduct a country store.

Numerous other events are nearing completion.

RAID HONEY TO SUPPLY ENERGY.

Winter Life of Bees Studied by Princeton Savant.

Tells How They Warm Up When Cold Threatens.

Production of Heat Causes Attacks on Larder.

BY W. E. ALLEN,
California Biological Feature Service.

In a recent conversation with Dr. E. G. Conklin of Princeton University reference was made to the matter of temperature regulation by animals, and Dr. Conklin mentioned the interesting case of bees which is not known to many people. One of his former pupils, Dr. E. F. Phillips, now of the United States Bureau of Entomology, made a special study of the winter life of bees some years ago. Many people already knew that bees were active throughout the winter and that they needed a great deal of food, although many other insects remained dormant in cold weather and used no food. Dr. Phillips was especially concerned with the activity of the bees and the reason for their use of much or little food under differing circumstances.

Like other observers he found the bees crowded closely together in a swarming mass in the hive, but he wished particularly to know how that condition affected temperature. So he set a thermometer in the midst of the swarm. Thus he found that as cold increased the temperature of the swarm was reduced and at the same time the insects became less active until a temperature below 38 deg. Fahrenheit was reached. Then they quickly became very active, creeping over each other and fluttering their wings until the temperature was raised to or above a point high enough to be safe. In some cases this activity was carried on until the temperature reached 90 deg.

But such great activity and such production of heat requires a great deal of food to furnish the energy. Hence it was found that the bees ate great quantities of the stored-up honey. Extended investigation showed that if the temperature were kept a little above 40 deg., the whole swarm of bees remained sluggish and ate little or no honey. If it was allowed to get below 40 deg. or very much higher, there was sure to be activity and much eating of honey. It is evident that this information has been very valuable to beekeepers because it enables them to avoid starvation and loss of a hive by too great activity in winter. All they need to do is to guard against too much range in temperature.

One would not readily think that a scientific study of the temperature of insects in cold weather could have any commercial value, yet this certainly did. The study also had marked scientific value through contributing to our knowledge of the ways by which living things may adjust themselves to shifting temperatures.

SIMILAR, BUT NOT THE SAME.

Two Statements That Sound Alike, Are Different, but Both True.

"Truth is like an orange," said a modern wise man. "You can cut it in half, both halves are approximately the same, yet to get a perfect whole you must join them together."

This applies to two statements often heard in connection with Times' want-ads.

"Everybody reads The Times for want-ads," is only half the orange; the other half is, "Everybody reads the want-ads in The Times."

HER VISIT SO HELPFUL.

Martha was a pale little wife and often very tired. Her white face showed it. Her husband was worried, but knew not how to bring the bloom of health to the pale cheeks.

Then Cousin Helen, from the east, came to visit.

When Cousin Helen had been visiting for a week or so the husband remarked to her: "Helen, you can't imagine just how much good your visit has done Martha. Since you have been here she looks ten years younger, and has taken on such a beautiful complexion!"

"Well, I'm glad, Cousin George, if I have been any help to Martha, and if she uses the rouge I leave for her she'll always have that healthy complexion like mine."—[Indianapolis News.

TIJUANA TO BE MADE OVER.

community and banish the unpleasant conditions that now exist in Tijuana."

The new Tijuana is not to be a Blue Law community. The track is one of the fastest and most perfect in the world and the best blooded horses on the continent will be sought to enter the races. The best of horses will bring the wealthiest of tourists, so to satisfy the better elements that are expected to frequent the resort lawlessness will be banished.

Fashionable clubs will be organized, and here will assemble those who frequent the more distant recreation spots, such as Monaco and Nice. Open gambling is not sanctioned by the present administration in Mexico. To receive the support of the government vice will not be tolerated. Such is the dictum of the organizers of the project and such is the plan on which President Obregon has placed his stamp of approval.

COMPANY'S PLEDGES.

In discussions with President Obregon, the company has arranged to submit at the proper time detailed reports regarding the project, in which it has pledged itself to employ noted Mexican engineers as well as American engineers in the construction work.

The company has also guaranteed to the Mexican administration that the racing course at Tijuana will equal the famed turfs of Santiago, Hempstead, Longchamps and others. Here, for a period of not less than 100 days each year, racing will be conducted.

Though the Eighteenth Amendment will receive no recognition, the old regime with its tawdry raiment of vice and its crimson thrills is to be banished. An American Monte Carlo is to arise in its stead—not a Monte Carlo of wide-open gambling, but a health resort and a pleasure spot that promises to have embodied in its creation the true significance of the word "pleasure."

Its climate, similar to that of Southern California, is unsurpassable with its moderately cool nights and its pleasantly warm days. The land, though now it resembles in general appearance the Southern California that the earliest pioneers found, can, within a few years, become as verdant and alluring to the eye as its northern neighbor.

Though Tijuana will not be a watering place—a resort nestling on the shores of the sea — it is but twelve miles from the Pacific. At a point directly west of the townsite it is planned to develop an attractive beach, to be linked to Tijuana by twelve miles of paved boulevard.

Its proximity to San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco, the builders of the project claim, already assure the success of the proposed Monte Carlo of this continent. They believe it will lure to California wealthy tourists who now hie themselves to Europe to satisfy their thirst and to spend their money as they desire without interference from the blue-law jays.

During the Cantu administration several efforts were made to establish a modern wide-open town at Tijuana—with racing, prize fights, gambling and other sports barred in this country. With the changing of administrations in Mexico these dreams vanished into thin air. Where crookedness and vice thrive men of means and good reputation will not be found, even though they be sportsmen. In the past such men have visited Tijuana, but few of them ever returned to the place once they had left it. Hence, the existing Tijuana has failed to have its name heralded throughout the land as an ideal place to spend one's time and money in the pursuits of pleasure.

The Obregon administration has taken a different view of Tijuana. Though, today it consists of squat, ugly shacks, sweltering in a perpetual summer's heat, the present government visualizes Tijuana as a mecca for those who now flock to Europe to enjoy life. It is a stable, progressive administration, always looking forward to the things that mean progress to Mexico, a nation that has remained dormant for so many years amidst turbulent revolutionary periods.

Mexico has no such resort that may compete with the popularity of Cuba's recreative spots, or any of the European spots. In Tijuana, government officials see possibilities of establishing such a resort.

A GHOST TOWN OF THE FILMS.

Inceville Settings Still Shine by the Sea.

Studio Vacated, but Romance Lives On.

Many Stars First Gleamed Within Its Portals.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT.

If you've ever gone into the heart of an old mining district you'll know what it is to run across a ghost town. Relics of a romantic past these. They brimmed with life in their time. They had their drama, their comedy, their glory and decline. They are the landmarks of progress—spectacular progress which comes with early growths and beginnings.

Filmland, too, has its ghost towns. Homes of great endeavors were they once upon a time—now the cities of silence. Up at Niles there is the old Essanay studio, where Charlie Chaplin made "The Tramp," and where Edna Purviance became his leading woman; unoccupied it is except for the occasional visitor on location. At Santa Barbara there is the American studio, closed for nearly a year. The spell of silence may be broken here, however, because the abandonment is only temporary.

The Pompeii of the ghost towns, though, is Inceville. And it is of Inceville that I would speak, and of its era of romance, and its days of triumphant picture-making, for it was thither that I journeyed about a week ago in company with Thomas H. Ince, who had not visited the location since he quit making pictures there, and William Collier, who had his first introduction to the films at the city by the sea.

Inceville was famous the country over seven or eight years ago, because of its beautiful location and the fact that it witnessed the beginning of so many stars' careers. "Bill" Hart, for instance. It was there that he made his first great successes.

Charles Ray, too, won his spurs in stardom. There Louise Glaum and Dorothy Dalton rose to stellar heights. Dustin Farnum made one of his greatest pictures, "The Iron Strain." H. B. Warner, Billie Burke, Bessie Barriscale, Orrin Johnson, Gladys Brockwell, Frank Keenan, Katherine Calvert, Lewis Stone, Buster Collier, Clara Williams, Julia Dean, Bessie Love, William Desmond, Mildred Harris—what a list of names? Some of them were stars, and some were but playing parts.

Romances, too, developed there. Reginald Barker met and married Clara Williams. Bill Desmond met Mary McIvor. Charlie Ray, too, was married while at Inceville.

How many people recollect now that Lew Stone played his first picture engagement there? How many people remember that Willie Collier made his two pictures, "The No-Good Guy" and "Willie's Wobbly Way," there.

COLLIER'S AZTEC TEMPLE.

One of the settings from the latter Collier picture still stands. It is a reproduction of an Aztec temple, used in a prehistoric sequence that was introduced to add color and spectacle to the comedy. It is near the corral, deep in the canyon from the sea.

That corral, too, is a museum of relics itself. There are the old stage coaches that were used in Bill Hart's pictures, like the "Midnight Stage" and the "Two-Gun Man." There is the old carry-all which took the extras to location. The vehicles have not been moved in five years.

Nearer the sea are the settings used in Billie Burke's picture, "Peggy"—the Skotch street, the church where Bill Desmond, as the minister, was supposed to preach of a Sunday. The lighthouse of the SONG RULES IN POWER SUPREME.

Great Los Angeles Music Week Opens Today.

Universal Harmony Within City's Gates.

Program and Personnel Shows Hugeness of Effort.

A long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together—and lo! the greatest week in the artistic side of life in Los Angeles, Music Week, is upon us, with all its gorgeous panoply of color and glorious fanfare of sound.

It's going to be everybody's week, because everybody is putting forth two hands—and a voice—in the making of it. A million hands and half a million voices—what a Herculean task has been accomplished, what an overwhelming volume of sweet sounds will rise to the blue vault of the sky of Southern California from dewy morn to starlit eve! And for eight days, which is the correct length of such a momentous affair as Music Week.

But, of course, that monumental week has been many months in the making. It took some time to build Rome, and it has taken some time to assemble and drill the thousand and one choral bodies of men, women and children who will be heard in various parts of Los Angeles and its environs every day in the week and almost every hour in the day.

Since the spheres revolve to heavenly harmonies, Los Angeles is doing well to fall into the universal rhythm, and the happy wisdom of this splendid endeavor, this wonderful Music Week, will become more and more manifest as the years roll by. It will doubtless show itself in the daily lives of the citizens, in a gradual readjustment of jarring outward and inward conditions, and even in an abatement of the discords and dissonances of the streets. For all these beneficent things are the mission of music.

CONCORD OF SOUND.

The man who is not moved by concord of sweet sounds is fit for stratagems and spoils—so says Shakespeare—and one is forewarned to look on him with distrust. Angelenos may therefore breathe freely and walk unimpeached, for they are now, modestly and without advertising purposes, letting the whole world know that they are honest men with a perfectly honest and wholesome taste for music.

Where there are many men there will be many tastes, some good and some less good, but a glance at the various programs scheduled for Music Week in Los Angeles must convince the most skeptical of the numerous Thomases that musical themes of lasting worth and beauty have been chosen wherever and whenever possible, and that the patently meretricious and over-jazzy have been cast wholeheartedly into the discard—without, it would appear, a single vote in their favor.

Practically every type of program is represented outside of this in the week's schedule of presentations. There are to be great community choruses in the parks and auditoriums. There will be band concerts and pageantry and parades. There will be recitals by thousands of pupils representing scores of teachers, who have elected Los Angeles as their home of endeavor.

In every church, in every concert hall, and e'en at every trysting place will be melody and song. Each hour of the day, the half hours and the minutes will mark the start or the close of some event.

So much for the present position of Los Angeles in the matter of music. And it is much — promising more and more, and yet more, for the future, until the city will take her proud position with the fairest, among other reasons, because the most musical. This beautiful dream is not Utopian.

Every member of the innumerable committees who have worked so hard, so long and so tirelessly for Music Week believes this from Mrs. Willoughby Rodman, chairman of Los Angeles Community Service, to the members of the least active committee, and they're going to make it come true.

PROMOTING THE ENTERPRISE.

The executive music committee numbers F. W. Blanchard, chairman; Mrs. Norton Jamison, vice-chairman; L. E. Behymer, J. W. Boothe, Mrs. A. R. Gates, George Eastman, J. B. Raitt, Dr. Edgar

HUGE TRIPLE BILL.

The Serious, the Comic and the Musical at Grauman's.

A big triple program composed of "Too Wise Wives," a Lois Weber production; "The High Sign," Buster Keaton's latest comedy achievement, and festive musical offerings marking the anniversary of Grauman's Symphony Orchestra and Los Angeles Music Week, opens at Grauman's tomorrow.

"Too Wise Wives," revolving round the episodes in the lives of two married pairs, of which one wife is over attentive, and the other directly opposite, is said to be one of the best of the Lois Weber creations.

In the cast are Claire Windsor, Louis Calhern, Mona Lisa and Phillips Smalley.

A widely diversified cast, both in talents and physique, ranging from seven-foot giants to dwarfs, support Buster Keaton in his sober, but hilarious rambles and gambols, in "The High Sign." Bartine Burtett is his leading woman.

Sid Grauman will stage a series of presentations, including an atmospheric prologue. Mischa Guterson has arranged a magnificent musical score for Los Angeles Music Week and the anniversary of the founding of the orchestra; Henry Murtagh will render "The Storm," and several prominent singers will appear.

J. M. Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy" will be shown today for the last times.

"GET YOUR MAN" IS THE PICTURE AT HIP.

Starting today, the feature photoplay production at the Hippodrome will be Buck Jones, the Fox wonder star, in "Get Your Man," a stirring tale of the Northwest Mounted Police.

The "Stepping Stone Revue" shows Phil Golden in an artistic and versatile dance melange. McCormick and Winehill are two fellows who title their talking skit "Just a Laugh," and judging from advance reports they will elicit many laughs while on the stage.

Burton and Shea present a revue of 1921 in song and dance, and Hodge and Lowell give their amusing character comedy, "Object, Matrimony."

The Cliff Bailey Duo, eccentric clown funsters in tunes, twists and falls, fill out the bill of entertainment.

PLANS HOUSEWARMING.

Together with Bebe Daniels and Estella Harrison, Marie Mosquini made plans last night at her new home on Victoria Drive for her housewarming in about two weeks.

OF ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

Casco Bay.

Nowhere fairer, sweeter, rarer,
Does the golden-looked fruit-bearer
Through his painted woodlands stray,
Than where hillside oaks and beeches
Overlook the long, blue reaches,
And green isles of Casco Bay;
Nowhere day, for delay,
With a tenderer look beseeches,
"Let me with my charmed earth stay."

On the grainlands of the mainlands
Stands the serried corn like trainbands,
Plume and pennon rustling gay;
Out at sea, the islands wooded,
Silver birches, crimson-hooded,
White sea foam and sand hills gray,
Stretch away, far away,
Dim and dreamy, over-brooded
By the lazy autumn day.
—[J. G. Whittier.

Eight Old Masters.

As the doughboy said, when he and the companiable C. Lewis Hinds, well-known art critic of London, had been looking at the pictures in the Metropolitan Museum together: "I guess there's more ancient than modern art."

He hit the nail squarely on the head. There is more ancient than modern art, in spite of the fact that our facile modernists, and more especially the ultras, are turning out innumerable canvases with feverish haste and intensity. How many, do you suppose, of all these hectic areas of paint, big or little, will survive through the centuries and be hung in places of honor beside that subtle and silvery Velasquez, that gloomingly brilliant Rembrandt, that glorious piece of life and color by Rubens?

Not one among many, many thousands, though no doubt the easy optimism of the present-day worker—or shirker—lets him spell fame in every trumpery canvas dashed off in his fine frenzy of "inspiration." He has yet to learn the lesson of the old masters, that art is not free, but bound, and that the noblest artist builds superbly well within the prescribed limits.

How big, how important, then, is the exhibition of eight old masters of painting that is being held in one of the galleries of Cannell and Chaffin. For these eight canvases have escaped the envious tooth of time. They have been rescued from the dark maw of oblivion. They have survived because they are alive with the enduring qualities of art.

There are three landscapes in the exhibition, two from the brush of Thomas Gainsborough, one from that of John Constable. They are very beautiful, although not painted in the landscape technique of today. Yet Constable attained to it, or to something very like it, in his later works. The present picture, "A Cottage," is an early example, and a good one. It is in fine condition, is rich in color, interesting in composition. Note how tenderly the trees meet in the sky in the distance. This picture, which is signed and dated, was exhibited in the Royal Academy in 1817, and is mentioned in Leslie's "Memoirs of the Life of John Constable."

Both the Gainsboroughs are fine examples of this great landscape and portrait painter's work. "The Edge of the Common" is exceptionally good. It is initiated by the artist in monogram, and is described in Sir Walter Armstrong's "Gainsborough." Attractive, too, is "Pill Bay, near Bristol," rich in tone, very decorative in composition.

The large portrait by George Romney is distinguished and lovely, cool and exquisite in its scheme of color. The portrait is that of Miss Mildred Stewart Wright, a beautiful young English girl, who is shown leaning on a balustrade. She stands in a garden with a background of foliage and faintly indicated architecture. Her finely shaped head is crowned with golden-brown hair. She wears a bluish-green bodice, with sleeves of cream-colored chiffon. A coral ribbon runs across the bodice from shoulder to waist line. The lower part of the costume is a draped skirt of changeable blue-green satin, delightfully painted, soft and shimmering. Her left arm, just above the wrist, is encircled by a double string of pearls.

The picture as a whole is one of unusual grace, and is particularly decorative. It is one of the best portraits done by Romney before he left London for Rome, and is strongly reminiscent of the Lady Warren in Romney's group of Sir George and Lady Warren and child, which was his first great public success when it was exhibited at the Free Society of Artists in 1769. Miss Wright was the daughter of A. Stewart Wright, Esq., of Hambledean, Guilford, Surrey. This portrait is described in the Romney book of W. Roberts and Humphrey Ward.

A very stunning portrait is that of Mrs. Mary Robinson, by Sir Joshua Reynolds. It was exhibited in the Royal Academy in 1883, from the collection of Sir Hickman Beckett Bacon, Bart. Another highly interesting portrait is that of George Rogers Barrett, by Sir Thomas Lawrence. It is one of the really fine portraits of men by Lawrence, and is in an excellent state of preservation.

The influence of Sir Henry Raeburn, R.A., that superb painter of men, may be noted in many of the most successful figure painters of our own time. How free, easy and audacious is the brushwork of the portrait of Col. Houston in the exhibition at Cannell's, and how glorious is the color of that red military coat! And the ruddy face itself—how candidly and how convincingly it reveals the man's strength and simplicity! Lockart Agnew says of this picture: "The Raeburn portrait of Col. Houston is not only genuine, but in beautiful condition, and a fine example of this great painter's work."

Albert Cuyp, famous Dutch painter of portraits and genres, was born in 1605, died in 1691. The portrait shown is that of a little girl 5 years old, life size, painted on wood. The buxom little maid is pilloried in all the absurd finery of the period, starched lace ruff, starched lace headdress, stiff brocaded gown reaching to her feet, heavy gold chain around her waist—alas, the poor infant, no wonder she looks serious. Yet her round rosy face is very childlike withal, and the whole picture, with its dish of cherries and its paroquet, is delightful and intimate. The details are painted with consummate care and finesse.

One of the loveliest pictures in the gallery is the portrait of Louise de Malezieu, by Nattier. It comes from the collection of Baron de Beurnonville. Its color scheme is one of bloomy richness and tender softness. No hard lines, no edges, but each plane melting into another with suavity and grace. And how fine, how lovely the sitter is, gracious, delicate, noble. A picture to linger over, a truly beautiful thing.

My affections—I confess it—are divided between Mlle. Louis de Malezieu and Miss Mildred Stewart Wright, each of whom is the perfect flower of the race from which she springs—and, it may be added, the perfect expression of the artist who painted her.

Various Pictures.

After exploiting a series of highly successful one-man exhibitions, the new Stendahl galleries, in the Ambassador Hotel, are resting on their well-earned laurels for a brief period—very brief, we are informed, for the attractive one-man shows will be resumed in a few weeks.

Meanwhile, there is no dearth of good pictures in the galleries, for Mr. Stendahl has assembled a dozen or two, or maybe three, of the many he has on hand, and these have now been hung on the walls, giving an air of festive variety to the always attractive rooms, where the art lover has found himself at home from the very first day.

Arnold Mountfort, a well-known English artist, who recently slipped down to Los Angeles from Santa Barbara, is represented by some interesting portraits, the one of an English bishop (or whatever he may be) which was shown at the Royal Academy a few years ago, being especially fine. In the nude with landscape, the landscape is full of feeling. A small study of the head of a bulldog, in crayons, touched with water color, is a gem. The portrait of Mrs. Jack Hibbard glows with color, and you realize that the characterization must be a true one. So, with the study of Peggy Greenwood, the face seen in profile.

From William Wendt we have several strong and characteristic landscapes, among them an attractive study of sea and shore at Laguna Beach; from Dan Sayre Groesbeck, one of the brilliant drawings he made in Russia; from Armin Hansen, powerful as well as subtle painter of the sea, "Making Port," a red tug under the hull of a huge ship, the water full of movement and really wet; from Benjamin Brown, a fine study, "Edge of the Desert;" from Guy Rose, a well-painted, reclining nude, figure; from John Rich, a few of his charming, sunlit interiors with youthful feminine figures in white or pink or blue.

Hanson Puthuff is represented by an attractive landscape panel tenderly painted; Alson Clark, by a fine mountain landscape and a suave and colorful figure study, the usual semi nude girl before a mirror; Edgar Payne by a magnificent study of mountain forms, "Solitude's Enchantment;" Orrin White by two pictures full of delicate color harmonies, "Icy Solitude" and "Shadows on the Snow"—this White needs watching, or he'll get there before we know it.

These are a few of the interesting subjects at the Stendahl. There are many others that are perhaps equally likeable.

Cathedral Chapel was the scene of Miss Gladys Carson's marriage to Edward A. Scheller on Wednesday morning. Father Conaty celebrated the nuptial mass and read the marriage lines. A fashionable crowd filled the church. The bride, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Manuel Carson, and a member of one of the notable old Spanish families, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of ivory satin, handsomely embroidered and trimmed with rose point lace. It was cut short and made with a court train. The long veil was of rose point lace and fell from a high Spanish crown of the lace which was wreathed in orange blossoms. The altar of white roses, with back ground of trailing rose vines, was lighted with cathedral candles and made a perfect setting for the bridal party.

Miss Cecile Brooks of San Francisco, frocked in orchid chiffon under cream lace and wearing a charming picture hat to match and carrying an armful of American Beauty roses, was maid of honor. Miss Hortense McLaughlin, who served as one of the bridesmaids in place of her sister, Miss Cecile McLaughlin, who was injured in an automobile accident wore a green taffeta frock made with a scalloped hem, faced with orchid and touched up with orchid elsewhere. Her hat matched and she carried a big basket filled with Richmond roses. Miss Florence Kays was the other bridesmaid and was in apricot taffeta, made with a perky sash. She wore a big hat that matched and carried a basket of Los Angeles roses. Little Genevieve Rutledge of San Francisco was a quaint picture in a frock of pink-fluted ruffles cut in points. She carried a little old-fashioned basket of Cecile Brunner roses. Joe Lahey served as best man, while the ushers were Gabriel Duque and Victor Carson. An elaborate breakfast was served at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. John F. Francis, at which there were 125 guests. Upon their return the couple will reside at 257 South Van Ness avenue. Mr. Scheller is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Scheller and brother of Mrs. Richard Francis Mogan of San Francisco.

They arrived in time for the marriage Wednesday of Miss Gladys Carson and Edward Scheller, they being relatives of the Carson family.

With Infinite Pleasure We Announce This Sale
Knowing That the Many Women Who Have Anticipated the Savings
Will Find This a Value Revelation
Of Deeper Emphasis, Higher Beauty, Finer Merchandising
Than Ever Before

Nor can beauty and value alone encompass the importance of this event. Quite as impressive is the variety that touches every phase of lingerie needs from the most simple and practical cotton undergarment to a fairy-wrought conceit of georgette, lace and silk.

One always thinks of brides-to-be in a Lingerie Sale—and so to them we have much to offer. Equally interesting, however, are the thousands of garments gathered to meet the preferences of the conservative woman and the miss whose wishes are spelled in frills and lacy motifs.

Tuesday, May 31st, marks the beginning of this sale—a day when women will instinctively feel the necessity of coming to the store as soon as the doors are open — while the entire ensemble is displayed in perfect order and when the value list will be complete in every detail.

The story of "IRENE," that ambitious little shop-girl, and her brightening fortunes has finely contrasted lights and shades and is technically correct drama. But the piece has added charm of melodies that decorate it delightfully and as there is the further picturesqueness of gaily-gowned girlish chorus may be the reason why "IRENE" has become the "SUPER-MUSICAL" comedy and has set THE STANDARD FOR THE WHOLE WORLD.

INGENUES AND SARA SOTHERN.

She's of the Genus but Not the Species.

A Quaint Little Queen of Dramatic Emotion.

Who Loves Children and Hates Baby Vamps.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

"Goodness! I certainly do long for tragedy relief sometimes, as escape from the eternal cuteness of my ingenue roles!"

It was Sara Sothern who spoke. She was flitting madly around her dressing-room at the Majestic between the acts of "Turn to the Right" the other day, tearing into her professional gingham gown. Her room is called the blue room, being fitted up in blue, but it changes colors with the seasons like a chameleon. At Christmas time it was red.

Sara Sothern is the little girl that all the Los Angeles theater fans are raving about these days. For, though she is technically an ingenue, she manages, whatever role she gets, however small, to find a way to pull it out of its background and make it stand out by sheer force of her personality and real artistry.

She's a quaint little being, is Miss Scothern—as you might imagine—full of humor and fun, but at the back of it all serious in purpose and having a limitless feeling for the deeply dramatic, both in real life and on the stage.

Her big brown eyes, flashing with enthusiastic fire or glowing with humor, aren't the eyes of the ordinary ingenue. In fact, they are quite sure to haunt you. They're luminous, soft, humorous, and you seem to read all life and drama in them.

Channing Pollock, you know, once said the world was made up of two types of folks—human beings and ingenues.

You know how those ingenues usually are—always interrupting with their comedy relief just as you think a nice tearful time is setting in, with the hero and heroine parting forever or something weepy like that. And she has such an irritating way of butting in on other serious occasions too.

Lots of people, singularly enough, haven't the kind of sense of humor which makes 'em think it's funny when their fathers groan with rheumatism, or that it is particularly comic when some poor old lady falls down and breaks her leg, or that there's something excruciatingly hilarious about their old uncle's losing his fortune, or that family quarrels are cute.

But the professional ingenue has just this sort of a sense of humor. Nothing is sacred to her, and she gets cuter and cuter as the play runs along until you feel you'll have to kill her.

Well, Sara isn't like that at all. Sara shows that an ingenue can also be a human being.

She has the soul of a nice tall leading lady and the small body of an ingenue, says Sara. But whenever she has a chance she lets the leading lady part of her speak.

AN INGENUE'S PHILOSOPHY.

All the little potential ingenues in town ought to listen to Sara's philosophy of life and work.

"I don't think that opportunity knocks only once at your door; I think he's thumping all the while, and that every once in a while you can even hear him coming from clear 'round the corner.

"I have never really striven for any particular thing—just worked on the task at hand. Then pretty soon something turns up. Just work hard and hold the thought.

"As for method, I can always hear my dramatic school teacher crying out, 'Be natural, honey, be natural.' I used to have two signs pinned up on my dresser at home. One of them read, "Full of Pep." The other 'Be Natural.'

"When I found myself feeling tired, I'd look up at the sign 'Full of Pep,' and when I found myself likely to overact, I'd remember the other one, "Be Natural.'"

To go back to the beginning of Sara Sothern's career isn't to go back very far.

It seems that when she was 10 years old, it was Louise Flynn playing "Madame Sherry" in Miss Sothern's home town, Kansas City, who inspired the little girl to want to go on the stage. No, it wasn't any great or burning genius in her soul that prompted Sara's desire; it was the fact that Miss Flynn had short curls, which fell prettily over her shoulders! Sara wanted to cut off her long curls and look like that!

But it was Aline McDermott, leading lady in a Kansas City stock company, who was her real inspiration. She went to call on Miss McDermott one day at rehearsal, and she says that one kind word from that leading lady made her said leading lady's slave for life.

"But she didn't want me to go on the stage," said Miss Southern,—"she was afraid for me, she said—that I didn't know the world. So I thought the best way to know the world was to go out and be in it. Which, you see, is the thing I did."

RECITES PIECES.

Miss Sothern began when she was about 10 to recite "pieces" at church socials and such like functions. She used to choose all the heavy, solemn things she could find, she says. Her favorite was "Red-a Rose," the poem on which, by the way, George Beban founded his sketch "The Sign of the Rose," in which he is appearing at the Kinema. She used to wear a red party dress when she recited it, and got a gratifying amount of tears and applause.

"Then a moving picture man came to town and announced he was going to start a company, and a popularity contest was held in one of the newspapers to choose a leading lady.

"The paper rang me up in the middle of the night to tell me I had won. I was so excited I dragged my poor dad out of bed and made him go down town with me to see the man. I played the leading lady part in the thriller, without any make-up."

She actually obtained her first engagement while still in Georgia Brown High School, Kansas City, while she was studying dramatics. Dorothy Mortimer, on the Orpheum circuit, lost one of her players in Kansas City and needed a girl in her act. So she came to see Sara's high school class doing a Japanese playlet. She came back stage to see Sara afterward, and told the young player that she thought she had a future. She also offered to introduce her to that future right off, and she did. Sara played the whole week with her, and then wrote to a New York agent, who finally communicated with Miss Sothern, telling her he would give her a chance.

"I played all the week at the Orpheum with a sprained ankle!" exclaimed Miss Sothern. "I sprained it, my brother says, romping down to the theater so fast to get a job. But I wouldn't give up. I just felt as if my whole future depended on my sticking it out."

The New York agent sent Sara to Sioux City as an ingenue of a stock company and she stayed there seven-

THE ROYAL PEKINGS.

Six Celestials in Magic at New Pantages Tomorrow.

Alexander Pantages has added booking to his other activities on his eastern trip, and the first "All-Alec" bill is due at the New Pantages next week. This stellar aggregation is headed by the Royal Peking Troupe, six gorgeously gowned Celestials who display their feats of magic, contortion and equilibrium in a magnificent setting of hand-embroidered silken drops.

Shaw's Comedy Circus carries a score of animal acrobats, including greyhounds, ponies, baboons and mules. The Temple Four are "Harmony Hounds;" Ernest Hiatt dispenses undiluted "nuttery;" LeRoy and Mabel Hartt offer a song romance of the Southland, and Berg and English parody two famous motion picture comedians.

"The Heart of Maryland," a Vitagraph, adapted from David Belasco's stage play, features Catherine Calvert and an all-star cast in a spectacular historical romance of the days of '61.

"CITY OF SILENT MEN."

Powerful Photoplay Now Transferred to the Rialto.

Standing out as a highlight in a program of many and varied attractions, "The City of Silent Men," with Thomas Meighan and Lois Wilson, opens at Grauman's Rialto today.

The story depicts actual scenes in Sing Sing prison, where its action is laid. It was adapted by Frank Condon, from "The Quarry," by John A. Moroso, widely known New York police reporter.

The cast includes Kate Bruce, Paul Everton, George MacQuarrie and Guy Oliver.

Sharing cinema eminence with "The City of Silent Men," is the comedy offering, "Playmates."

In addition to these attractions, a huge program in themselves, Sid Grauman stages an atmospheric prologue and five other presentations, all of which comprise the biggest bill ever offered by the Rialto.

In observance of Los Angeles Music Week, Mischa Guterson has arranged a musical score that will be rendered by the orchestra. Oliver Wallace, organist-composer, will play special organ selections arranged by himself. Celendo, conductor of the orchestra, will give a violin solo from the stage.

SOME GOLIATH IS "TINY."

"Tiny" Ward the giant comedian who is working this week in a Gaylord Lloyd comedy, believes in doing things thoroughly. Tiny takes part in a scene where he is billed to hurl a chair at George Rowe, but, of course, miss him. One hurling was supposed to suffice, but when the chair wasn't damaged, the actor took another turn at it. One of the legs fell off and hit Mr. Rowe a pleasant blow on the forehead. Yesterday Tiny gave Gaylord Lloyd a sprained ankle!

"ELIMINATING JANE" THE BURBANK COMEDY.

High Jinks Revues, the combination of vocalists, comedians and entertainers that have been creating a furore since their initial appearance here at the Burbank several weeks ago, are scheduled to present for the week's offering a highly diverting piece of comedy and harmony entitled "Eliminating Jane."

This production is from the pen of Margaret Eckhard and is said to embody some brand-new and startling innovations in tee way of musical comedy presentation.

The vehicle is described as a satire on matrimony, bringing out a number of points of every-day married life in a way that is best described as realistic. For, while matrimony is a most sacred thing, it nevertheless has its humorous side as well, and it is upon this phase of the marital state that the creator has built here brain child.

The management of the interpreting organization has enhanced its offering with a complete line of new and distinctive costumes, songs and dances, while the scenic and electrical effects are also a special investment.

Al and Lois Bridges, featured comedy team with the High Jinks Revues, are said to have parts in this vehicle that enable them to demonstrate anew their fun-making ability.

MANNY KING'S FUN AT THE CAPITOL THEATER.

A week chockful of joy and entertainment is promished the amusement-seeking public at the Capitol Theater, Spring near Fourth, where Manny King, that ace of funsters, whose droll impersonations of the comedy Hebrew type have won him such fame, supported by Ed. Armstrong's noted beauty chorus, the Armstrong baby dolls, and a host of clever principals, is scheduled to appear in a spectacular musical comedy revue entitled "Some Night."

The theme of the operetta is said to be one of the funniest imaginable, new jokes, songs and dances being present on the program in extraordinary profusion, while King, in the role of a Hebrew gentleman of utmost cupidity, who gets himself into —and out of—a series of side-splitting predicaments, will furnish amusing comedy situations.

Brand new wardrobe worn by the baby dolls is another feature of the offering.

"A BLAMELESS EVE" AT BROADWAY PANTAGES.

Those who have been educated to believe that Eve was the first and original sinner will read with a mental gasp the title of Frank Samuels's new comedy, "A Blameless Eve," which "Oklahoma Bob" Albright's Follies will present next week at the Broadway Pantages.

The surprise will be heightened by the subtitle, "A Woman for an Hour," expressing the heartfelt wish that many a man has felt at times. Taking it all together, the title of the coming Broadway Follies show is one that tickles the imagination and excites the curiosity, and all that is demanded of the show is to make good the promise of the title.

Gladys Brockwell, with the support of Lillian Rich and Wallace MacDopald, appears in "The Sage Hen," a five-reel drama that has little in common with the character types hitherto portrayed by this screen favorite. "The Sage Hen" is an epic of the Arizona mining camps, with mother love as the predominant theme.

The screen comedy will be supplied by the Universal mirth factory.

TAKES WALLOP AT THE FILMS.

Eastern Critic Says They'll Just Have to Improve.

Newark's Record Shows the Declining Tendency.

Marguerite Clark and New Barker Pictures Show.

BY HARRY CARR.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, May 28.—Harriet Underhill, one of the most prominent dramatic critics in New York, has laid a heavy and ruthless hand upon the movies. In looking over this week's crop at the Broadway picture houses the lady remarks that either motion pictures are continually growing poorer or the public is getting tired of them. At any rate she contends that they will have to improve if a general disaster is to be averted.

Her objection is that the stories are all tawdry and insignificant. The estimable Miss Underhill might have gone farther and told the real and dreadful truth, which is that a large proportion of motion pictures are made by directors, with the intellectual span of barbers, for the gurgling delight of ribbon-counter young ladies.

Whatever the cause, there has been a marked dropping off at the box offices. In the city of Newark it is of record that something over 90 per cent of the population attended the theater during a period of six months. The last six months show that the average has dropped to something less than 50 per cent.

Marguerite Clark's first picture as an independent was shown at the Strand on Broadway this week. It is a pleasant, but rather inconsequential, comedy, called "Scrambled Wives," which has to do with the adventures of a girl, who was captured by an irate father about three seconds after she had been married to an eloping young man, who lived next door to her boarding school.

After the marriage had been annulled she happened to meet the real young man of her heart at a house party at which her ex-husband was also a guest and complications resulted.

Marguerite Clark is an amazing girl. Age does not stale nor custom wither her infinite variety.

She has been an actress a good many more years than it is polite even to think about, but she still looks to be 16. The truth is she seems younger in "Scrambled Wives" than in some of her earlier pictures. Jackie Coogan had better look out or he will have a rival in her.

Outside the loveliness of this adorable child, who is never going to grow up, I couldn't get up much excitement over "Scrambled Wives."

The director seemed to find a great deal of difficulty in translating the story into action. Much of the picture consisted in the characters sitting around and exchanging a terrific barrage of subtitles—and not very good subtitles, at that. However, when a girl is as beautiful and fascinating as this one it does not matter so much what she does on the screen. The picture did not do a very large business.

Katharine Newlin Burt's story "Snow Blind," done into a picture by Reginald Barker, with Russell Simpson and Pauline Stark, is showing at the Capitol, with a very funny Ben Turpin comedy out of the Mack Sennett studio.

Reginald Barker, the director, got a good picture out of "Snow Blind," but he might have made an imperishable masterpiece of it, and the character of the crippled old hunchback might have been another Richard III. I never read a story with such golden possibilities for the screen. It runs about midway between Francesca da Rimini and Richard.

HUNCHBACK HERO.

In brief it is a story of a little vaudeville actress who is lost in the snow and blinded. She is rescued from death by a hunchback who is hiding in the Canadian wilderness, a fugitive from a murder charge.

He is an extraordinary character. In his little twisted misshapen hideous body is the daring, bold adventurous soul of a D'Artagnan.

This encounter with the blind girl gives him the opportunity that his starved soul had carved, to be a hero—a regular swashbuckling, death-defying romantic blade.

To her he paints himself as he

RECALLING :: THE :: FILMY :: PAST.

At Inceville: Of Treasured Memory.

Thomas H. Ince
Is here seen on the porch of Peggy's home. You'll recall the Billie Burke picture of that name which served to introduce its star to the film public. The settings from this play and others are still standing at the seaside studio.

A GHOST TOWN OF THE FILMS.

seaside village, too, is practically intact.

On the hills surrounding the studio are the location settings of many an old-time picture. The statue of the horse that stood in front of the temple in "Civilization" still glistens on a hilltop. The town used in Dorothy Dalton's "The Flame of the Yukon" is decaying and vanishing little by little in a canyon.

SOME ENDURE.

It is remarkable how well preserved some of the structures are. The mission setting used in many old-time stories of California, and sometimes adapted to war pictures of foreign lands, might be used today. It was solidly built with plaster and stone, showing that not all movie construction is of temporary character.

The Inceville studio is now the property of the Robertson-Cole interests. It is used only for location work now. The reason of its abandonment was chiefly on account of the distance from Los Angeles, its inaccessibility, except by automobile, and the fact that nowadays so much more work is done within doors than in days agone.

The stages and dressing rooms could be easily remodeled and used if ever the character of picture-making should change so that the outdoor settings were in demand again, for the location is supremely beautiful in the sweep it commands of the hills and the sea.

"There was never a studio like it," said Mr. Ince, while Willie Collier, too, radiated his enthusiasm. "I'll never forget the days I spent here. We really lived then.

"Work? I used to do a whole day's work, and then jump into the ocean and then go back to work, and keep it up until midnight. Never felt tired."

"Eat? Never ate so much in my life as at Inceville," said Willie Collier. "Remember one morning I got up at 6 o'clock and ate a breakfast, and came in about 9 from location and ate another. That was the life!"

EPIC OF MOTHER LOVE.

"Salvage," With Pauline Frederick, Comes to the California.

"Salvage," Pauline Frederick's latest Robertson-Cole starring vehicle, might aptly be termed "an epic of mother love," for this greatest of all emotions in its tenderest, highest and most beautiful moments is said to be the basis of the story. It shows at the California today.

Miss Frederick, who has proved herself time and again a dramatic actress of rare talents, has in "Salvage," created a role in which she reaches the apex of her art, according to all who have been privileged to see it in preview, and their opinion is that those who witness the production will never forget the depth of feeling, the heart-breaking calm she displays in those scenes where she learns of her husband's desecration of motherhood; the yearning which prompts her to "mother" and love every stray waif, of the beauty of spirit and the bigness of heart which permits her forgiveness of the man who has been the cause of her life's tragedy.

The story was written and adapted to the screen by Daniel F. Whitcomb, former New York newspaper man, who is said to have founded the characters and situations from incidents which came under his notice during his career in journalism in the metropolis.

Milton Sills and Raymond Hatton are two prominent artists in Miss Frederick's supporting company. The picture was directed by Henry King. Another prominent player supporting Miss Frederick is little Helen Stone, the 5-year-old kiddie, who will also be seen in Puri Wilkerson's clever stage number which will precede the feature.

CUBIST SETTINGS IN WEBER PICTURE.

Lois Weber will out-Caligari the Germans in her next picture. She has engaged Frank D. Ormston, art director of "Kismet" and Miss Weber's old plays, "The Dumb Girl of Portici," "Hypocrites" and "For Husbands Only," to design the sets for the picture she is now producing.

Mr. Ormston now has on exhibition in Lois Weber's Hollywood studio windows, the cubist paintings which have been transferred to canvas. He is being assisted with his drawing by Louis Calhern, leading man in Miss Weber's company.

Mr. Calhern was formerly an artist for the Newspaper Feature Syndicate of New York and he and Mr. Ormston were pals and students together, years ago, at Columbia University, in the art students' league classes, and at the National Academy of Design.

SATIRICAL REVUE.

Last Year's Troubles Provide Fun at Orpheum.

The week ushered in by Memorial Day will see a special holiday bill at the Orpheum, headlined by George Jessel's "Troubles of 1920."

During the last season there has been a regular epidemic of girl reviews. Most of them have been exceedingly bright and entertaining, but their quantity wasn't reduced any. George Jessel, recognizing that along with politics and economics the girl revue was ripe to be travestied, so, with Al Lewis and Roy Turk, he conceived his present offering, which is an extremely keen satire on the revue epidemic.

He has in his cast twelve pretty girls whom he calls his trouble makers. The very capable supporting cast consists of Holmes and Wells, Edwin Jerome, Sam Bennett and Ann Lowenwirth, who is the leading lady.

There is a touch of pathos in the skit, as the story deals with Jessel's borrowing his mother's money to produce a revue and then losing it all. The piece is a novelty in that it departs from the traditional musical plays.

The supporting bill is in keeping with the excellence of the headliner. Featured are Harry Hosford and Frank De Voe in "Excerpts from Musical Comedy." Frank De Voe was principal comedian with Fritzi Scheff and Harry Hosford is a pianist of note.

Another feature is Joseph L. Browning in "A Timely Sermon." It is a fact that sermons ofttimes appeal to the risibilities of their hearers, but not intentionally so. Mr. Browning has taken this means to promulgate one of the funniest monologues ever heard on a local stage

"The Fall of Eve" is a comedy sketch of Greenwich Village from the pen of Arthur Eckersley, for a number of years the editor of Punch, the famous English fun magazine. The cast consists of Mabel Cameron, Alan Devitt and C. Carroll Clucas.

Buddy Walton in a cycle of songs tells a humorous domestic story to the excellent tunes and lyrics of William B. Friedlander. Mijares & Co., are tight-wire walkers, said to be far above the average.

Blossom Seeley, with a more exquisite wardrobe and a fresh bunch of her crooning tunes, will entertain the customers during her last week here, ably assisted by friend husband, Benny Fields, and by Sam Miller and Harry Stover.

Georgie Jessell,
Who'll entertain Orpheumites with smart show this week.

ART COLONY WORK THRIVING HERE.

Two Organizations Are Aiding Students Along Different and Definite Lines.

Establishment of an art colony seems to be virtually assured in this city. Two organizations are now working along this line each with different and definite purposes in view. One of these is the Three Arts Club and the other an association of professionals meeting in the Persian Garden, 3108 West Seventh street.

The plan of the Three Arts Club embraces the renting or construction of a home for artists. As yet they have not definitely decided on a location, but expect to in the near future. It is planned to afford proper atmosphere for successful artistic endeavor in this home, and a number of prominent musicians, painters, sculptors and writers are interested.

The aims of the Persian Garden association have been outlined as a co-operation between artists and patrons of art. The organization is interesting those with social influence who wish to further the development of all serious artistic work by lending their moral support, the professionals who are willing to lend their service in a development freed from all commercialism, and the young students. Public performances are given by the organization, of which the proceeds, it is stated, will be used for scholarship funds for students of exceptional talent.

"PECK'S BAD BOY."

Jackie Coogan and Irvin Cobb Join Forces at Kinema.

Jackie Coogan in "Peck's Bad Boy!"

This sums up the week's attraction at the Kinema.

Little Jackie Coogan, conceded to be the greatest child actor of all time, is said to outdo himself in the role he has as the mischievous urchin in "Peck's Bad Boy."

The motion-picture public will not soon forget the wonderful acting ability displayed by this child marvel of the screen in Charlie Chaplin's "The Kid." He has the faculty of making his audiences laugh and cry with him at will, and it is declared that in "Peck's Bad Boy" humor and pathos have been most skillfully blended.

When Charlie Chaplin treated the world to "The Kid," all thoughts and conjectures regarding the screen work of Jackie Coogan, who played the title role in the picture, were set at ease with gentle but firm reports. The same sort of reports obtain in the instance of the present Coogan starring vehicle, according to reviews given the picture the country over.

Heading the actors playing opposite Jackie are such personages as Doris May, Wheeler Oakman, James Corrigan, Raymond Hatton Lillian Leighton, Gloria Wood and others of equal note.

The sub-titles were written by the irrepressible Irvin S. Cobb.

NEW WALTON STORY.

When Gladys Walton finishes her current feature she will begin work on one of the brightest of comedy-dramas, it is said. This is the work of Roy Clements, and is called "The Girl Who Knew all About Men." The stellar role is that of a modern flapper, and ideally suited to the youthful piquancy of Miss Walton.

INGENUES AND SARA SOTHERN.

ty-four weeks, so they must have liked her. During that time she appeared in "Fair and Warmer" and several other farces, so that she gained excellent experience. Then she went back to New York, was about to assume a good part on Broadway, when blooey! along came the actors' strike.

Her money gave out and she had to accept a stock engagement at Haverhill, Mass., where you play a matinee every day and don't get much pay. So as soon as she could she obtained another position, going to Winnipeg, Can., as ingenue of the stock company there, and from the northern city she came to Los Angeles.

Among the ingenue roles she has done a number of baby vamps, including that role in "The Naughty Wife" and in "Upstairs and Down," so she feels she's something of an expert on infantile vamping.

"They're the most dangerous kind," she said, "all child-like and bland that way. Yes, if I ever set out to be a vamp, I'll surely be that sort. But, judging from all the trouble those baby vamps had, I think I'd rather be a regular girl.

"And all the trouble they take to get a man they don't really want! I don't think they have much sense, myself."

Miss Sothern is to be the weepy wife in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath." She says she can cry as easily as laugh—that she can make herself weep merely by thinking of anything as pathetic as a torn handkerchief!

"An ingenue is usually a happy sort of person," said Miss Sothern. "Don't think that roles you play don't influence your spirits. They do. I played the most terrible 'heavy' once in a piece called 'The Remnant.' I tried to be as wicked as I could.

"At the end of the play I get thrown out, and I hear the leading man say, 'Oh, gawd, I hope she falls downstairs and breaks her neck!' I always felt as if he meant it. I knew that woman I played should have met that fate. I used to go around feeling blue and wicked all the time."

Theres' one thing that Sara Sothern is very sad about, and that's because the children don't come around to the stage door after matinees to say hello to her. She loves children, and she says that everywhere else they've always come back to make friends with her. To be sure, they do linger about near the milliner's next door, but they don't seem to have the courage to approach any closer.

No. Reports to the contrary notwithstanding, she and Franklin Pangborn are not engaged to be married. They are merely wonderful pals, and "Pang," as she calls him, now has a machine in which they drive to the beach every day they're not working or rehearsing. Here they read and chat and eat their lunch and discuss their work. He also drives her home after the theater, for which she is very thankful.

"Funny," she said, "how men will stop their machines at night to ask a girl standing on a corner to let them take her home. They never ask her in the day time!

Miss Sothern's father and mother are shortly to come West from the Ozark Mountains, where Mr. Sothern has been recuperating from a long illness. They will buy a home and remain here. As Miss Sothern says:

"What's California without a bungalow with flowers all 'round it?"

PUTTING "E" IN RUBYE.

People may fancy that the superfluous "e" of Rubye de Remer's first name is to be attributed to a caprice. They are right. At the age of 10, Miss De Remer discovered that she and her two sisters, Sady and Lucy, had plebelan names. So she called a conference that resulted in the three girls becoming Rubye, Lucye and Sadye, as suited the dignity of their years. Miss De Remer little reckoned the orthographic consequences to the Rubys of the nation. Since becoming a film star she has received many letters from young subdebs bearing the jeweled name, all announcing that they had adopted the "e."

n Harmony, Titled Feature at Clune's.

Scene from "House That Jazz Built,"
In which Wanda Hawley plays starring role.

FORGET TO ROUGE

Hawley in Domestic Comedy at Clune's Broadway.

Hawley, in her latest, that Jazz Built," will be attraction at Clune's Broadway comedy-drama will appeal in a manner given to few photoplays. "For it tells of a woman who couldn't stand prosperity, who grew lazy, fat and untidy as her husband advanced and became able to afford luxuries. It is a situation that has occurred in many homes—and certainly every married couple, as well as those about to be married, and everybody else who finds human nature interesting, will appreciate the true-to-life humor and pathos cleverly intermingled in this brisk domestic comedy.

"The House That Jazz Built" is an excellent diagnosis of one of the great dangers of married life, and in portraying the changing psychology of a woman who is losing her alertness and beauty and growing indolent in mind as well as body, Wanda Hawley, it is said, does what is undoubtedly the finest interpretative work of her career. Her make-up in the "fat" scenes is said to be a marvel of artistry.

The story is an adaptation of one of Sohpie Kerr's delightful stories, "Sweetie Peach."

The leading male role is taken by Forrest Stanley, and ohtres in the cast are Gladys George, Helen Dunbar, Helen Lynch and Clarence Geldart.

THIS IS THIRD WEEK OF "TURN TO RIGHT"

The odor of peach jam attracts every one to the kitchen of Mother Bascomb in that sterling comedy drama, "Turn to the Right," but the play itself attracted a record-breaking attendance at the Majestic last week, where this afternoon Thomas Wilkes will begin the third week of his presentation of this fun classic.

For delightful scenes, brilliant comedy and those silent moments that bring a tug to the heartstrings and convey more than words, the play is almost a masterpiece. Furthermore, the production by the capable Wilkes company is as delightful as the play itself.

Edward Everett Horton plays the role of the erring son with fine understanding and feeling, while Mary Newcomb, as his boyhood sweetheart, shows charm and sincere acting. As the clever crooks, Franklin Pangborn and Fred F. Cummings are a comedy in themselves.

A special holiday matinee will be given tomorrow.

DAMAGED MANLY BEAUTY.

Henry Murdock, Christie comedian, is at home suffering from a broken nose as a result of an automobile accident. This occurred in a recent rainstorm while Murdock was holding his head down, trying to keep his nose dry. The comedian will be absent from the screen several weeks, after which Director Frederic Sullivan can probably cast him in his favorite play, "Cyrano de Bergerac."

"PUPPETS OF FATE."

A Photoplay and an Airplane Party at Tally's.

A double feature program is the offering at Tally's, with Viola Dana in "Puppets of Fate," and a two-reel novelty of an airplane party, the first of its kind ever given in the country, held at the private airdrome of L. C. Brand, in Glendale.

Tally's has the exclusive showing of this feature. Twenty-six planes, carrying guests, which included prominent people in the social world, army officers, and Ruth Roland and Mary Miles Minter of the film colony, formed the personnel of the party. Stunts in the air and on the green by the various flyers, some of whom represent the pioneers in California aeronautics, lend a high entertainment value to the unique film.

A new role is afforded Viola Dana as the dashing Italian flower girl, Sorrentina, one of the puppets of fate, who makes something of a world tour in chasing down her husband, Gabriel, an Italian with decidedly American ideas.

Music week is being carefully observed at Tally's, with Charles Wakefield Cadman's song, "Los Angeles the Beautiful," dedicated to Los Angeles and never before presented, the main attraction. Mr. Cadman will be guest of honor at the theater on Monday night, and will play his new song, as well as several others that have won him fame.

Tally's newly organized string quartet will offer selections from Rudolph Friml's "Firefly."

PRISCILLA DEAN STILL AT SUPERBA THEATER.

"Back in her box by the curtains shaded,
She sits alone by the house unseen;
Her eye is dim and her cheek is faded—
She who once was the people's queen."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox's stanza of one of her well-known poems tells in brief the story of Laura Figlan, famous London actress, the heroine of the story of "False Colors," Edwina Levin's novelette, which has been made into a picture by Universal, entitled "Reputation." Priscilla Dean is the star of the production.

The fourth week of the picture's presentation commences today at the Superba.

"Reputation" is a play of contrasts and affords Priscilla Dean a dual role, that of mother and daughter. Niles Welch, Harry Van Meter, Spottiswood Aitken and Harry Carter are prominent actors in the supporting cast.

CONTINUED SUCCESS OF "OVER THE HILL."

"Over the Hill" is playing to crowded houses at Philharmonic Auditorium. This remarkable photoplay has broken all picture records to date at this house. It enters the fourth week with tomorrow's matinee.

"Over the Hill" has been running for nearly ten months in New York, where new records were made. The staid New York theatergoer has been absolutely captivated by this amazing portrayal of screen art.

The story deals with divine mother love—a love which prompts the mother of a brood of six to make every sacrifice that her little ones may be provided with comfort.

Then comes age and the departure one by one of her children. Thus left alone, she endeavors to make her home with one after another of her offspring, only to discover that she is "in the way."

The manner in which happiness comes to her is shown in one of the most beautiful climaxes ever presented in a picture play.

FAKE MARRIAGE IN PLOT COMPLICATON.

The Garrick Theater will continue its present policy of first-run pictures. "The Chicken in the Case," the Selznick comedy feature, in which Owen Moore has the leading role, and is supported by Teddy Sampson, of bathing-girl comedies' fame, is to show. Katherine Perry, lately of Ziegfeld Follies and Midnight Frolic; Vivian Ogden and Edgar Nelson are in the cast.

"The Chicken in the Case" borders on the farce. The story concerns a youth, who, in order to get a fortune, has to be married. He tries to bamboozle a maiden aunt by borrowing his chum's bride to pose as his wife. The girl he loves learns he is "married" and then he has a great time squaring himself.

"IRENE" SOON TO PLAY AT MASON THEATER.

"Irene," the musical play, is announced to open at the Mason June 6.

The present tour was undertaken partly for the purpose of playing return engagements in various cities and for a visit to the Coast. It was arranged in co-operation with Homer Curran, Peter McCourt and Calvin Heiling, western managers.

IN LITERARY LIMELIGHT.

Not content with the circulation he is getting in five current pictures, Jim Kirkwood is going into book form. He is supplying the material for a volume to be titled "Stars I Have Directed—And Directors Who Have Directed Me." The stellar list includes John Barrymore, Mary Pickford, Antonio Moreno, Lionel Barrymore, Dorothy Gish, Blanche Sweet, Owen Moore, Jack Pickford, Thomas Meighan, Billie Burke, Henry B. Walthall, Mary Miles Minter and others. Among the directors who figure in the Kirkwood narrative are D. W. Griffith, Marshall Neilan, Allen Holubar, George Melford, Wesley Ruggles and Allen Dwan.

Clara Kimball Young.
Starred in "Straight from Paris" at the Walker Auditorium.

"STRAIGHT FROM PARIS" SHOWING AT WALKER.

The initial attraction for the reopening of the Walker Auditorium Theater, Grand avenue near Seventh, will be "Straight from Paris," starring Clara Kimball Young.

The story presents Miss Young in the role of a working girl, whose fascination brings her into the most exclusive social circles of the smart set.

In the web of a romance which she cannot control, the shop-girl hides her identity for fear of the scorn that her wealthy admirers will shower upon her if they learn that she is not of their own set.

The climax comes, however, when the poor shop-girl's identity is discovered and the problem of the girl's status in the social world is confronted. That birth is a mere accident, and that genuine worth is measured by what you are, is forcefully brought home in this very human and stimulating story.

Sada Cowan, who will be remembered for her authorship of "Hush," Miss Young's former vehicle, in which the star scored such a success, is the author of this fascinating story, which gives Miss Young splendid opportunity for the display of her charm and talent.

In addition to the featured attraction there will be a comedy titled "The Champion." A musical program, to be rendered by a capable orchestra, will accompany the pictures.

ABBOTT STUDENTS REHEARSE.

Pupils of the Abbott Dramatic School are rehearsing daily for their recital at the Gamut Club Theater the night of June 10. The program is to be given in three parts, namely, the ballet, international and characteristic, and Grecian. Over 100 children and many grown-ups will take part. Rehearsals and costume designing are under the personal direction of Ethel Abbott.

The policy of the Abbott school is to train for the stage or parlor in the quickest and most practical manner and, of course, paying much attention to technique and particularly encouraging children by bringing them before the public as soon as possible, it is said.

would like to have been, gives himself the imaginary adventures that the heart of his twisted little body longed for, and all the while in the cabin sit two other listeners, a young brother and an old woman cousin.

Half through pity, half through fear, and perhaps also a little bit hypnotized themselves by his gorgeous lies, they sit in silence and let him get away with it.

But one day, the girl recovers her sight and the old man is simply crushed. All the cruel bully gone out of him; his dreams collapse when she sees him as he really is.

For some extraordinary reason the character Hugh Garth was not shown in the picture as a hunchback, possibly out of consideration for the feelings of the ribbon-counter young ladies.

Russell Simpson, who took the part, made him look like a respectable middle-aged farmer. Of course, this took away all the pity and the fire from the character and reduced it to the good old ordinary movie again.

Mr. Barker may direct pictures until he is so old they carry him to locations in a wheel chair and Mr. Simpson may go on until he plays Rip Van Winkle without a make-up, but never again will either of them get such another chance to make the screen richer by a character so poignant in pity, so venomous in ugliness and so alluring with humanness as the Hugh Garth that could have been.

"The Woman That God Changed" is at the Rivoli with Seena Owen and E. K. Lincoln in the cast. It is a story about a famous cabaret young person who slew the lover who tired of her.

She made a getaway to the South Sea Islands, where she was pursued and arrested by Lincoln as a plain-clothesman. On the way back to the States they are wrecked on a desert island, where the woman accomplishes her own moral regeneration.

As movies go, it is a good story, but it is just movie. The story is by Don Byrne and was directed by Robert Vignola. It has a wonderful shipwreck scene, evidently taken from one of the films captured on a German submarine during the war.

Seena Owen looks very lovely and interesting, although one gay young New York dramatic critic remarked that God didn't change the woman as much as the censor will. I never saw so many subtitles in my life. I started to count them, but stopped, licked, at a billion.

Bebe Daniels in "Two Weeks' Pay" has been at the Rialto. Hers is a gay little story about a shop girl who went out to a fashionable summer resort supposedly as a lady of wealth and leisure, but really as a clothes model. Bebe is cute and attractive and the picture had good notices. I should imagine that the Santa Ana jail must have been a popular resort during the period of her tenancy.

Fanchon and Marco, who used to do a cabaret turn at Tait's in San Francisco, have hit Broadway with a "made in California" show called "Sunkist," which is a lively, zippy girl show with many jazzy songs and really seems to have given the town a thrill. Eva Clark has a song called "He Love A Gypsy," which has hit Broadway right in the eye.

The Reaction.

"ADAM AND EVA" IN SIGHT OF ITS FINISH.

"Adam and Eva" enters the eighth week with today's matinee at the Morosco, having set up a new record for the spring season. Because the attraction is a very clever little comedy and is thoroughly wholesome and human in its appeal, it is being received with great popular favor in Los Angeles.

From now on the engagement of "Adam and Eva" will be limited to a short run. Owing to the necessity of giving an early production of "Three Faces East," Oliver Morosco has wired that preparations be started for presentation of the next attraction.

ALHAMBRA HOLDS OVER CHURCHILL'S STORY.

"The Dwelling Place of Light," Benjamin B. Hampton's screen version of the novel by Winston Churchill, began its second week at the Alhambra yesterday in conjunction with Buster Keaton's latest comedy, "Hard Luck."

The story is an absorbing one throughout and embodies some of the greatest scenic effects ever brought to the silver screen. There is heart interest a-plenty, many thrills, and from first to last the picture fairly tingles with action.

A fine lot of players make up the cast. Robert McKim is seen as a villain. Claire Adams makes Janet Butler a most appealing and lovable figure, and King Baggott, as Brooks Insall, the idealistic hero, brings to the role all his splendid abilities.

HAROLD LLOYD'S OTHER NAME.

Harold Lloyd, although the most democratic of motion-picture actors, has been titled in England, where he is known as "Winkle the Pathe Mirth Merchant." Mr. Lloyd is also provided with a page in English periodicals, where his exploits are weekly chronicled under the inscription, "No wonder people laugh at Winkle—he's a wonder!"

MASTERLY STRATEGY OF JACKIE COOGAN.

WHEN GIRLS MAKE LOVE TO HIM HE TURNS TO HIS CORRESPONDENCE.

When the girls try to rush Jackie Coogan, he has a very effective method of eluding their wiles. He calls a stenographer and dictates a letter to his mother!

His diplomacy was demonstrated not long ago, when Irving Lesser took the 5-year-old star to the office of J. D. Williams, manager of the Associated First National, for a conference.

As soon as Jackie made his appearance, the office girls rushed over to meet him. The first girl who reached him was asked if she was a stenographer. When she replied in the affirmative, he said:

"Well, I've been looking for you. I want to write a letter to my mother. She's in Los Angeles, and I've got to tell her about the circus."

And so Jackie, in very business-like fashion, left the other girls flat, and in a corner of the office began dictating to "Muddie" (his pet name for his mother) as follows:

"Muddie Dear: I saw a giant last night and I saw a man with three legs. And I saw a man who could turn his head clear around. And I saw the giant's wife. The giant was the tallest in the world. And his wife was not as big as he was, and the giant was 32 years old. I petted a rhinoceros, and I gave him some dog cookies. And I saw a car that caught on fire. And I stood upon the giant's shoulders, and it looked like I was up on the twenty-second floor of the Biltmore Hotel. Tarzan of the Apes was there. I saw half a lady. I saw a little Eight-Ball and I saw a little monkey, they looked alike. I saw little Midget and the rattlesnake lady. I saw a lady without any hands, just one finger on her arm. And they had lions, tigers and elephants and giraffes. Good-by, Mother dear. I send you kisses and my love. I hope to see you as soon as I can.

"JACKIE COOGAN, JR."

Jackie would have kept right on dictating, but Mr. Lesser came out and announced that Mr. Williams was ready for the conference.

EASIER TO FILM LUMBER CAMPS AT THE STUDIO.

Priscilla Dean, her director, Stuart Paton, and the forty people who accompanied them to Oregon to film lumber camp scenes for the star's current feature, "Conflict," have returned, after being away less than three weeks. They had a glorious time. Portland put itself out to make Priscilla and her company welcome, but there was very little picture-making.

The so-called Oregon mist looked very much like rain to Director Paton, and he was able to work but an average of one day each week. Universal, therefore, decided to bring the company back to the studio, where the northern lumber camps will be reproduced from photographs and specifications secured by the technical director with the company.

"CERTAIN RICH MAN" IN ITS SECOND WEEK.

"A Certain Rich Man," Benjamin B. Hampton's production of William Allen White's novel, began its second week yesterday at Miller's, and indications are that it has settled down for a run.

It has been heralded as one of the few motion pictures of the year that mark a decided advance in the progress of the films. It was personally produced by Benjamin B. Hampton, with a notable cast, including Robert McKim, Claire Adams and Carl Gantvoort.

The photoplay is unique in that, while it has been heartily indorsed by educators, civic leaders and ministers, at the same time it is enthusiastically received by the great body of film fans at large, who see in it an absorbing entertainment.

The production is being given an elaborate presentation by Robert Poole, the new managing director of Miller's.

ROCKETT WILL EXPAND.

Large Annual Budget to Aid Present Production Program.

The Rockett Film Corporation, producing at the Louis B. Mayer Studio, is perfecting plans to bring another million dollars' worth of production to Los Angeles, it is announced.

The Rocketts are already in the midst of a production program aggregating $500,000, having completed two special features for Hodkinson, and having four more to film. Their third, "Handle With Care," featuring Grace Darmond, is now nearing completion and the others will follow without unnecessary delay between pictures, it is stated.

Several weeks ago the Rockett company was offered a contract for the output of two more producing units to film censor-proof comedy dramas from published books and stories, but the story market was so precarious and economic conditions so unsatisfactory that the offer was refused.

Now, however, the situation in the industry has cleared sufficiently to justify the additional responsibility and tentative plans have been worked out which, when completed, will, it is promised, more than double the present output of the Rockett company.

BATHING-BEAUTY SHOW.

Modish Sea Costumes add Piquancy to Dana Picture.

Viola Dana's newest production, "The Match Breaker," includes among its many novelties, a bathing style show, staged within the exclusive confines of Coronado Beach by the diminutive Viola herself.

RIALTO. Exceptionally happy affair, quite out of the ordinary, took place when Mrs. C. G. Milligan opened her handsome home on North Riverside avenue to five other mothers of boys away, such meeting of the band of six being a happy semi-monthly custom. Time was passed in pleasant sociability, while fingers were busy quilting. All work together, but in the end a quilt will go to each favored son, George Conden, Cloyes Collins, Lyle Seccombe, Lloyd Cook and Kenneth Henderson of the Gate City, and Moy Milligan, all members of the same college fraternity, the Beaver Club at Corvallis, Or. A charmingly appointed two-course luncheon was served by the gracious hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Mort enjoyed a week-end visit from Mrs. Mort's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Urenn of Los Angeles.

Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Maxwell and Mrs. Paul Maxwell arrived home from a trip to Los Angeles and on to Long Beach where at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening they attended the wedding of Mr. Maxwell's father, Samuel B. Maxwell, formerly of this place, and Mrs. A. Long. The groom is 73 years young, being unbelievably sturdy and active, and the age of the bride is given as 68. Rialto friends extend heartiest congratulations.

Miss Frances Farmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Farmer, returned home this week, after graduating from the State University at Berkeley, with the largest class ever graduated from any school, college or university, so far as known, in history of the world. In the Greek Theater, President Barrows presented diplomas to 1700 graduates. Miss Farmer, who is leaving soon for New York City, and Mrs. Pauline Johnson were dinner and overnight guests at the E. Richard home on North Riverside avenue, and later in the week Dr. E. W. Myer and son of Patten, Miss Farmer and Mrs. Mae Nealey drove to Monrovia, visiting near-by hills and beautiful canyon.

On Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Taylor, Mrs. W. W. Pendleton and Mrs. W. S. Pendleton motored to Los Angeles, being accompanied home by Miss Claire, freshman at southern branch of the State University, for a visit over the week-end.

Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McManis were host and hostess at a delightful affair honoring Mr. McManis's father, J. T. McManis who celebrated the sixty-fourth anniversary of his birth. A six-course dinner was served, plates being set for Mr. and Mrs. J. T. McManis, Miss Rita Lane, Miss Nancy McManis, Mrs. Douthwaite, Mrs. S. G. Sawyer, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McManis and small son.

PASO ROBLES. Mrs. W. M. Ford entertained a party of little tots at a dinner party on Friday evening. At grown-up dinner parties the dinner comes first and the social hour afterwards, but for the youngsters it was reversed so that they might get home at hours more suited to their ages. After a happy hour of games the dinner was served. Those who enjoyed the affair were: James McBee, Elizabeth Sobey, Jean Sobey, Genevieve Dohring, Hurd Booth, Charles Griffen, Ralph and Gilespie Hanson, Leanore and Francis Smith and Edward Miles. Mrs. Ford was assisted in entertaining the tots by Misses Edna Rogers, Margaret Trussler and Ellen Miles.

A most interesting meeting of the Paso Robles Woman's Club was held Tuesday afternoon in the parlors of the Paso Robles Hotel, the occasion being the visit of the president of the new county federation, Mrs. Andrew Hansen of Atascadero. Some exceptionally fine musical numbers were given by Mrs. Bathrick, Byron Morgan, Miss Badger, Mrs. Chester H. Miller and Miss Stewart. Mrs. Hanson gave an interesting address on the new county federation. The club then adjourned to the sun parlor, where refreshments were served by Mrs. Ellsworth Harold, hostess for the afternoon, assisted by Mrs. Ray Lyon, Ms. Lawrence Lundbeck and Mrs. R. J. Williams.

Mrs. J. H. Tebbetts of Hollister, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Eugene Booth, for the past week, has been the motif for several enjoyable affairs. On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Ralph Hanson entertained at bridge in honor of Mrs. Tebbetts. Thursday evening, Mrs. Booth entertained for Mrs. Tebbetts and for Mr. Paul Speyer, who recently returned to his old home in Paso Robles for a brief visit, after spending fourteen years in South American countries. Bridge was the feature of the evening, and was followed by a daintily served supper at midnight. On Friday afternoon Mrs. E. G. Thomas entertained for Mrs. Tebbetts with several tables of bridge, followed by an elaborate tea. Mrs. Sobey and Mrs. Harrold held the honors at the bridge tables. The guests were Mmes. H. G. Merrill, C. D. McFarland, M. J. Glass, G. L. Sobey, T. M. Lineweaver, Frank C. Smith, Ralph Hanson, C. J. Trussler, Ellsworth Harrold, Eugene Booth and G. D. Kelker.

SAN LUIS OBISPO. H. N. Whitlock, director of the Presbyterian Choir, was the guest of honor at a dinner party tendered him by Mrs. Bertha Rosenthal on Friday evening. Following the dinner several selections were given by a male quartet, composed of Messrs. H. E. Nelson, H. N. Whitlock, A. R. Kinne and J. S. King, and the rest of the guests joined in singing several songs. The guests, most of whom were members of the choir, were: H. N. Whitlock, Rev. E. W. Haney, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Jasperson, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. King, Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Krebs, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Truesdale, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Kinne, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Bird, Mr. and Mrs. John Beckman, Miss M. McMillan, Mrs. C. J. McGovern, Miss Emyrita Rosenthal and Mrs. Rosenthal.

The boy members of the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian Church were the hosts at a social on Friday evening at Hersman Hall. A pleasing program was given by Misses Anna Allen, Gertrude Tuesdale, Margaret Keishaw, Helen Louis and Messrs. Wilfred York and J. Corbin. Games and refreshments completed the evening.

A delightful card party was held Thursday evening at the Masonic Temple by the Masons and members of the Eastern Star. At the conclusion of the game refreshments were served. The prizes were won as follows: ladies' first prize, Mrs. O. C. Orr; second prize, Mrs. Jan Van Harreveldt; consolation, Mrs. James Emery; men's first prize, Marion Smith; second prize, O. C. Orr; consolation prize, Richard Willett.

The Misses Rilla and Lou Parsons have returned from an extended tour in the Orient. During their trip they spent considerable time at Manila, visiting their brother, Gay Parsons, who accompanied them to California on their return. On landing at San Francisco the trio motored through the San Joaquin Valley to Los Angeles and the southern part of the State before coming here.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fogge are receiving congratulations on the birth of a baby daughter. Mrs. Fogge was formerly Miss Gussie Sweet.

VENTURA. A pleasant affair of the week was the social meeting of the Fortnightly Club held at the home of Mrs. Neill Baker on Thursday. This was the last meeting of the club year.

The Tuesday Club had a very enjoyable musical afternoon at the home of Mrs. Sarah Samuels this week. A feature was the rendition of a classical program by Ward Foultz, the 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Foultz. The lad is a very skillful musician, who has received a fine musical education almost from infancy. His program included numbers from Dvorak, Chaminade, Wagner, Schubert and others.

Mrs. Scott McReynolds took a merry crowd of boys to the bathhouse for a swimming party Tuesday after school and later to her home for a birthday supper. Her son Herbert's eleventh birthday anniversary was the occasion of the celebration.

Burton Bixler was 10 years old on Monday and the event was celebrated with a jolly party for school friends at the home of his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Lincoln entertained a large circle of relatives on Sunday at their home in celebration of Miss Mona Hammon's birthday anniversary.

The high school seniors had planned a barbecue at Foster Park in the way of a class party, but because of the recent rains, it was made an indoor party instead. Miss Marguerite Mahn, who is the class valedictorian, entertained them at her home.

One of the nicest affairs of the week was the bridge tea which Mrs. George Daly and Miss Minnie Day gave, complimenting Mrs. Olive Gale and Mrs. Paul Brizard, on the eve of the former's departure for her home in Chicago. About thirty guests assembled for the afternoon.

The most brilliant dance of the year was the one given by Del Mar Cluz at the Athene clubhouse. The costumes, decorations, supper and all details were oriental in motif. The decorations were especially fine and some beautiful costumes were worn.

SAWTELLE. The beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. I. Colodny of 429 Rochester avenue was the scene of a happy gathering last Saturday night who came to help celebrate the birthday of Mr. Colodny and his twin brother Lee. Mr. John Davis of Santa Monica gave several dramatic readings. Music was furnished by various guests present, and dances given by Miss Wright and Miss Frances Munn of Los Angeles. Among the guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Speers of Santa Monica, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Clendenon of Los Angeles, the latter being the president of the Cosmos Club the past year; Rev. and Mrs. E. W. Necum, Col. O. K. Marshall, Governor of the Soldiers' Home, and Mrs. Marshall, Dr. and Mrs. Roberts of the home, Mr. and Mrs. Hughie of Los Angeles, Prof. and Mrs. Thornburg of Venice, and Miss Helene Paulsen.

An exceptionally fine program was given at the Woman's Club of Sawtelle on Tuesday. A luncheon was served by the home economics section. The luncheon speaker was Mr. Hughie of Los Angeles, a writer. He read an original one-act play. At the afternoon program Mr. Nordecog, who has a music studio in Santa Monica, gave a very fine address and sang several beautiful solos. Miss Frances Munn gave exhibition dances. The program was in charge of Mrs. I. Colodny, chairman of drama.

The Woman's Club of Sawtelle held a three-day bazaar this last week Thursday, Friday and Saturday. It was called the "Festival of Seasons." The autumn booth was especially attractive and from the fruits, flowers and plants sold, a neat little sum was realized. A program was given each evening. The various merchants had displays and the Eastern Star and Baptist Church each had a booth at the bazaar. It proved to be a community affair with fraternal, patriotic and religious organizations joining with the club. The Boy Scouts served dinner each day.

DELANO. Commencement exercises were held at the Delano grammar school this week for a class of twenty-five graduates. You can do home dyeing and secure splendid results with Colorite Fabric Dyes on dresses, blouses, sweaters, stockings, ribbons, camisoles, underwear, children's coats and dresses, etc. And for the men: You can re-color their neckwear, golf stockings, hunting coats, sweaters, to make them look like new again.

Put up in tablets, each one full of color: 8 in a box. Each Colorite tablet contains color enough for 2 ounces of fabrics, so it is easy to adjust the strength of the Dye prepared. Our little booklet: "How to Do Home Dyeing" in each package. For Sale at Drug and Department Stores. 25c.

If your dealer cannot supply Colorite Fabric Dyes, we will mail any color wanted on receipt of 25 cents.

"Jane" says: "Some time ago I contracted a very severe cold and cough. I have tried many remedies, but they do not seem to help me at all. I wish you would advise me what to do."

Answer: What you need is a laxative cough syrup, one that will drive the cold from your system. The following prescription will check your cold and cough: Get a 2½-oz. package of concentrated essence Mentho-Laxene and make according to directions on the bottle.

Celia asks: "My hair is too oily and my scalp itches with dandruff, and of late it is combing out too much. What is a good treatment?"

Answer: Obtain plain yellow Minyol from your druggist in 4-oz. jars and apply as per directions. This cleans, purifies, cools and invigorates the hair and scalp, thus stopping the death of the hair. Dandruff and itching are at once relieved. Men and women all over the country now use it regularly.

"Worried" writes: "Have been doctoring for kidney trouble and now want your advice. Frequent desire is followed by burning pain and am very tender and sore over region of bladder. Also backache affects me dreadfully. Can hardly move when I awake in the morning. Weakness, too, is a symptom."

Answer: I think if you will take Balmwort tablets regularly for a few weeks your kidneys and bladder will become normal and such symptoms vanish. This is unequalled for such complaints in my estimation.

APPENDICITIS

Appendicitis attacks at any moment, even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by stomach trouble or constipation. Many people have a bowel movement every day, but it is not a COMPLETE movement and much old, stale matter stays in the system to ferment and cause trouble. Often there is only a small passage in the center of the bowels while the sides are covered with old, hard matter which sticks to the bowels and often poisons the system for months, making you feel tired all the time and "half-sick." Even if your bowels move slightly each day, that is not enough. There must be an occasional THOROUGH, complete cleansing to bring out all the accumulated poisonous waste matter.

Appendicitis is an intestinal infection, spreading to the appendix, and it can be guarded against in the same manner in which you guard against the spread of throat infection (sore throat.) When you have sore throat, you can often prevent further trouble by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to destroy the germs, and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Very similar treatment is necessary to guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary and a COMPLETE drainage of the bowel system.

INTESTINAL ANTISEPTIC.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleaner. This preparation, known as Adler-I-Ka, acts as follows:

It tends to destroy or remove harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most COMPLETE system cleaner ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and bringing out foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart and other vital organs. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adler-I-Ka draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter is brought out which was poisoning your system. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headaches, one spoonful Adler-I-Ka ALWAYS brings relief. Adler-I-Ka is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary stomach and bowel medicines and the various oils and waters, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action.

REPORTS FROM PHYSICIANS.

"I have used Adler-I-Ka in my practice and have found nothing to excel it." (Signed) Dr. W. A. Line.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adler-I-Ka." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adler-I-Ka in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adler-I-Ka I feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

"Thanks to Adler-I-Ka I can sleep all night now, something I could not do for years." (Signed) Cora E. Noblett.

Adler-I-Ka is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

MUSICAL.

AN EVENTFUL WEEK.

DETAILS OF PROGRAM DURING FESTIVAL OF SONG.

The "events" of music week are so numerous, so varied and so generously scattered over Los Angeles and around it, that you can hope to see and hear only a moiety of the much. You must grab to right and left, happy in the thought that thousands upon thousands of other equally fortunate fellow-citizens are grabbing to right and left somewhere else. 'Twill be an hilarious week, for there is nothing quite so intoxicating as good music in large quantities.

Only a few of the many highlights of the week can be touched upon in this brief summary of good things to come. More detailed data will be published in The Times throughout the week. Thus you will not miss something you particularly want to hear.

Today is "opening day," and it will be most appropriately heralded. First, at Grauman's, where the Symphony Orchestra of seventy-five musicians will play, and Signor Campana, Mme. Sprotte, Mme. Balfour, Earl Alexander and Gage Christopher will render the sextette from "Lucia" and the quartette from "Rigoletto." Second, at Philharmonic Auditorium, where invited guests will hear the Woman's Lyric Club, conducted by J. B. Poulin and accompanied by Mrs. Hennion Robinson. Third, a program of numbers at Exposition Park by the park band, with Czecho-Slavic, Italian, Greek, Russian and Hungarian community singing under Hugo Kirchofer's directorship. Sacred music will be rendered in all the churches, a cantata being given at St. John's and one at the Church of Jesus.

Band concerts will be the predominant feature of Memorial Day. The Greater Los Angeles Municipal Band of sixty-five men will play at Philharmonic Auditorium, with J. E. Strobridge at the organ, Roe Plimton being the vocal soloist. The Los Angeles Festival Chorus of 200 voices will be heard at the County Hospital, John A. Van Pelt, directing. A concert by the Los Angeles Seventh Regiment Band, J. A. Wald directing, will be heard at Exposition Park, also a community sing under Hugo Kirchoffer.

Tuesday's program will be rich in community sings, the largest of these being that of the Hollywood Community Chorus of 1000, assisted by Charles W. Cadman, under Kirchofer's direction. Another will be the Bell Canto Club of fifty young women and soloists, under Dupuy, at Gamut Club.

Wednesday, store employees, under Christopher, will give a sing at Pershing Square. At First Congregational Church the U.S.C. college of music, with Lillian Backstrand, soprano, and J. Paul Elliott, cornetist, will be heard.

At the Ebell Club there will be a recital by pupils of Davis Musical College. The Gamut Club will give a dinner and a program of music, the artists being Estelle Heartt-Dreyfus, Thomas Vincent Cator, Olga Steeb, Zoellner Quartet and Occidental Glee Club.

Many church choruses will be heard on Thursday. Store employees, under Christopher, will sing at Hamburger's. There will be concerts at Pershing Square, Hollenbeck Home, Thornycroft Hospital and at many manufacturing and business plants—and, of course, many open-air sings. "The Tempest" will be given in Hollywood Bowl by a cast of professional actors, under G. L. Hubbard's direction. Orpheus Club Concert by sixty young men, at Gamut Club, Dupuy being soloist. In the evening a program in honor of Charles Wakefield Cadman at the Ambassador Hotel, under auspices of Uplifters' Club and Federated Women's Clubs.

Friday will be filled to the brim with lively community sings and programs. Perhaps the most conspicuous event of the day, certainly the most highbrow, will be the Los Angeles Trio at the Friday Morning Club, the trio being May MacDonald Hope, Leon Goldwasser and Ilya Bronson, when a cantata by Henry Schoenfeld will be rendered.

Saturday's program includes a popular concert by Greater Los Angeles' Municipal Band at Pershing Square, Elks' Band, No. 99, at Exposition Park, an all-nations community sing at Courthouse Square, with innumerable recitals, sings, drills, etc. Also "Ye Old Tyme" concert at San Pedro, by the San Pedro Philharmonic Society, Dan Gridley directing.

Sunday, June 5, community sing at Exposition Park, to be led by Los Angeles Festival Choir in old hymns. This fine program at the park will be enhanced and extended by the M. E. Church orchestra, Los Angeles Regiment Band, Agnes Woodward's Whistling Chorus, Welch Choir, and addresses on community music by Mrs. Willoughby Rodman.

At the Hollywood bowl "Elijah" will be rendered by the Los Angeles Oratorio Society of 200 voices, J. Smallman, conducting; Mrs. N. C. Hassler, singing soprano; F. Middaugh, contralto; H. Proctor, tenor; Clifford Lott, bass; L. Gregg at the piano. All the churches will have special and appropriate musical programs.

Today's Events.

From 9 o'clock in the morning to 9 o'clock at night, and later perhaps, the city will be filled with song today. This marks the opening of the music week festival. The affairs will assume a varied cast, beginning with a community sing led by J. A. Lewis of the Men's Bible class at the Christian Church in Highland Park, and closing with special musical services, including sacred cantatas and community singing at a dozen churches.

Among the affairs that will interest are a piano program by Brahm Van Den Berg, at Crocker Hospital; at 10:30; musical program by Temple Baptist Choir and quartet, Emory Foster directing and Ray Hastings at the organ at 10:45; organ recital by A. T. Hirschler, assisted by singers under the direction of J. B. Trowbridge at the Bible Institute, at 11 o'clock; a special musical program at the First Emerson New Thought Church, under the direction of Abbie Norton Jamison, at the Friday Morning clubhouse, at 11 o'clock; the Grauman anniversary concert with a symphony orchestra of seventy-five men, and a quartet of singers including Signor Ettore Campana, Mme. Anna Ruzena Sprotte; Constance Balfour, Earl Alexander and Gage Christopher at Grauman's Third-street Theater at 11:15 o'clock.

In the afternoon there will be a pageant and special music by the Southern California Summer School of Missions at the Hollywood Baptist Church, at 2:45 o'clock; a concert by the Woman's Lyric Club, under J. WHITTIER.

A wedding of wide interest to Whittier friends and the Whittier College colony was that of Miss Mabel Burdg and Mr. Gurney W. Hinshaw, which was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Burdg, 521 East Philadelphia street, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, the Rev. Frank W. Dell, pastor of the First Friends Church, reading the scriptural and the civil rites and using the double ring ceremony. Miss Olive Shong of Placentia, rendered "Love's Old Sweet Song" as the bridal party entered and stood before an improvised floral altar. The bride and bridegroom were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Hinshaw, brother and sister, respectively, of the contracting pair. Miss Burdg wore a Canton crepe gown and carried orange blossoms and Cecil Brunner roses and ferns. Forty-five guests attended the ceremony, all relatives of the Burdgs or the Hinshaws. The bride comes from one of the well-known Whittier families, her uncle, Dr. Henry Edwin McGrew, being former pastor of the Friends church at Whittier, but now president of Penn College at Oskaloosa, Iowa. For some time she has been secretary to Mr. Dell, pastor of the Friends church, and she retains her position. Mr. Hinshaw has been in Whittier less than two years, but during that time has made many friends. He is associated in business with his brother, Evert Hinshaw, one of the prominent contractors and builders of Southern California. After an auto wedding journey, the destination of which was not disclosed, Mr. and Mrs. Hinshaw will return and make their home in Whittier.

The S. H. Gester home at 416 North Washington avenue, was the scene of two charming entertainments Friday afternoon, and evening. In the afternoon Mrs. Gester entertained with a bridge luncheon, covers being laid for fourteen. At the card games following Mrs. W. S. Gester and Mrs. Smilley were awarded prizes. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Gester entertained with a five hundred card party. High scores were made by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wicker and consolations were bestowed upon Mrs. R. C. Gunn and Mr. Walter Spicer. Spring blossoms in pastel shades were used for the floral decorations at both affairs and a midnight collation was served following the five hundred party.

Members of the Whittier High School Glee Clubs and Orchestra gave an interesting entertainment to the old people at the County Farm near Downey Friday evening. There were twenty-five members of the Glee Clubs and an equal number of presented included three orchestra presented included three orcchestra members, two by the Glee Clubs, a vocal solo by Miss Rhena Pellerin and one by Miss Irene Scott, a violin number by Miss Teresa Bessler and readings by Miss Julia Miller and Miss Elizabeth Bacon.

EAST WHITTIER.

An event that elicited wide interest in the East Whittier district was the musical recital given in the auditorium of the East Whittier schoolhouse Thursday evening to a crowded house. The entertainment was presented by the piano pupils of Griffith Milhous, assisted by Mrs. R. E. Harrison, soprano, and Miss Esther Milhous, accompanist. Mrs. Harrison's songs were: Weil's "Spring Song" and "Out Where the West Begins," by Philllco. Piano numbers were by Cornelia Randall, Masimi Beede, La Verne Page, Anna May Douglass, Margaret Mitchell, Gladys and Lawrence Schumacker, Beaulah Kathleen Henry, Dorothy Hampton, Eleanor Otis, Ralph Palmer, Jesse Chisler, Gladys Jordon; violin numbers were by Ray Mitchell, William Parsons and Ross Lambert; coronet numbers by Wilma Hedges, Jessie Chisler, Walter Mitchell and Ralph Palmer.

RIVERA.

The annual election of officers of the Woman's Improvement Club of Rivera was held Wednesday afternoon, when Mrs. L. W. Houghton entertained the club members at her hospitable home on Topeka street. The roll call was answered by quotations from that popular home poet, Edgar Guest, and in many instances entire poems of Mr. Guest were quoted. Current events were read and discussed informally. The officers chosen were: Mrs. Edward M. Selby, president; Mrs. Margaret Sawyer, vice-president; Mrs. L. W. Houghton, secretary, and Mrs. Will Walker, treasurer. After the business session a pleasant social hour was spent with the hostess, who served an attractive collation, assisted in entertaining and serving by her daughter, Mrs. Herbert Gilman.

The bazaar given Thursday evening at the town hall by the Willing Workers of the Baptist Church, the ladies of the Improvement Club and others, was largely attended and netted a satisfying sum for the general fund of the church. Mrs. George Harvey is president of the church society, and Mrs. Charles Anspaugh was chairman of the committee from the club that catered. Mrs. W. D. Taylor was hostess to the Willing Workers at an all-day meeting Thursday, some twenty-five of the members attending.

The marriage of Miss Geraldine Carroll and Arthur J. Wolfe took place Saturday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Caroll. Preceding the ceremony, Miss Georgia Shropshire sang, "God Make Thee Mine" and "Longing." Mrs. Cullen Snell was matron of honor, while Roy Gifford was best man. Mr. Carroll gave his daughter away and the service was read by Rev. E. Woods of South Pasadena. After a honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe will reside at 1514 South Marguerita avenue, this city.

A delightful social event of the week was the card party given by the Guild of Holy Trinity Church at the parish house Tuesday evening. The assembly room was a veritable bower of flowers and greenery, where small tables were arranged for the players. Five hundred and auction bridge were the games most popular. Mrs. H. J. Goudge, Mrs. Harold Gay, Mrs. George Wirth, Mrs. Kern and Mrs. O. H. Schleusener were in charge and the latter was chairman of the hostess committee.

Among the summer guests already arrived are Mr. and Mrs. L. Ford of San Francisco. Mr. Ford is a violinist of considerable distinction, and both he and his wife will be an addition to the social and musical life of the community.

A pleasant meeting of the Girl Scouts was held Tuesday evening at the Crandall home, with Miss Marjorie Crandall as hostess.

Miss Jean Deloran entertained a group of friends in a delightful manner at her home Thursday evening. They were invited to a "track meet extraordinary" and the entertainment provided many interesting diversions. An informal supper was served from the dining-room during the evening.

The annual luncheon of the Neptunian Club was held Tuesday at 1 o'clock at the home of Mrs. J. H. Withers. The luncheon table at which twelve guests were seated, was centered by an artistic basket filled with fragrant pink rosebuds. The name cards and bonbon baskets were in the same color note of pink. During the serving an interesting diversion was created by the receiving of a message of greeting from Mrs. Castile, a charter member of the club, now living at Glendale. ENGLISH COUNTRY LIFE DEPICTED Archibald Marshall's "The Hall and the Grange" Shows to What Straits English "Landed Gentry" Have Been Driven by the War.

THE HALL AND THE GRANGE. By Archibald Marshall. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

A story of English country life today, written in Mr. Marshall's characteristic way. It shows the straits to which the "landed gentry" have been brought by the war and its heavy burden of taxation. Squire Eldridge, who has done good but not spectacular service in the war, a hale man not far past middle age, finds it necessary to retrench along every line in order to keep up the old Hall in which his family has lived for two or three centuries. The London house has to be given up, the number of servants reduced until his daughters are themselves compelled to mow the grassy tennis court, the renowned hospitality of the Hall has to be curtailed until only a few superannuated relatives are welcomed there.

In contrast to the Colonel, fine type of old country squire, patron of each of his tenants, beneficent providence to the old family servants, is the younger brother, Sir William Eldridge. The latter had piled up a huge fortune in commerce, but had made, he produly boasted, not one bob out of the war. In addition, he had been given the opportunity to serve the government with conspicuous success during the war.

Then he retired for a time to Hayslope Grange, the dower house of the family, which he transformed into a pretentious home of wealth and leisure, outrivalling in splendor the old Hall, which is the family seat.

These two brothers have always been the best of friends. The Squire is the older and he has long been accustomed to being referred to as the head of the family. But friction develops between them. The wealth and position of the successful younger brother, the honors accorded him in the great world which the Squire is sadly out of touch with, his own natural assertiveness and self-confidence, these make Sir William unconsciously less deferential and less considerate in his relations with the Squire.

The break comes over Sir William's plan to enlarge his garden by taking in a piece of meadow land on the estate. But his objections are swept aside by Sir William, who proceeds with his plan until he realizes, too late, that he has deeply offended his brother by so doing.

The gradual widening of the breach of these two, with its tragic results, is developed with all of Mr. Marshall's rare skill.

While the characters, with the exception of the two brothers, are less distinct and individual than we might wish, these two are delineated with such perfection of art that we can disregard the others. Each is shown with all his cherished opinions, his foibles and his prejudices, his strength and his weakness, until we understand the troubled Squire and his important brother far better than they understood each other.

The novel is one that those who like Mr. Marshall's tranquil attitude toward life, his rich conservatism, and his sure sense of values will find eminently worth while. It is of special interest as showing the position of the old order in England, an order that the author understands and sympathizes with to the full, which makes him its best delineator.

GREEN APPLE HARVEST. By Sheila Kaye-Smith. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York

Miss Sheila Kaye-Smith is an English writer who has written several novels of Sussex farm life in which she has presented the [illegible] and drab existence of the slow and patient tillers of the soil with a realism that is inevitably compared with that of Hardy in his treatment of Wessex life and character.

"Green Apple Harvest" unfolds the drama of Bob Fuller, full-blooded wastrel who drank and gamed and made free with the country wenches to the scandal of his respectable family, until the depths of his nature were sounded by Hannah Iden, a gipsy girl, who played him for all she could get out of him, only to throw him over in the end for one of her own breed.

This sobered Bob, who on the rebound married Mabel, a selfish and shallow town-bred girl, totally unsuited to become the wife of a small farmer. Things did not go so badly with them until Bob again met Hannah, got drunk and was thrown out of the village tavern, hitting his head against a post. This blow gave him the shock needed to start him on a new tack. Under the influence of a narrow but fervid minister, the latent religious leaning, sadly mixed with superstition, which he had inherited from his father, manifested itself, to Mabel's chagrin.

Alternating between religious fervor, which he preached to all who would listen to him, and fits of despondency when he was sure he would be consumed in everlasting fire, he succeeded in making himself an outcast, the scorn of the stolid country folk who had always known him.

His brother Clem, a character less complex, but as clearly drawn as that of Bob, sums up his brother's tragic life thus: "Sims to me as Bob's lik a green apple tree—he's picked his fruit lik other men, but it's bin hard and sour instead of sweet. Love and religion—they're both sweet things, folks say, but with Bob they've been as the hard green apples."

THE SHEIK. By E. M. Hull. Small, Maynard & Co., Boston, Mass.

A tale of wild adventure in the great Arabian Desert. We are told by the publishers that this book, which was published first in England, has proved to be the best seller since "The Rosary." We seriously doubt if it will make such a record in this country, although it has the kind of appeal that makes big sales.

The heroine, Diana Mayo, orphaned at birth by the death of her mother and the suicide of her grief-stricken father, is brought up under the direction of her brother, a somewhat eccentric bachelor, who sees to it that all his sister's training is such as to make her a good companion for himself, so that he may take her with him on his ramblings over the globe. The result is that Diana can shoot, ride, swim, box and do all the things that a healthy, active, athletic boy loves to do. She therefore comes into womanhood without sex consciousness and totally devoid of sentimentalism that usually marks young women at that age.

Being decidedly self-willed, and having grown restive under her brother's more or less domineering manner, she decides to assert her independence by making a trip alone into the desert. Her brother, who happens at that time to have decided to go to America, objects and insists that Diana accompany him. This she refuses to do, and being of age and her own master, she proceeds to carry out her purpose.

Once she leaves the city's borders for the open places things begin to go wrong. Her guide is supposed to be a man of unimpeachable integrity and knowledge of the desert, so she feels safe and confident. But suddenly out of the desert wastes there comes a cloud of horsemen that sweep up and at once open fire upon her caravan. Diana, seeing a giant of an Arab, mounted on a magnificent horse, making direct for her, puts spurs to her own mount and attempts to escape. The chase is brief, as the Arab's steed gradually overtakes her and ere she is able to turn and defend herself she is swept from her saddle and onto the back of the horse of her pursuer. She fights and struggles like the vigorous young animal that she is, but all to no avail. She is in the hands of her master and she knows it.

The Sheik takes Diana to his headquarters in the desert and proceeds to woo her in true cave-man style. We are kept in titillating suspense as to the effect such masterliness will eventually have upon her, the question being whether she will kill him when she gets the chances or will succumb to his overpowering strength and become his willing paramour. If the author's solution is not to the liking of the American woman of today, it will at least please a not too critical public that finds excitement and great joy in the sex drama that is so abundantly provided in the moving-picture world.

The author has created the desert atmosphere; she crammed her book with action, and has given such a good counterfeit of reality as to make the book one that it is easy to read, even if it will not bear too close critical analysis.

OUR PILGRIM INHERITANCE.

OLD PILGRIM DAYS. By Lillian Hoag Monk. Published under the auspices of Society of Sons of the Revolution, Los Angeles.

A volume of essays dealing with the customs and personalities of the Pilgrim settlers of Massachusetts by a gifted Los Angeles woman who has brought to her task a sympathetic touch that illuminates the whole subject.

The opening essay, devoted as it is to Elder William Brewster, portrays the spiritual head of the colony as a man of striking strength of character and dominating spiritual force. Nor has Mrs. Monk forgotten to pay high tribute to the women of the colony. She gives us a picture of these sturdy, high-minded women that is as pleasing as it is appreciative of the splendid contribution which they made to the founding, maintaining and development of the high Christian principles that swayed these sturdy forefathers of a great and glorious race.

The book has been sympathetically received by the reviewers of the East, being accorded a particularly striking notice in the Boston Evening Transcript, which describes the work, not only as lucid and comprehensive, but as a labor of love by one who has combined sound research with sympathetic treatment of a worthy company whose devotion to high aims enabled them to rear a solid fabric that is as enduring as it was daring in conception.

There are also essays dealing with Puritanism and its work in America: the Pilgrim quality, the spell of New England, our Pilgrim inheritance, the relations between Elder Brewster and Gov. Bradford, an account of a modern Old Cape Colony Pilgrimage together with an exceedingly lucid account of the coming of the Mayflower and the landing of the Pilgrims.

CHILDREN'S STORIES.

STORIES ALWAYS NEW. By Cora Morris. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., Boston.

Here are a number of excellent children's stories, fittingly grouped by the countries in which they are favorites.

In the part relating to our own country are several telling of the coming of the Pilgrims and their early experiences. Among those from England are "The Little Lame Prince" and the constant favorite, "Tom Thumb." From Italy we have "Pippo," which is the Italian "Puss in Boots," "The Story of Moufflou," "Ranella," the Italian Cinderella, "Gigi and the Magic Ring," and "Piccola." From Belgium, there is a delightful tale, "Sugar-Candy House," and from France, "Jeanne d'Arc" and several others, not forgetting the ever-popular "Sleeping Beauty." The pictures by Mrs. Inglis are of unusual excellence.

MODERN DRAMA.

Miss Storm Jameson, the noted critic, makes a brilliant analysis of European drama, in her new book, "Modern Drama in Europe," and upsets the idols of many in her preferences. One idol, however, that she not only left standing but added new powerful props to, is Benavente, the great Spanish dramatist. Miss Jameson is enthusiastic about the author of "The Passion Flower," etc., and, in a keen estimate of the works of Benavente and Hofmannsthal, places them among the very greatest of the contemporaries. Benavente is known to American drama lovers through his plays, "First" and "Second" series, which have been published by Charles Scribner's Sons. A new volume of the later plays by this author is in preparation.

LONDON OPINION.

During the Civil War the South had no stronger support in England than the London Times. The paper bitterly opposed the conduct of our Minister, Charles Francis Adams. And yet today the Times serenely pronounces the performance of his duties during the war as practically faultless. It was faultless when a fault of weakness or passion might have ruined his country. It is the publication of "A Cycle of Adams Letters" (Houghton Mifflin Company) that has again brought Charles Francis Adams to the attention of the London Times. There are the letters of Mr. Adams and his two celebrated sons, covering the years of the Civil War.

LUBRICATING OILS.

Another volume in their D.-U. (Directly-Useful) Technical Series has just been brought out by E. P. Dutton & Co. It deals with "Lubricating and Allied Oils" and forms a handbook of much value for chemists, engineers and students. It is by Elliott A. Evans, chief chemist to C. C. Wakefield & Co., Ltd., and has a foreword by Sir Charles Cheers Wakefield. The series of which the volume is the latest issue aims to fill a midway position between the theoretical and practical volume, its information, investigations and discussions being all of the directly useful character, while it presents also enough scientific explanation to satisfy the inquiring mind.

MOST POPULAR POET IN JAPAN.

Which of our American poets would you expect to appeal to the Japanese? According to Prof. Noguchi of the University at Tokio, Walt Whitman and Amy Lowell are the two most widely read. There is a fine logic in the choice, especially in the choice of Miss Lowell. Much of her work reflects the Japanese spirit and form. How accurately she has caught the artistry of the Japanese can be judged by the extent of her popularity in Japan. Miss Lowell's new book of poetry, "Legends," will be published this month by Houghton-Mifflin Company.

This is
ZANE GREY
Week

See for yourself why the American public will by all indications pay even more to read Zane Grey's books this year than the $1,500,000 it paid in 1920. Read The Mysterious Rider, his new novel, which has already sold over 160,000 copies. Read The Man of the Forest, 1920's best seller, and Tales of Fishes, Zane Grey's adventures in deep sea fishing.

Everywhere this week.

This Is
Zane Grey Week

—Zane Grey's Books are a national institution. If you're not a follower of the lives of the Characters he creates—well—you should be! Every one of his Stories seems to transport the Reader right into the midst of a whirlpool of exciting events that are everyday occurrences in the lives of the red-blooded Men and Women of his Books.

—In Bullock's Book Store there are 17 of his Books priced $1.00 each. They're "Desert of Wheat"—"Betty Zane"—"The Border Legion" "Desert Gold"—"Last of the Plainsmen"—"The Light of Western Stars"—"The Lone Star Ranger"—"The Rainbow Trail"—"Red-Headed Outfield"—"Riders of the Purple Sage"—"U. P. Trail"—"The Short Stop"—"Wildfire."

—For the Boys there are "The Young Forester"—"The Young Lion Hunter"—"Ken Ward in the Jungle"—"The Young Pitcher"—all at $1.00 each—on Bullock's Second Floor.

P. S.—Mosher Books may not be as exciting as Zane Grey's Stories—but they're most certainly desirable. Find them at Bullock's only in Los Angeles.

INTERNATIONAL LAW VITALIZED.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS AND THE NEW INTERNATIONAL LAW. By John Eugene Harley. Oxford University Press, New York

The changes brought about in international law by the League of Nations are fundamental and far-reaching, but the average person's knowledge of the subject is vague and indefinite. Prof. Harley has succeeded in analyzing these changes and in recording them with clearness and precision, all in a series of eleven brief chapters containing in the neighborhood of 20,000 words.

That the League of Nations is a living thing, despite our own attitude toward it, is something that provincial Americans can hardly appreciate. But he who reads this book has it slowly brought home to him that, after all, the highest aims of the war did not fail; that the world has been made safer and better in that a new public opinion has been created and has taken definite form in regard to national wantonness; and that new and better laws have been established governing international relations.

By the provisions of the League all wars, other than those clearly made in self-defense, are made illegal. The wars so outlawed are classified by Prof. Harley as follows:

1. A war of conquest or external aggression.

2. A war resorted to by one member after the matter in dispute has been the subject of an arbitral award which is complied with by the other disputant.

3. A war resorted to by a member in disregard of a unanimous recommendation of the Council (excluding disputants) which is complied with by the other disputing member.

4. All wars between members of the League are illegal if begun before a delay period of from three to nine months has elapsed.

In reviewing the book one can hardly do better than to quote from the author's own excellent summary, given in the eleventh chapter. After summarizing the defects of international law as it existed prior to the adoption of the League, the following concise account of the effect of the League upon the law of nations is given:

"In view of the preamble of the covenant which makes the understandings of international law the actual rule of conduct among governments, and of that section of the Versailles Treaty providing for the trial of certain Germans for violation of the laws and customs of war, it is seen that international law is not a code of ethics, but is a system of law. The covenant shows plainly that the nations now realize the need of a system of positive law. They also realize the inadequacy of the old machinery for administering and applying the law, and have by the covenant provided new agencies for these purposes, the most important of which is the court of international justice. They have felt the need of a system of law so keenly that they have united to give effect to the rule of law, and have agreed to provide sanctions in certain cases where the supremacy of the law is threatened. They have agreed to modify the hitherto prevailing conception as to what a sovereign nation may or may not do, and have cast their lot with a common league of all, to the end that the government of the world may be a government by law and not by diplomats closeted within their secret chambers."

The chapter headings of this book are: "Conceptions of International Law," "Methods by Which International Law is Developed," "Codification of International Law," "The International Labor Organization," "International Law During the War," "In Certain Cases War Made an Illegal Process by the Covenant," "Settlement of Disputes," "Some Modifications in the Theory of International Law," "The Question of Sanctions," "The Juridical Status of the League of Nations," "Conclusions." Documents and source material of great value to the reader are given in a series of appendices.

Prof. Harley was formerly Carnegie Fellow in the international law, Harvard University. He is now assistant professor of political science in the University of Southern California.

PRAGUE, CITY OF PALACES.

Prague, capital of Czecho-Slovakia, is pre-eminently a city of palaces.

As soon as one has crossed the Moldava by the old Charles bridge—the quaintest, most picturesque bridge in the world, with its gates flanked with towers and its group of beautiful statues adorning the parapet—one finds oneself in a quarter of the city entirely given over to palaces, where, in narrow, old streets, crooked and grass grown, and about tranquil, silent squares rise the splendid facades of seigneurial dwellings.

When, following the signing of the peace, America, England, France and Italy were looking for quarters for their diplomatic representatives, these palaces were just what was needed for housing the legations.

France took over the palace belonging to the Buquoys, a Flemish family which came to Bohemia after the Battle of La Montagne Blanche and cast in their fortunes with those of the Hapsburgs.

The United States Minister, Mr. Crane, has bought with his own money the magnificent palace of the Schonborn. The chateau is less beautiful, less elegant, perhaps, than the Buquoy palace, but the gardens are marvelous.—[Raymond Recouly in Scribner's Magazine.

NEW PRESIDENT CHOSEN.

Jesse Lynch Williams has been chosen to succeed Rex Beach as president of the Authors', Artists' and Dramatists' League of America. Mr. Beach, who was president for two years, was not a candidate for re-election. His successor is one of the most popular contemporary writers of fiction. His books, which include, "And So They Were Married," "Remating Time," etc., are published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

QUICK CHANGES OF LANGUAGE.

Arree, the boy who acted as our maid-of-all-work on Vao (New Hebrides group, South Pacific) supplied me with native words until I had a fairly respectable vocabulary, but, when I tried to use it, I made the interesting discovery that the old men and the young men spoke different tongues.

Language changes rapidly among savage tribes. No one troubles to get the correct pronunciation of a word. The younger generation adopt abbreviations or new words at will, and incorporate into their speech strange corruptions of English or French words learned from the whites. Some of the words I learned from Arree were absolutely unintelligible to many of the older men.

The language varied considerably from village to village, and though many of the Vao men were refugees from Malekula, it was very different from that of any of the tribes on the big island. I once estimated the number of languages spoken in the South Seas at 400. I am now convinced that as many as that are used by the black races alone.—[Martin Johnson in Asia.

An Anticlimax.

Uncle (telling tall yarn to young nephew)—We had more than a mile to go to get out of the forest when we heard the howls of a pack of wolves behind us. I strained every nerve, but all in vain. Now I could hear their panting breath, and at last I felt their muzzles touching me, when—

Nephew: You must have felt glad uncle.

Uncle (amazed): Glad! Why?

Nephew: When you found they had their muzzles on.—[Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

GENE STRATTON PORTER SPEAKS.

Distinguished Novelist and Naturalist Senses the Growing Demand for Clean, Wholesome Pictures and Will Supervise Filming of Her Own Books.

BY GENE STRATTON PORTER.

[The works of Gene Stratton Porter, who is now a resident of Los Angeles, are probably the most widely read of any American writer of the day. Her publishers say that over 9,000,000 of her books have been sold. These books are now to be produced on the screen by the International Higher Culture Films, Inc., of Los Angeles. Her purpose in having the books thus reproduced is given in the following article from her gifted pen.—Editor.]

In the language of the old hymn, "A charge to keep I have" with my reading public, I have taught 45,000,000 men, women and children to expect from me a story of men and women who for most part are living up to their highest ideals, or are being punished because they are not. I have left detailed descriptions of intrigue and adultery to those men and women who feel qualified to handle these subjects in a manner beneficial to the reading public. I am neither blind nor lacking in perception as to the waywardness and complications of human nature. It is merely that my call has been to reproduce the lives of clean, moral men and women, who are spending their time and strength in an effort to make the world a better place for themselves and for their children.

While arranging for the publication of my first book, an editor whose judgment I have learned later to respect highly, said to me that if I would cut the nature part from my book he would guarantee that it would earn thousands of dollars. If I left it as I had originally written it, I might perhaps hope to clear $600. My reply was that since I had written the book for the express purpose of putting nature work before the people in a form in which they would accept it, I should insist on having it published as it was written, and I would be satisfied with whatever financial returns it brought. Neither of us imagined nor hoped that fifteen years later the book would be living and selling steadily year after year, as has every other nature story I ever have written. I attribute this to the fact that all natural history I ever have put into a book has been the result of personal investigation, clean, straight stuff, scientifically verified in every instance. And all characters that I ever have incorporated in a book I have tried sincerely to use in the working out of recognized and high principles of conduct. These books have made their way around the world, wherever English is understood, and have been translated into seven foreign tongues, and many of them raised in Braille point for the blind.

I have at command at least two methods by which I can prove that I never worked for money. That the books have earned large sums has been a greater surprise to me than to anyone else; and in this fact lies my first basic proof that love of nature and love of my fellowman inspired them. Certainly it will tax no one's mentality to understand that when these nature stories began bringing large returns, if I had been interested in accumulating a fortune I never should have taken the time or spent much of the returns from the nature stories, in illustrating and writing every other year a book of natural history, when I knew in all reason that it would find an audience of from fifteen to twenty thousand readers, where a novel would attain to the neighborhood of 200,000. Knowing this, for the past fifteen years I have gone on deliberately writing a nature book every other year, because it was natural history in which I really wished to interest my readers

Another large source of revenue which I have deliberately put aside for fifteen years has been the making of my books into moving pictures. I think there is scarcely a moving-picture corporation in existence which has not asked for my book rights, or an actor or actress of importance who has not wanted to take the part of the Harvester, a Girl of the Limberlost, Laddie, or other of my book characters. Five or six years ago I made one attempt to have one of my books reproduced, but I never have been able to bring myself to witness the result. So again I deliberately set aside a small fortune that I might have been earning, waiting for a time to come when those of the public who demand that a book shall be produced as it is written, have been able so to make their demands heard and felt that producers shall be forced to listen to them

I have spent perhaps half my life in making pictures, straight reproductions of nature as it is. No one with my capabilities can love a beautiful picture that is a truthful reproduction of nature and human nature more than I do, and it has been a great hardship for me to wait fifteen years for the time to arrive at which the churches, schools, colleges and universities and the great mass of home-loving, home-keeping people shall arise in a body and demand that they be given a reproduction of books they have taken into their homes and hearts, without the introduction of characters not to be found in the books or of scenes that were not true to the setting. Today, I feel that the time has come when there is a demand for the reproduction of a book with truth to the intent of the author, in human nature and in natural history as well.

I have been on the streets of Los Angeles and I have seen picture houses filled to overflowing with people who were pleased with the pictures that were being exhibited as they were, and with people who, while protesting against desecration of favorite books and stories, still went to see the pictures because pictures are an exquisitely beautiful and appealing form in which to tell a story. As I have gone home from these places I have watched the residences I passed—for Los Angeles has a lovely way of leaving the blinds up, so I have been privileged to look into homes—filled with people who were waiting, as I have been waiting, for the time to come when a picture may be made of a book that will give back that book in truthful form to those who appreciate it. I have realized that if programs were so arranged as to attract the hearth-stone people, the churches, schools and women's clubs, every picture house in Los Angeles would have to be torn down and rebuilt many times larger than it is, or many new houses would have to be built, to accommodate the crowds who would take their children and go to see pictures, had they any guarantee that what they went to see would not shock and repel them—to put it in milder form, would not irritate them by changes in their favorite books for which they could not see the slightest necessity.

Last fall when I came to Los Angeles, a number of young men, university graduates, clean, decent, energetic, with high ideals and praiseworthy ambitions, came to me and asked if they might form a corporation solely for the production of my books and those of other writers to whom I might agree, covenanting to produce the books in the spirit and intent in which they were written without the introduction of foreign scenes and characters; also if I would work with them on my own and any other books we might deem fit for their purposes. I replied that if they could form their corporation and raise their capital on this basis, I would take a position with the company as natural history director, that I would grant them the privilege of reproducing one of my books and in case this book were reproduced true to human nature and the natural history values of the book, they should have the privilege, under the same conditions, of reproducing other books of mine suitable for their purposes, or anything that I might write for the purpose of picturization later. I further agreed to use in the making of these pictures that same knowledge of human nature and of romance which has endeared my work to a great many people.

It is my intention to give the pictures made by the International Higher Culture Films, Inc., the same care in the loving portrayal of human nature and the scientific reproduction of natural history that I have tried so earnestly to incorporate in every book I ever have written. And in order to do this it is imperative that certain scenes in these pictures be made in Northern Indiana.

From the letters which daily flood my mail, I have come to feel that Freckles and Elnora, that the Harvester and Danny and Laddie and Mickey and Kate, are everybody's children, even as they are the children of my heart and brain; and I can imagine no greater happiness than to put them and their life stories before the public through the very beautiful medium of the moving picture.

Opal's Grandmother Speaks.

Fred Lockley interviews a few of Opal Whiteley's friends in the April Bookman. Her grandmother says of the author of the diary:

"You want to know what I think about the mystery about Opal? I'll tell you, mister—the honest truth. There's no mystery—except the mystery of why Opal wants to disown her own folks and how she can get people to believe that she is an adopted baby. See that picture taken when Opal and Pearl were little girls? You can see that they look almost like twins. Look at this picture of Lizzie, Opal's mother, when she was young. She and Opal look as much alike as two peas in the same pod. Go out and talk to Opal's sister, Chloe, and you can see that Opal and Chloe look too much alike not to be sisters. Maybe Opal really believes she is an adopted child. I hate to think she is saying so if she doesn't believe it. Maybe she has got to studying about it till she really thinks that they changed children on the way from Colton to our place here in Cottage Grove. I never did understand Opal. She used to climb up in a big evergreen tree over the pig pen and go into a kind of brown study and sometimes fall out of the trees and fall in the pig pen. Switching her didn't seem to do much good. When I would talk to her, she would look at me as solemn as an owl and when I was all through, she would say, 'What did you say, I was thinking about something else;' and I would have to spank her all over again. For my part, I am glad that the older children aren't like Opal, for she certainly was very trying. But you couldn't help loving her, in spite of her trying ways, for she was cunning and awfully knowing. She used to tell awful lies whe she was little about what the toads and birds and snakes said to her, just as if toads and bugs could talk. . . .

"She spent all the time she could get away from the house out of doors. She said she was listening to what the wind and the trees and the stars said to her. When she was about 11, she began collecting bugs and caterpillars and other dead things. She always did think that whatever she said or did was very important."

The Jutland Controversy.

Commander C. C. Gill's recently published book, "What Happened at Jutland" (Doran) the first American account of that famous battle, has been recommended by many naval authorities. Admiral Fiske writes of it: "Commander Gill, in his book, 'What Happened at Jutland,' describes the battle more clearly and succinctly than any other author whose book I have seen; and yet he makes us realize how far from clear the situation actually appeared to the smoke-blinded eyes of Jellicoe and Von Sheer, and to the brains behind those eyes, confused, as they could not fail to have been, by the rapid succession of irreconcilable and even contradictory reports, which comprised the sum total of the information that they received."

Painfully Plain English.

"Gee, no!" explained the pretty cash girl, "I wouldn't marry you if you was the last man on earth. I don't want nothin' to do with you. Is that plain English?"

"Well, your language is plain enough," said the mortified man, "but it isn't English." — [Ladies' Home Journal.

French Voile Blouses at One Third Less

—When you see the blouses in this offering we know that you'll exclaim as did we, over the fine quality of the material, the modish styles, dainty trimmings and excellent workmanship by which they are characterized.

Various Types of Collars are Represented

—most of them having been designed to conform gracefully and effectively to the open-front lines of the Tuxedo sweater or coat. Some are finished with wee knife-pleated ruffles, hemstitching and tucks; others have fine Val laces used in combination with hand-drawn work; still other models exhibit real Irish lace in their vestee-fronts.

SOUTH PASADENA.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman T. Kirk, 224 Stratford avenue, had as their in of New York, who was a member of the Hottentot company, which played at the Mason recently. Mr. ibson is a cousin of Mrs. Kirk.

The Woman's Missionary Federation enjoyed a very pleasant meeting at the Presbyterian Church on Tuesday, when they assembled for their annual gathering. Five societies were presented. A well-arranged program was carried out at both the morning and afternoon sessions. A basket luncheon was served at the noon hour in the parlors of the church, and its ladies, who were hostesses of the day, supplemented in a bounteous manner the lunches brought by the visitors. Mrs. D. M. ussing, who had charge of the program for the day, introduced a number of pleasing features, which were greatly enjoyed. A number of very inspirational addresses were given. Dr. O. P. Gifford was the chief speaker of the day and gave one of his characteristic masterpieces.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Wilson and son William, Jr., of Newark, N. J., were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Cowley of 1011 Stratford avenue. They came across the country by motor and, after visiting a number of points of interest in various sections of the State for a few months, they expect to locate in this section of the country.

A very delightful pre-Decoration Day party was given last Friday evening by Miss Ethel Schilling at her home, 1126 Oxley Court. The national colors were used in the decorations, a feature of which was balloons and airplanes. The latter were used also for a novel contest in which the guests took part. Music and games occupied most of the evening, during which refreshments were served by the hostess. The guests of the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stoker, Mr. and Mrs. H. Schilling, Misses Hazel Johnson, Jean Everett, Grace Goslee, Jean and Doris Stoker and Esther Hargrave, also Messrs. J. Metter, Ross, John Tyler, Thomas Hargrave and Alfred Everett.

Dr. and Mrs. F. A. Speik, 1625 Fair Oaks avenue, entertained about forty-five guests on Sunday afternoon at their home. They were members of the Southern California Alumni Association of the University of Chicago. Capt. Perigord of Pasadena was a special guest of the occasion and gave a very instructive talk on "The Part America is to Play in the International Political Situation." A very pleasant part of the afternoon's program was the singing of the various national hymns. The hostess served a very delicious buffet luncheon.

An affair of great interest to the younger society folk of South Pasadena this week was the wedding of Miss Bessie Pickle of 1427 Bank street to Lieut. Glen Aron of 1305 Court avenue. The ceremony took place at the Lake-avenue Methodist Church of Pasadena at 4 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. The sacred edifice was tastefully decorated in pink and white. The costumes of the bridal party were in pastel shades. Rev. E. A. Waldo of the local Congregational Church was the officiating clergyman and was assisted by the Rev. Isaac Meserve of Los Angeles. The bride was attended by Mrs. E. W. Pickle as matron of honor and Miss Helen Blattner as maid of honor. Little Charlotte Oakes of Decatur, Ill., who came here for the wedding, acted as flower girl as ring her brother James served as ring bearer. Beatrice Kipp, Ruth Winegard, Alice Stockwell, Rena McCoy, Florence Smith, Margaret Aron and Margaret Brinckerhoff were bridesmaids. Lieut. Aron was attended by Wallace Weldon as best man. Donald Daggett, Ralph Lockwood, Elbert Winegard, Kenneth Shaw, Bruce Spencer, Seymour Thomas and Clement Meserve were the ushers. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Earl W. Pickle of Monrovia. After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Stephen B. Dennis, 1427 Bank street.

MONROVIA.

Mrs. W. G. Davison of North Myrtle avenue will spend two weeks in San Diego with her daughter, Mrs. R. T. Cremer, who resides in the southern city. Mrs. Davison left for San Diego on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jewell have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Farmer, who motored down from their home in Fresno. Mrs. Farmer is a sister of Mrs. Jewell, and the latter will return with the Farmers for a visit at their home.

After an enjoyable three weeks' visit in Fresno and Exeter, Mrs. H. E. Pollard is again at her home on North Magnolia avenue. She was accompanied home by her small grandson, Edward Pollard.

F. E. Kenaston and Mrs. Kenaston, after wintering at their home on North Canyon Drive, left on Sunday for Minneapolis, where they will spend the summer months, returning to their winter home in this city in the fall.

Alfred Hamer of Hammond, Ill., left on Saturday for his home, after spending the winter at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Painter of West White Oak avenue.

Leonard Dolde, government revenue auditor, returned to San Francisco, Portland and Seattle, after a week's visit with his family at their home on East Orange avenue.

Mrs. W. G. Dunlap of Huntington Drive has as her house guest her sister, Mrs. M. Louise Meunsterman of Springville, Iowa. She will spend the summer with her sister.

Mrs. O. C. Hanna of South California avenue left several weeks ago, accompanied by her little daughters, Ethel and Olive, for a visit with her aunt for the summer at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Can. Mrs. Hanna expects later to make a sea voyage to Belfast, Ireland, where her father has been living for many years. It will prove a great reunion when she is with him, as it has been several years since they have seen each other.

In celebration of the second birthday anniversary of their little grand-daughter, Evelyn White, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Boyce entertained with a delightful party on Sunday. The home was prettily decorated with spring flowers. Refreshments prepared in old English style were served with a birthday cake with two candles forming the centerpiece. Forty guests were present for the affair. Mr. and Mrs. White and daughter make their home in Garvanza.

Members of the Octo Club were charmingly entertained on Friday afternoon by Mrs. J. W. Bailey at her home on Melrose avenue. Scotch broom and larkspurs were used for decorations, the general color scheme being blue and yellow. Auction bridge furnished amusement for the afternoon, Mrs. William Hilts winning the club prize, and Mrs. Arthur Evans receiving the guest prize. At the close of the game dainty refreshments were served. Members of the club who were present were: Mrs. Claude S. Chess, Mrs. Hugh Gibson Marshall, Mrs. William Hilts, Miss Laura Newcomb, Miss Grace Worthen, Miss Helen Reed, Miss Edna Chess and Miss Anna Crews. Special guests of the

He paid a high tribute to the purity and nobility of women of the present generation.

A special birthday table was prepared for Mrs. Julian Phelps, a charter and honorary member, celebrating her eighty-second birthday.

The regular afternoon meeting was devoted to "Our Own Club" members, with Mrs. John F. Mead, second vice-president, in the chair. In the drama section, Ibsen's "Ghosts" will be discussed and readings from the play will be given by Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith, instructor.

One of the biggest audiences of the club year greeted the daughters of Mrs. C. M. Bowler last week. Miss Phoebe gave an original planologue that brought forth a storm of applause. Miss Gertrude Haserot gave a Russian dance, her sister, Miss Olive, being her accompanist. "The Songs My Mother Used to Sing" and "I Love You" were pleasingly given by Miss Helena Heller, with Mrs. S. R. Trengrove at the piano. "Do You Ever Think of Me?" "Ohio" and "Some Little Bird" were given as trios by Kenyon Trengrove and Cassatt Griffith on saxophones and Al Wright on the tuba in "Ohio" and on the piano in the other two. The "Song of the Water Sprite" and "Gypsy Dance" were given as piano solos by Miss Harriet Laughlin, and Miss Helena Heller closed the program by singing "A Perfect Day."

The June meeting of the Women's University Club, to be held at the Ebell clubhouse on June 4, might well be termed "Los Angeles day," for the entire program is to be presented by local speakers and artists of note.

At luncheon the club will have the privilege of hearing Alma Whitaker, who is well known to all through her long affiliation with The Times club and editorial pages.

Of great interest to club members will be the long-anticipated report of Miss Gertrude Brainerd, the club's representative at the recent Washington convention of university women, where the Southern Association of College Women united with the National Association of Collegiate Alumnae, which organization is now termed the American Association of University Women.

"At the Pool" Ebell Club episode

Featured in Homeland Exhibit and in Yosemite Pageant.

Those in the Ebell episode, which was presented as a unit of the pageant, "California, the Land of Dreams," at the convention of the California Federation of Women's Clubs in the Yosemite Valley last week, are, standing, left to right, Patty Smith and Dorothy Catlin. The third figure is that of Diana Alden. The other pictures were taken at the Homeland Exhibit of Arts and Crafts at Exposition Park.

ART EXHIBIT IS SURPRISE.

Display of Work of Foreign-born Shows Flashes of Hidden Genius.

The foreign arts and crafts exhibit, conducted in the art gallery at Exposition Park under the auspices of the Americanization department of the Los Angeles District of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, has been a surprise even to those club women who have been closely in touch with cultural movements in this section and throughout the nation. To club members and citizens who have not made a special study of the artistic assets of this or any other community, it has been nothing short of a revelation.

What started out as a sincere and praiseworthy effort to establish more cordial relations between all elements of the population of Los Angeles by appealing through the love of the beautiful in all races has developed into the uncovering of real art treasures.

The citizens of foreign extraction have not only shown that they want to be friendly and to meet all members of the community half way, but they have shown the community works of art which compare favorably with the very finest articles which have been produced here by better known artists or which have been imported from distant studios.

GREAT AWAKENING.

Thousands of people who have been too prone to take a condescending attitude toward unheralded foreigners in our midst and who have been much too sheep-like in their admiration for the foreigners who have come to our shores after elaborate press-agenting, now have an entirely new conception of local citizens of foreign extraction.

Paintings, statuary, textiles and art forms of almost every conceivable type have been gathered in the exhibition room, and that they are of high quality and are drawn from an abundance of similar treasures is shown by the fact that in the room beneath that in which the articles are on display is another and larger room, which is packed with other excellent offerings which were rejected for lack of space or because those which have been given space were adjudged to be a trifle better than those which were held in reserve.

The foreign element of the community has not exhausted its supplies of the beautiful at all, but the committee on selection has simply tapped those supplies and selected from them.

VARIED EXHIBITS.

The exhibits vary widely, some being subtle and frail, others rugged or even brutal in presentation, still others whimsical or delightfully humorous. They possess one trait in common, however—they possess exceptional merit. They reflect the work of real artists. It might not be going too far to say that several of the pieces, notably the sculpture of Pedretti and the paintings of Orselli, have in them the stamp of real genius.

To create is magnificent, but to discover is also to contribute to the general welfare and happiness. In discovering these artists and making their works available to the community until June 13, the federation has rendered a great service by quickening a widespread appreciation of the talent of the foreigners in this city and by fostering that spirit of mutual understanding which is engendered among those of all races who come together out of a common appreciation of that which is artistic and worth while.

Among those who have helped to make the exhibit a success are:

Mrs. Sidney Thomas Exley, president; Mrs. Frank A. Gibson, honorary chairman; Mrs. John C. Urquhart, Americanization chairman; Mrs. Clara Vostrovsky Winlow, foreign extension department, Los Angeles Public Library; Miss Alma May Cook, chairman of Art; Mrs. A. R. Gates, chairman of music; Miss Florence Ringle, chairman of education; Mrs. J. H. Morford, chairman of press; Mrs. Frances Harmon Zahn, chairman of materials; Miss Celia Gleason, Los Angeles County Library; Miss Elsie Newton, International Institute, and Miss Mary Workman, Catholic Woman's Club, Americanization committee.

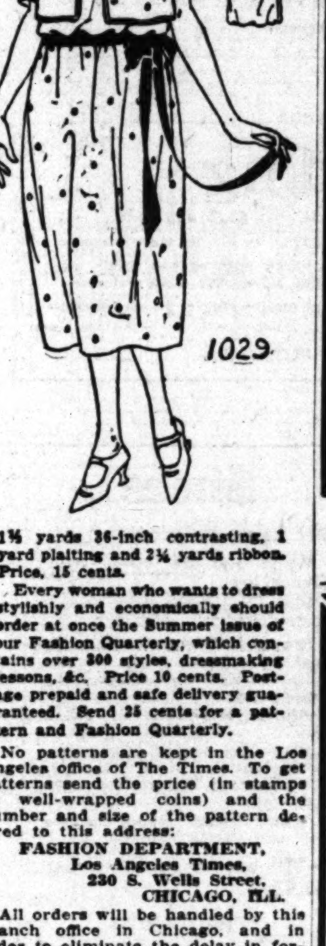
LADIES' AND MISSES' DRESSES.

Soft materials like crepe de Chine or Canton crepe are suggested for this type of dress. A sleeveless underwaist blouse over a ribbon sash and when a bolero jacket is worn with it, the effect is most becoming.

The ladies' and misses' dress, No. 1029, is cut in sizes 16 years, 36, 38 and 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards 36-inch or 3⅛ yards 44-inch material, with 1⅝ yards 36-inch contrasting, 1 yard plaiting and 2¼ yards ribbon. Price, 15 cents.



Every woman who wants to dress stylishly and economically should order at once the Summer issue of our Fashion Quarterly, which contains over 300 styles, dressmaking lessons, &c. Price 10 cents. Postage prepaid and safe delivery guaranteed. Send 25 cents for a pattern and Fashion Quarterly.

No patterns are kept in the Los Angeles office of The Times. To get patterns send the price (in stamps or well-wrapped coins) and the number and size of the pattern desired to this address:

Bake More Cookies and Fewer Cakes.

A cookie is not as delicious as a slice of cake when eaten by itself. But a cookie is every bit as good as a slice of cake when eaten with a dish of fresh or stewed fruit.

What could be more delicious than one of the following combinations; a cookie and sweetened strawberries, a cookie and sweetened stewed rhubarb; a cookie and stewed prunes; a cookie and apple sauce which has been sweetened and flavored with cinnamon; a cookie with sliced and sweetened bananas and oranges?

The housekeeper should take this fact into consideration and serve cookie-and-fruit desserts rather than more elaborate cakes and puddings, now that the warmer months will bring her fresh fruits of all kinds. And what a rest it will be not to have to frost and fill layer cakes. Also what an economy.

But what kinds of cookie shall she serve? I would advise her to make her choice from the ranks of the drop-cookie. Drop-cookies take a shorter time to make than rolled cookies and are equally as delicious. Try some of the following:

Ginger drop cookie: Put into a mixing bowl 1 cup light brown sugar; stir in 2-3 cup of granulated sugar, ½ cup cold water, 1 beaten egg, 2-3 cup molasses, 1 large tablespoon ginger, and 1 heaping teaspoon soda which has been sifted with 3½ cups of flour. This will make a stiff batter. Drop on buttered pans by heaping teaspoonfuls one inch apart, and bake in a hot oven for about ten minutes. This recipe makes two dozen and a half large cookies.

Peanut drop cookies: Cream together 1-4 cup of butter and ½ cup of sugar; add 2 beaten eggs, 1 cup flour which has been sifted with 1 teaspoon baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt, and last add ¾ cup of shelled roasted peanuts which have been rather coarsely chopped. Mix well and bake on a buttered cookie sheet for about twenty minutes in a medium oven. This recipe makes two dozen cookies. It should be dropped by teaspoonfuls on the pan, one inch apart.

Fruit drop cookies: Cream together ½ cup butter and ¾ cup sugar; add 1 beaten egg, 1-4 teaspoon soda dissolved in 3 tablespoons sweet milk, and 1 1-4 cups of flour which have been sifted with ¼ teaspoon each of ground cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg. Mix well, then stir in ½ cup of seeded raisins and 1-4 cup of dried currants both of which have been put through a food chopper. This will make a very stiff batter. Put on a buttered pan in one-half teaspoonfuls and bake for twenty minutes in a slow

PLACENTIA.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Staley of Placentia avenue left recently for San Francisco for a summer's vacation trip. They sailed on Wednesday for the Hawaiian Islands, where they will visit the many points of interest at that delightful summer land, before returning to California to spend the remainder of their vacation.

Placentia was very well represented at the Orange Show at Anaheim during the week. Mr. Thomas McFadden and Mr. C. C. Chapman of this city were the helm of things in general, and ably responded to the expectations of their townspeople.

Mr. B. O. Baxter, an old resident of this district, but at present residing at Beaumont, was visiting friends in this city last week. Mr. Baxter has large property interests here and at San Pedro.

Mr. Charles Thamer, Mrs. F. M. Dowling, Mrs. Arthur Mann and Mrs. J. E. Scott composed a vocal quartet that delighted the members of the Round Table at the clubhouse Wednesday. Miss Nina McCleland pleased with a piano solo and Miss Ada Sturdevant gave a fine demonstration of zither music, accompanied by a group of old songs. Mrs. T. L. McFadden thanked the members for their loyal support during the term, after which the hostesses, Mrs. W. McFarland and Mrs. W. Blattner, served delicious tea and cake.

TERRA BELLA.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Alys Bergen and Horace Furnas the first part of June.

Miss Hazel Palmer of Los Angeles is the guest of her brother, William Palmer.

Saturday evening Mrs. Jessup entertained the live wire class of the Presbyterian Sunday-school, the occasion being the semiannual election of officers. The young ladies of the class served a bounteous banquet, Arthur Flint being toastmaster of the evening. Several musical numbers were given during the evening.

Mrs. Billy Lowery was hostess to the Tri-K's Wednesday afternoon at a baseball game, after which they returned to the home of the hostess, who served refreshments.

Strathmore Town and Country Club gave the comedy "Assisted by Sadie" Thursday evening at the high school auditorium, which was bright and snappy on the whole. The stage settings and costumes were remarkable. Musical numbers were given during the evening, and refreshments were served in the clubrooms.

VISALIA.

Clarence Dineley was host at a week-end party at his ranch home, Rosa del Rio, near Hammond, having arranged an extremely enticing program for his guests. Saturday evening an informal dinner was followed by dancing at Three Rivers. There were a number of guests to enjoy his hospitality.

Mrs. C. M. Burnett entertained the Monday Night Club, whicih is playing the last of a series of bridge games for the season. Refreshments were served by the hostess at the conclusion of the evening.

Mrs. John Dant was hostess at the Entre Nous Club Monday evening at her home on South Bridge street. Sewing baskets were centers of attractions during the early evening, after which refreshments were served.

Mrs. Beryl Stone of Fresno, who has come to Visalia to make her home, was the incentive Friday afternoon of a bridge party given by Mrs. R. E. Perkins. Mrs. L. Lawrence won high score, and refreshments were served by the hostess to conclude the affair.

Edwards, J. M. Basher, E. B. Ridgely, Frank Jackson, R. C. Burner, Fred Linstrew and E. L. Brewer.

One of the smart affairs of recent date was the card party presided over by Miss Irma Moore at her home in this city. Those who enjoyed the hospitality of Miss Moore were a group of young matrons and friends of the hostess. The home was prettily decorated with fragrant spring flowers used about the rooms in an attractive arrangement. Prizes at cards were won by Miss Helen Hoagland, who was given first prize after tying for it with Miss Anne Crews, and Miss Claire Zinsley, who was awarded the consolation prize. A dainty supper followed cards. About thirty guests accepted the invitation of Miss Moore.

Illustrating Bullock's Wool Jersey Suits at $18.75.

The People and Their Daily Troubles

DOROTHY DIX TALKS

Gossip.

BY DOROTHY DIX.

A young woman writes me that the other women in her set talk about her because she plays around a bit with other men than her husband, and she wants to know if I don't think that gossiping is one of the seven deadly sins.

Not at all. Far from it. I think that there is no other one force in the world that makes so much for righteousness, as gossiping. The old tabby cats who sit rocking on hotel verandas, and who lie in perpetual ambush behind their starched window curtains at home, and see everything that goes on and tell it, may not look like guardian angels of the public morals, but they are.

"They say" keeps more people walking the straight and narrow way than all the ten commandments. For the thing that we dread most, and fear most, is our neighbor's opinion. The thought of forming the subject of discussion and having our little weaknesses vivisected at the sewing circle, or the tea party, or the club, is something that turns our very bones to water.

It is the knowledge that she will be gossiped about that makes many a flighty young girl watch her step. It is the certainty that Mrs. Jones across the street, and Mrs. Smith next door, will foregather and discuss the way she neglects her baby to go automobiling with a man who doesn't look like her brother that prevents many a silly young wife from indulging in a stolen bite of romance now and then.

It is the knowledge that the neighbors keep tab on the hour he comes home that makes many a man punch the domestic time clock promptly. It's the fear of what his business friends will say that keeps many a man from taking his pretty stenographer out to lunch.

It is easy to drug conscience into a state of coma. It's no trick at all to invent excuses to ourselves for whatever we want to do, and to justify ourselves to ourselves by saying that where no harm is intended, none is done. But nobody has ever found any way to head off gossip.

It has a thousand eyes that never close in sleep and a perpetual-motion tongue that never stops wagging. Nor is it concerned with our motives. It only takes heed of our acts, and it puts its own construction on them.

A girl may be really pure as ice and chaste as snow, but if she permits familiarities from men, and has a loud, bold manner, she will be talked about in a manner that would raise the hair on her head if she heard what was said about her. A married woman may be virtuous as Caesar's wife, but she cannot escape calumny if she engages in flirtations with young men. A business man may really be feeding the hungry when he takes chorus girls out to supper, and he may actually be seeing out-of-town customers until 2 o'clock in the morning, but his friends, who take note of his risings up and sittings down, smile with their tongues in their cheeks when his name leads all the rest at a gab fest.

Everybody knows this, and they know that there is no more a way of escaping gossip than there is of evading death and taxes. They likewise know that there is no way that you can fight back at gossip, or disprove it, or explain yourself to it, because it is intangible.

"They say," is like a deadly miasma that rises up from the very earth, and slays its victim with a slow and insidious poison. And the only remedy for it is prevention. Once let it touch a person, and he or she can never be entirely whole and clean again.

Of course, there are plenty of cases where gossip works terrible harm. Undoubtedly, wrong interpretations are put on innocent deeds, and scandalmongers blacken characters beyond justification. There are plenty of women who do things that seem wicked that are merely indiscreet, and there are thousands of men who are more fools than villains, but even with these unfortunate sacrifices to slanderous tongues, gossip still does more good than harm, because it makes all but idiots give a thought to their conduct and avoid even the appearance of evil. And to so live as to furnish no food for slander is a pretty safe chart to steer by.

It is the custom to castigate the gossiper, and to hold up as a model the three monkeys with their hands before their eyes, and their ears, and their mouths, who refused to see any evil, or hear any evil, or to speak any evil of their fellow-creatures.

But why should we expect the general public to have more regard for our reputations than we have for them ourselves? Why should we expect other people to be more careful of our good names than we are? Why should we demand that our friends and neighbors should keep silent about the weaknesses we flaunt in their faces?

If we do not want to be talked about we should not do things we are ashamed to have discussed. It is only when people are doing things that are wrong, or that lean to the evil side, that they object to being talked about. When they are doing fine things, and right things, the more that people have to say about them, the better they like it. The chorus of praise can never swell too loud. It is only when we are being blamed that we want to put the soft pedal on.

When the old ladies on the hotel veranda at the summer resort look up from their knitting and say, "Isn't that Mary Smith the prettiest, sweetest, most modest young girl you have seen in an age?" Mary Smith doesn't want to stop them; but when they say, "Isn't that Mary Smith the most painted-up, brazen-faced creature you ever saw, and did you know that she sat out in a dark corner until 2 o'clock with a married man?" Mary Smith calls them gossips.

And if Mary Smith doesn't want to be gossiped about, all she has to do is to behave herself. Generally the fear of gossip does make her behave herself. That is what makes gossip so valuable. It's the policeman's club that keeps the world in order.

Making More Money.

Woman Worker Substitutes Lighthouse-keeping for Light House-keeping and Makes of It Labor of Love.

"YES, I suppose that most women would consider it lonesome, uninteresting and monotonous, but to me it is the most delightful life imaginable. The sea, the ships, the constantly changing whims of the sky and water, all these combine to make a vista as entertaining as the most wonderful picture-film. And when you remember that I get paid for work that I love is it any wonder that I have remained at the Robin's Reef lighthouse for the last thirty years? It may be an unusual way to make money, but it certainly is a most pleasant one."

This is the reaction of Mrs. Kate Walker, guardianess of a lighthouse two miles off Staten Island, New York, and one of the few women in the world solely responsible for the upkeep of a station of this size. The first fifteen years of Mrs. Walker's married life were passed at the Sandy Hook lighthouse and, when her husband died shortly after they moved to the Robin's Reef light, Mrs. Walker made up her mind to carry on his work there with the sole aid of her fifteen-year-old son.

Marketing, of course, was something of a problem, for some one had to go to Staten Island and bring the provisions back in an open boat—and there were times when stormy seas prevented the trip being made for two weeks or more. But the lure of the sea and the sense of responsibility which came from the guardianship of the light overcame the discomforts of the life, and the passing of the years found Mrs. Walker less and less inclined to leave her lonely home—even after her son had married and her grandchildren came out to visit her. As she says, "Lighthouse-keeping may not be as comfortable as light house-keeping, but there some places where it has its advantages, and one of them is in the financial returns which one receives for it."

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

From the Ignoramus.

LOS ANGELES, May 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have read with pleasure the courteous letter of Kate C. Gantz, who calls me an "unknown ignoramus" in light of my recent letter to The Times on the political doings of Mr. Upton Sinclair. It is the 'known ignoramus" that most concerns me in this delightful correspondence.

I admit with a blush I am a simple man, and my sentences are not comparable to the well-rounded and intricate ones of which Miss or Mistress Gantz's letter is comprised. Indeed, I had known Mr. Sinclair and his wife were devoting "every minute of their lives to the cause of freedom of the masses;" otherwise I should have dipped my pen in arsenic instead of caustic. By heavens, I thought it was an avocation of theirs!

I have great admiration for the anarchist with the bomb, whose sensations I can appreciate fully, so long as I am not near by when he explodes his humanitarian machine. My point is this: There may be some excuse for the man of mean origin and parts, whose head becomes addled by socialistic cant whilst he is struggling with life. But radicalism in Mr. Upton Sinclair and his kind is mere peryersion, for they have neither seen nor suffered; and seeing and suffering still should not be excused for they are incapable of feeling as normal men. I hope this is clear.

I really admire very much Miss of Mistress Gantz's rally to the cause of "social justice" as we find it boiled down in Mr. Upton Sinclair. By it she evinces a commendable goodness of heart, as well for her favorite novelist-reformer as for the proletariat of the Pasadena bungalow sort in general.

JOHN McGREGOR.

Blood is Boiling.

LOS ANGELES, May 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] My blood is just about at the boiling point this morning, after reading the contemptible slur, written by one ashamed to sign his name, against the boys who fought in the war. I do not know any of the facts of the fight at Carpinteria, but in any event, I have an idea the American Legion will be able to take care of it. But such an article was entirely uncalled for and judging from the name employed by the writer, he evidently is in sympathy with all the thugs and dynamiters of the anarchistic element of the country.

If I were a man and knew who it was, I should certainly wipe up the earth with him, and I should think every father and mother in the country would want to smite him with all the strength they have. Personally, I had no sons in the war, but I lost an adored daughter as a direct result of the war, and after witnessing some of the suffering the boys are going through now, I should never be guilty of casting any public slur upon them no matter what I thought. I have not assisted at any teas for the boys, but I have tried in a small way to make life a little brighter for a few of them. I can relate a little incident that will show you just what their medals get for them. A week ago a boy, whose back was broken and whose heart is permanently affected, came in from an outside hospital to get some sort of a harness made for his spine—he is on crutches and at Fourth and Main he had a bad heart attack, and sank down in a doorway till he recovered. He is a fine looking and well dressed boy, but all that time, not one person spoke to him or offered to help him. He told me he supposed they just took it for granted he was drunk. Is it not strange that not even an officer should have noticed him? This boy has the Congressional Medal, and is about to receive the Carnegie Medal, but what good are they when he is prostrated? I saw the boy myself go through one of these ghastly heart attacks and it certainly tears one's heart, yet he is cheerful and optimistic and hates to trouble anyone with his illness. I am sure if the coward who wrote you that letter ever witnessed any real suffering he would not have the heart to speak of the boys in any such manner. But perhaps God forgot to give him ay such organ as a heart.

ALTHEA RAYMOND.

Taxpayers and the Library.

LOS ANGELES, May 24.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Replying to my recently published letter, Mr. Alfred Brown says this: "No statement of mine ever suggested that the library be operated for the major, if not exclusive, benefit of the more fortunate part of the population, the taxpayers." Let us see about that. In Mr. Brown's first letter, he argued against any present expenditure for a library building. One of the grounds given was that the library is largely used by the impecunious. "Those visiting the Public Library," he wrote, "are well aware that it is occupied and used largely by that element neither taxpayers nor financially of value to the city." In his second letter, in answer to Miss Shannon, he repeated this statement, and apparently made it the exclusive ground for his objection to any present expenditure for a library building. "The point I made," he wrote, "was that the Public Library 'occupied and used largely by that element neither taxpayers or of financial value to the city.'"

I do not see how this language is capable of any other construction than what I gave it. His argument about 147,544 cardholders was obscure, and on this matter I confessed my uncertainty as to his meaning. But on the other matter his words were about as plain as he could have made them.

W. J. GHENT.

Smeller Out of Order.

LOS ANGELES May 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I read with more than passing interest the account in Sunday's Times, of its reporters' slumming in the heart of your great city. To a man up a tree it looks awfully funny that the city administration cannot detect the awful stench right under the official proboscis. From Mayor Snyder to official bootblack, Signor Coritelli, this malodorous effluvia floating up from Spring and Third couldn't be detected by the official olfactories, while The Times was compelled to stuff cotton up its nostrils to live, even for a few minutes, in the polluted ozone.

One wonders if these officials were not raised in a tan-yard or slaughter house to be impervious to the awful stench.

I have just arrived in your city from Fresno, where the official atmosphere is none too pure, yet I am surprised and pained (though probably it is none of my business, as I am not a citizen yet, though I intend to be) to see so much violation of law and decency.

So far as I have been able to discover, your Mayor is personally a very estimable citizen, and of course his official family is composed of excellent men, but it does beat "I" why they don't grab a two-year-old club and wade into these "deboshees' of public morals. Certainly this sort of limelight is not desirable, and is not a magnet to draw to your great city the best element you need to build your homes.

THE CALIFORNIA COMPANY IN "MIKADO" AT MASON THIS WEEK.

Lovers of the immortal Gilbert and Sullivan operas will have opportunity to hear the most popular one of them all, "The Mikado," at the Mason this week.

Opening with a special Memorial Day matinee tomorrow, and with several new and distinguished artists in the cast, this tuneful composition will have nine performances, and, following the close of the two weeks' engagement, the singers will visit San Diego, appearing at the Spreckles Theater for one week.

After visiting the southern city the organization will be heard in a few of Los Angeles' neighboring points, and then a four to six weeks' summer season of light opera, beginning July 4, will entertain Los Angeles' opera devotees at the local playhouse.

William G. Stewart, managing director of the California Opera Company, has in preparation the operas "Carmen," "Fra Diavolo" and others, and will shortly announce the repertoire for the summer months. It is planned to produce an especially attractive work during the week of the Elks' convention.

Later on, also, Mr. Stewart proposes to stage the opera "Ruddigore," which is a sort of refined burlesque on melodrama. This work more than any of the G. and S. group, is one which lends itself to elaborate scenery and magnificent costumes. It scored a tremendous success in New York last season, enjoying a longer run than any other light opera work sung in the metropolis in a long time.

To Mr. Stewart, great credit for the formation of the California Oprea splendidly imagined and prudently devised, should be given. Always he has held in mind the need to bring good music to the people. He has no misgivings as to their ability and their desire to appreciate and cherish real music, great singing and splendid melodic drama, if these are placed within their reach. Mr Stewart has in mind, also, the need and the opportunity for the development and encouragement of truly American music, of native American artists, and, perhaps, most of all, of native American composers. He has proved himself a practician as well as a poet in his relation to musical affairs in this country.

"The Mikado" this week will bring forward several voices in the principality of the organization not yet heard. These include Basil Ruysdael, the basso; Russ Powell, basso; Laurence Bowes, tenor; Naomi Hall and Sybil Stone.

Special preparations for a fine production of the opera have been made, and the cast will be as follows:

Mikado	Russ Powell, Philip Ryder
Poo Bah	Basil Ruysdael
Pish Tush	Lawrence Tibbit
Nanki Poo	John Westervelt, Laurence Bowes
Yum Yum	Irene Pavloska
Pitti Sing	Suzanne Keith, Sybil Bacon
Katisha	Marie Horgan
Peep Bo	Sybil Stone, Naomi Hall
Umbrella Bearer	Rolfe Sedan

Hans S. Linne will conduct.

THE THREE ROLES.

With the ancient lore of California as back ground, and with Bert Lytell playing three roles—viz, son, father and grandfather—it looks as though "Junk," the Kenneth Harris story, which Metro is to film, will prove one of the most beautiful and interesting, as well as one of the most unique pictures of the year. It will be a Maxwell Karger production.

That an unusual feature will result is further assured by the fact that the author himself, now in Pasadena, will be on the ground to assist. June Mathis, whose remarkable scenario of "The Four Horsemen" aided so materially in the success of Rex Ingram's great film version of the Ibanez story, will write the script.

The picture will be filmed on the locations named by the author in his original, which was recently published in the Saturday Evening Post. Incidentally Lytell will be given one of the most exacting and fascinating opportunities of his picture career, through his appearance in three characters.

The story was selected for him largely because of its wealth of picturable lore and the opportunities it offered for the sort of portrayal that already gives Mr. Lytell prominence.

Virginia Valli, the youthful leading lady, who assumed so important a part in "A Trip to Paradise," filming of which is about concluded, will have the principal feminine lead. Other members of the support are being carefully selected by Mr. Karger.

A lavish production, including the erection of buildings used in the picture, which once were picturesque features of the California landscape, will be given, with no pains spared to make the picture beautiful and authentic historically.

TAYLOR GOING ABROAD.

First-hand information on the film situation in Germany and other European countries will be obtained by William D. Taylor, motion-picture director and World War veteran, who has booked passage on the Mauretania June 9. He is about to leave the hospital, where he underwent a minor operation recently. Primarily Mr. Taylor is making the voyage at the recommendation of his physicians, but he will combine service with convalescence. He denies that he is vacationing, or that he will make a picture at the London Lasky studios. He will remain abroad four weeks.

PLAYCRAFTERS' MEETING.

The regular meeting of the Playcrafters will be held Monday evening in the Fay Building. The offerings for the evening will be from the pens of C. A. Menges and J. C. Nicholson, the former author of a three-act play, "The Message from Mars." The latter has written an original one-acter, entitled "The Wreck."

FAY BAINTER TO VISIT.

If all goes well, Fay Bainter, star of "East is West," will appear in this city in that play next fall, negotiations to that end being now under way. This being Miss Bainter's home, in case she comes West, she will visit her family here. At present she is looking forward to a summer in London, as she sails for England tomorrow.

GASTON GLASS WITH METRO.

Gaston Glass, the youthful player who made a decided hit in "Humoresque," has been selected to head Viola Dana's supporting company in her next Metro starring picture. This will be a Bayard Veiller special production, based on a drama by Frank R. Adams.

BITS OF VERSE.

The Dawn.

I stood upon a street at break of day,
When first the rays of sunlight pierced the clouds
And banished frosts and mists of night away
And with them all the fears that night enshrouds.

I saw the city's buildings lift their heads,
To stand once more four square beside the spires,
And men who last night crawled half-heartedly to bed
Now hurried forth with hope's rekindled fires.

The mighty clouds that fain would linger on
The chilling winds that sought to hurt and freeze,
Now faded into nothingness at dawn,
I marveled that we'd given heed to these.

While through the air a thought of newness came.
New strength and vim, with joy to breast the fray.
'This was God's gift, to every one the same,
The greatest of all gifts—a new-born day.

A Philanthropist.

The lavish moon smiled down on every brook
And lent her loveliness to each lagoon;
Glowing at midnight like a rose at noon,
In lustrous beauty she forgot to look
On no least hidden and enchanted nook
Which lovers made their own. She bent to peep
Wherever fragrant gardens lay asleep,
And shim'ring silver on their petals shook.

Then, chatting with the clouds, she drifted down
The sky, where stars, like blossoms gay with bloom.
Lighted her way into a weary town
So dark with grime her rays scarce pierced the gloom—
And here she dropped a dower of sparkling beams
That all the children might have happy dreams.

The Shepherdess.

She walks—the lady of my delight—
A shepherdess of sheep.
Her flocks are thoughts. She keeps them white;
She guards them from the steep.
She feeds them on the fragrant height,
And folds them in for sleep.

She roams maternal hills and bright.
Dark valleys safe and deep.
Into that tender breast at night
The chastest stars my peep.
She walks—the lady of my delight—
A shepherdess of sheep.

She holds her little thoughts in sight,
Though gay they run and leap.
She is so circumspect and right;
She has her soul to keep.
She walks—the lady of my delight—
A shepherdess of sheep.

The Heavy Load.

He gave up hours to studious toil;
He studied early, studied late.
He spent a lot of midnight oil,
For he would fain be up to date.
He conned the Freudian theory
And then looked into Bolshevism;
Then tackled relativity
And what was new in spiritism.

But somehow as the seasons passed
He seemed to fail of happiness;
amassed.
His joy in life was growing less
So now he leaves unto the sage
The things he once was centered in—
He's right back to the sporting page
And grins the broadest sort of grin!

MORENO'S "COOTIE" CAR.

Antonio Moreno has donated his pet speedster to the actors' fund benefit. The diminutive flivver, containing a motorcycle engine attracted considerable attention when Moreno imported it from San Francisco. The star declared he would use it as a convenience against the no-parking laws, as it is possible to park the cootie roadster in a shop window while making purchases or having a shave. The car will be displayed in a downtown window until the day of the pageant, when Moreno will take it out to enter the race against Fatty Arubuckle.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

In times of catastrophe and in times of quiet alike the Legion stands ready to lend a helping hand in its community, as is evidenced by reports from widely separated sections. Volunteers from Legion posts in Texas and Arkansas shared with the Red Cross the task of relief work in the areas ravaged by the recent tornado. The Legion assisted in recovering bodies of the 100 persons who were killed, helped provide temporary shelter for homeless refugees and pitched in to clear away the debris.

Picks and shovels again are in Legion hands, not in a storm-swept area this time, but in peaceful Clifton Forge, Va., where Williams Post has arranged to help the city build a $10,000 playground. The post recently challenged all comers to meet its pick and shovel team of twenty men in a contest to see who could dig the new swimming pool the fastest. Local business men accepted the challenge, although without great hope that they would be able to defeat the men who learned the use of intrenching tools under Uncle Sam.

From Kansas City, Mo., and Eunice, La., have come tales of Legion prowess in community spring cleaning. Legion posts in Kansas City were well to the front in a gigantic municipal mopping-up, while Eunice was made into Spotless Town under the supervision of the local post, which provided wagons and fatigue details for the collection and hauling of rubbish. The town authorities accorded the Legion a vote of thanks as the last wagon rattled back into the stable.—[American Legion Weekly.

A permanent standing army, composed of the older members of the Boy Scouts of America has offered its services to Brooklyn Park Commissioner John N. Harman in what will be a season-long campaign to preserve the Brooklyn parks.

This offer was said to be the most constructive of any received by the commissioner in the park department's "save our parks week." The co-operation of the boys opened an avenue for a permanent campaign against thoughtlessness and vandalism in Brooklyn's public recreational spaces. Two hundred boys, of the ages of 16 and 17, are policing Prospect Park. Commissioner Harman is in personal charge of their operations, which just fall short of the handing out of summons. Their activities are confined largely to warning boys and girls tempted to disregard "keep off" signs or bent upon pilfering plants and breaking branches from trees.

Albania is one of the most primitive countries in Europe in point of modern civilization and it is in that country that the school girls and school boys of America, through the Junior Red Cross, are doing a most interesting piece of work. A trade school is being set up in Tirana, the largest city in the country, and this vocational school will be the training center for future school-teachers who will endeavor to revive interest in education which has been permitted to slumber through a long period of years, due to wars and Turkish rule.

PIERRE KEY'S Music Article

BY PIERRE V. R. KEY.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Rochester, N. Y., seems to be getting pretty regularly into print. From a musical standpoint there appears abundant justification, as was shown by the recent convention held there by the New York State Federation of Music Clubs. Three days of lively times, with an election which places in power progressive women pledged to a campaign which should accomplish enough during the ensuing year to put this State federation nearer to those which lead it, now, in point of achievement. It seems odd that the Empire State should have to take a back seat in any constructive effort, yet that is what has happened ever since New York's music clubs' federation was formed two years ago. There was plenty of idealism, but not enough activity of the sort which gets things done.

Henceforth—for two years, at any rate—those music clubs which are a part of the New York State federation will be co-operating as they never have before. President Mrs. Frank L. Henderson declares she is to go personally into the field, leading her army of co-workers. She will have district presidents, and combined they will make a drive in organizing junior clubs of boys and girls under 21. It is the purpose to pay special attention to educational features.

Justice Charles L. Guy of the Supreme Court of the State of New York is a director of the New York State federation, and associated with him are Mme. Edna Marione and Miss Edna West of New York, Miss Harriet G. Fitch of Syracuse and Mrs. Edgar J. Rose of Rochester. Mrs. R. C. Grant of Rochester, Miss Yvonne De Treville of New York City and Miss Teresa Maier of Troy are the vice-presidents, while Mrs. H. L. Vibbard of Syracuse is treasurer.

WOMEN KEENLY ALERT.

Our women who are taking an active part in music clubs are becoming keenly alert. They have always been interested in their work, but not until very recent times have they appeared to grasp so completely a comprehensive understanding of how their tasks might best be advanced, and just how broadly they should be extended.

We saw evidences of all this in Rochester. The delegates and alternates from the various member clubs of New York's federation seemed to realize the need for a concentration of forces. They also saw how necessary are systematic methods, and how imperative it is to adopt ideas for expanding their work which are practicable ideas.

The co-operative movement which within a year has swept some 500 new member clubs into the National Federation of Musical Clubs, is significant of the advancing appreciation of unified endeavor. At the same time there is a growing insistence among the individual music clubs that each must not be interfered with in its independence in the slightest degree. I personally cannot too strongly indorse the encouragement of this feeling. The big work of the federation can be done only in the degree which is made possible by the relatively big work done by each individual women's music club.

It is gratifying to know that the national federation officers entertain absolutely this belief. The coming biennial convention of the National Federation is approaching. The tri-cities of Moline, Davenport and Rock Island will be the scene from June 6 to 14, next, of activities such as no previous national federation biennial has known. We hope there will be a forward swing for the big things. Our women have done wonderful work in music . . . as they have in so many other essentials. They would appear to be approaching, now, a critical period in their endeavors, and the preservation of a clear perspective is something for them to hold constantly in mind.

GRAND OPERA IN YIDDISH.

What we are told is the first experiment of its kind in this country is scheduled to take place as we write. It is the presentation of grand opera in Yiddish. The work is Halevy's "La Juive," in which Caruso won such success at the Metropolitan during the past two seasons, and it will be performed in New York's Lexington Theater.

Max Bloch, a tenor who sang second roles at the Metropolitan for several years, is to be the Eleazar, while Agnes Robinson (who has appeared here with the Favorita and other temporary opera organizations) is to have Rosa Ponselle's part of Rachel. The enterprise is under the management of Seimion Tomars, at one time connected with the stage direction of Oscar Hammerstein's Manhattan Operahouse. The conductor is to be Leon M. Kramer.

The matter of a text in opera is really far less serious than many of us are willing to admit. We like to hear what it all is the singers are making a fuss about, yet—how many of the human warblers ever give us that opportunity? Opera in Choctaw—or Yiddish—is just as understandable, when being delivered by your average singer, as is English. "Heavenly Aida" as sung by the tenor ("He-e-unnnnnfyuud ughh!"—is about what it is ordinarily made to sound like) might just as well be given in the Italian—"Celeste Aida"—as in the kind of English we have just indicated.

So we shan't be willing to admit that the members of the Yiddish-American Grand Opera Company will enlighten their auditors as to the text of "La Juive" unless they have a very clear enunciation, and unless there is not too much orchestral tone to cover up much of what they utter.

SONG MAKERS AND THE UNION.

New York is enjoying a smile over the agitation of some of our popular song writers and lyricists as the result of a recent experience. The chaps of whom we speak are members of the Lyric Writers' and Composers' Protective League; and at a recent gathering in a famous New York chop house it was suggested that the organization join the American Federation of Labor.

Victor Herbert occupied the chair when the motion was put, so we assume that Victor favors the move. But there wasn't much enthusiasm from enough of the Protective League members to put the idea across. About a hundred song writers protested, and successfully. Perhaps their dignity was affronted. Who ever heard of a great musician or a great writer of lyrics being compelled to punch a time clock? Think what would happen if quitting-time should come at the moment a new idea lodged in the mind of one of these useful creatures. Would he ever, in such circumstances, have built for us another "Annie Rooney," or "Wait Till the Clouds Roll By?"

Whoever it was that thought of such a thing as making the creative worker perform his job by union rules must have had little respect for his craft. Perish any such thought. Give the song writer—musician and lyricist—his own sweet way . . . if we are to have sweet music and haunting words.

MILLIONAIRE MUSIC TEACHER

There are not many millionaire music teachers, of course. Not those who made their millions by indicating how the singer's larnyx should lie or the way to grasp a violin. But there are quite a large number of financially successful music pedagogues, and their number is increasing.

You once heard that music was a precarious calling, but not any more. The precariousness has vanished; in its place has come the ever reliable and sure-as-shooting dollar, which is easier than ever for the capable music teacher to annex.

New York's hard-working instructors are beginning to turn toward—not vacations, but more work. Celebrated imparters of how to sing (and, equally, how not to sing) are about to migrate to other cities, where for the trifling amount of anywhere from $25 to $40 an hour they will tell the pupil something about how it is done. The same is true of the violin expert and the expert piano pedagogue,

From an income-producing standpoint the successful music teacher is in a stronger position than many a distinguished attorney or architect or physician. A net earning of $15,000 for a nine to ten months' year is not unusual, while $10,000 in the larger cities is almost common. A few of the most celebrated music pedagogues approach the $40,000 per annum mark, and one or two are close to $50,000.

All this goes to prove to what an extent music is expanding, and the tremendous interest which exists among many thousands of young people—in all parts of the country. And the desire to study music is constantly growing (as it should.)

The day is not far off when the profession of music teaching will reach even farther than some of its warmest supporters now suppose. It is a splendid calling, and while more than one faker is plying it we are pleased to see signs, which indicate that as knowledge grows faking becomes more and more difficult.

QUAIL IN THE SNAKE FENCE.

Those who are deploring the scarcity of game birds in this region and have been attributing the dearth of quail to various influences have overlooked one of the most important reasons for the shrinkage.

The old-fashioned rail fence, its angles choked with briars and weeds, formed a natural winter refuge for the birds. Snow might drift mountains high, but all was snug and cosy in the depths of the tangle of vegetation which is no more since the introduction of wire as a fencing material. Headlands are ploughed almost to the boundary lines of fields these days and the brambles and berry bushes are fast disappearing.

With one of his best hiding places gone the quail has to struggle for existence. He is a cheery chap and his whistle at eventide near the homes of men is an evidence of his friendliness. He ought to have everything that is possible done for his preservation. Winter feeding is good, but something to take the place of the old rail fence would also be helpful.—[New York Herald.

Equal Rating.

Over in the colored quarters of Camp Joseph E. Johnston, Florida, during the war, a big unbleached sergeant was telling his outfit that a new major-general was taking command and would probably pay them a visit.

CONGRESS KEEPS TUMMIES DOWN.

Lawmakers Take Up Gym Work Seriously.

Complete Equipment Bought and Put in Use.

"K. O." Britten Soon to Meet "Navy" Roosevelt.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, May 16.—With the opening in the House Office Building of a gymnasium supported by personal contributions from 140 Congressmen, the physical culture movement seems to have struck Capitol Hill full force.

Perhaps the sudden interest of the Congressmen in their physical condition is not hard to explain. They have recently been holding hearings in the Committee on Education on a bill to establish a nation-wide system of physical culture, and the figures showing the need for such a measure have been truly alarming. They show that a large percentage of American men are physically unfit, and that among sedentary workers, lack of exercise and of fresh air are the big causes. We have conquered germs, only to let our livers and hearts and other vital organs degenerate for lack of an occasional shaking up.

SEDENTARY MEN.

The Congressman and Senator are the sedentary men par excellence. Sitting is their business. A Congressman's reputation depends partly on how much time he spends sitting in the House, and when he leaves there he goes to his office and sits down and spends four hours dictating letters, explaining that the garden seeds are all gone and why he could not recommend fifteen men for one postmastership.

Formerly oratory gave the legislator all the exercise he needed. Men like Daniel Webster and Henry Clay used to get up a good sweat every time they addressed the House. Then they would take a plunge in the Potomac and a rub down, and so keep in the best of trim.

But the style in oratory has change. There is not as much swinging and hammering and waving as there used to be. Oratory can no longer take the place of the setting up exercise. And members of the House, especially, do not get the chance to talk often enough to keep them in really good trim. The Congressman says a few words and then extends his remarks in the Record. The orations that the home folks read are delivered only to stenographers or even written with a lead pencil.

Hence the need for the Congressional gymnasium, which has recently been opened on the first floor of the House Office Building, in a space formerly occupied by the Democratic National Committee.

A FIGHTING CONGRESSMAN.

The idea is credited to Representatives Britten of Illinois and Reed of New York. After the balance of the 140 Congressional athletes had signified their willingness to take part in the plan, each was assessed $10. With this money Representative Britten managed to obtain complete equipment for the gymnasium.

For the legislator who seeks diversion or exercise, there is provided a handball court, three rowing machines, two punching bags, a wrestling mat, horizonal bars, abdominal massage machines, a gymnasium "horse," and any number of médicine balls, boxing gloves, chest weight pulleys, indian clubs, dumb bells, fencing foils, masks and breastplates. In addition, there are lockers, shower baths, a steam room, rubbing tables and an electric cabinet bath.

The gym idea was conceived during the last session of Congress and the money for the equipment collected. Every day there is spasdomic use of the gymnasium, but it is planned now to have regular classes to whip Congressmen into good trim. The two originators of the plan, with Representative Newton of Minnesota, have been named as a committee to get in touch with the athletic authorities of the Navy, Marine Corps and Georgetown University, with a view to securing the services of the best athletic coaching available. It is planned to hold this class in the morning, due to the embarrassment which might result from a roll call interrupting an afternoon class, dragging nearly naked statesmen from their violent physical exertions, forcing them to dress hurriedly, dash over to the Capitol and answer to their names.

It is not expected that the full 140 subscribers to the fund for the equipment of the gymnasium will take advantage of the opportunity a coached class in physical culture will offer them. Some of the older members will not attend, and many of the House leaders contributed with no idea of being able to devote a definite fraction of their time to being put into good bodily trim.

Capt. John Craige of the Marine Corps will have general supervision of the physical work of the statesmen when the class is formed. He is an overseas veteran, and now, in addition to being one of the aides, Maj.-Gen. Lejeune, commandant of the Marine Corps, is athletic officer of the corps. He intends to detail properly qualified enlisted men of the organization if they are found to be available.

A FAMOUS COACH.

Capt. Craige entered the Marine Corps during the late war. His prowess as an amateur boxer is well known. In addition to attaining laurels in this field he assisted in training of three middleweights championships of the world.

Boxing bids fair to take a prominent part in the activities of the House gymnasium devotees. One of the originators of the gymnasium plan, Representative Britten, has an enviable record as an amateur boxer, broad jumper and sprinter. He still keeps himself in first-class shape all the time, doing a considerable amount of handball playing and boxing.

Mr. Britten and Col. Theodore Roosevelt, new Assistant Secretary of the Navy, have agreed to a friendly bout with the gloves at the House gym. Col. Roosevelt, by the way, is the only man outside the membership of the House who has been admitted to membership in the gymnasium. Only the fixing of a time convenient to Secretary Roosevelt remains in the way of these men coming together.

LEADS STRENUOUS LIFE.

Secretary Roosevelt has led the "strenuous life" advocated by his distinguished father, and has engaged in a great many glove encounters with the late ex-President. However, in tackling Represenative Britten, he will have his hands uncomfortably full, although he will have the advantage of weight, height and reach.

The Congressman made a great name for himself on the Pacific Coast as a youngster. He is still remembered there as one of the fastest and strongest lightweight amateur boxers that California has produced. He came into national notice when fighting a gentleman who rejoiced in the name of Young Brady at the Olympic Club of San Francisco in 1892. In the first round he knocked Brady down six times, then knocked him out, all in the space of one minute and thirty seconds.

At the Chicago Athletic Club, during the World's Fair games in 1893, young Britten knocked out Jack Mackler in twelve rounds. During the Chicago games, Mr. Britten did not devote himself entirely to boxing, but by way of variety defeated Crumm, the then famous Iowa sprinter, who subsequently was timed for 100 yards in less than 10 seconds. Mr. Britten also treasures medals won for swimming ice at the Florence-avenue United Presbyterian Church, and musical services at various other churches.

At Exposition Park at 1:30 o'clock a program of arts and crafts under the Americanization department of California, F.W.C., will be given. Numbers will be played by the park band and a community sing will take place under the direction of Hugo Kirchhofer. Mrs. J. Urquhart is chairman of the Americanization and Mrs. A. R. Gates of the music.

Likes Los Angeles.

Mme. Genevra Johnstone-Bishop, the singer, has postponed her trip to Washington, D. C., and instead is to remain here during the coming year. She has been engaged to sing at the Musical Festival at Santa Barbara during week of June 29.

Music and Library.

Music lovers of the city will undoubtedly be greatly interested in the project for a bond issue for a new library building to be voted on June 7 in the city.

The public library has been circulating music since 1890, and has a section devoted entirely to the art, containing about 50,000 sheets of music ranging from the great symphonies to the popular melodies by Carrie Jacobs Bond.

The specially designed cases and covers for sheet music, it is said, have been copied by many large libraries of the United States, and the libraries of Manila and Stockholm. It is estimated that nearly 4500 volumes of music are in circulation each month.

Opens Opera School.

William Tyroler, who was here as accompanist for Pasquale Amato early during the musical season, has returned to Los Angeles with the view of establishing a school for grand opera and concert work, specializing in choral work.

Mr. Tyroler was engaged at the Royal Opera House in Munich for eight years, and at the New York Metropolitan from 1908 to 1920.

He has acted as accompanist for a number of musical artists including Geraldine Farrar, Olive Fremstad, Alma Gluck, Schumann-Heink, Margaret Matzenauer, Rosa Ponselle, Enrico Caruso, Mr. Amato, Charles Hackett and Antonio Scotti.

Guild Music.

Under the direction of Kae Beirne-O'Rourke, a concert program was recently given before St. Brigid's Guild in the Knights of Columbus Council Chamber. Patrick O'Neil was the featured soloist, and also taking part were Lewis A. Kerwin, pianist and organist; Robert Lee, tenor; Miss Glad L. Chambers, mezzo-soprano; Miss Dolores Palethorpe, dancer, and William Leneaewaver, tenor.

Cathedral Harp.

Charles I. B. Hendricks recently created quite an impression by the presentation of a number of hymns on that unique instrument, the cathedral harp at the Temple Baptist Church.

Spanish Comic Opera.

The first act of the light opera, "Oh, That Spanish Fandango," written and directed by Elisabeth McCabe Gilmore, and with music by Sol Cohen, Vincent Rose and Charles Pemberton, will be presented June 10. The operatic production is to be followed by a baritone solo by Amon Dorsey Cain, whistling selections by Miss Hazel Stallings, and a reading by Helen Chalmers Kingston.

Scholarship Winner.

Miss Violet Stallcup, a young pianist of much promise, won spontaneous applause for her solos recently on a Wa-Wan Club program. She is the winner of the scholarship at the Fontainebleau Conservatory in Paris.

Chapin Violin Program.

A violin recital will be presented by Bessie Chapin Tuesday morning in the Palm Room of the Ambassador Hotel. Her program will include a Bach Concerto, the "Faust" fantasie, and a group of smaller works. Charles Henry de la Platte, the basso, will assit with operatic numbers and a group of French songs.

Theorist in East.

Carolyn Alden Alchin, musical theorist, formerly of this city, has been in the East introducing her work on harmony at a number of important musical meetings. Chief among these was the national gathering of supervisors at St. Joseph, Mo., the Ohio State Music Teachers' Association convention; the eastern conference of supervisors at Boston, and the State Music Teachers' Association of Michigan. Beside this, she made several public appearances in New York City. She has also had numerous invitations to hold summer classes next year at universities.

Benefit Musicale.

A musical tea was given under the auspices of the McKinley Home Auxiliary at the home of Mrs. E. W. Clark on Windsor Boulevard Tuesday afternoon. The program comprised six enjoyable numbers, a piano solo by Mrs. Alma Lamoureaux, readings by Miss Marcus and Miss Wright of Cumnock Hall, songs by Miss Pierce of Glendale and violin solo by Miss Patricia Goodman, with Miss Vera Holbrook accompanying on the harp.

Closing Eastern Studio.

Raymond Cannon is shortly to close his studio in New York City and return to Southern California. His wife, Ellen Beach Yaw, is already here, having sung in recital during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Canon plan to spend part of their time in the East and part here, henceforward.

At Ambassador.

The Tandler quartet will give their concert in the Ambassador lobby this evening. Slavic composers will be dominant. The program will open with a selection from "The Bartered Bride," by Smetana, followed by the Rachmaninoff "Prelude," in C sharp minor, with selections from "The Fortune Teller," by Victor Herbert, as light contrast. Other numbers are, Prelude (Rachmaninoff;) "Chanson Indoue" (Rimsky-Korsakow;) Finale from the "Caucasian Sketches" (Ippolitow-Ivanow,) and harp solos.

Whistling Popular.

Agnes Woodward, director of the California School of Artistic Whistling, who recently returned from a five months' sojourn in Kansas City, where she established a branch of her school, reports enthusiasm in the East over the bird method of whistling. A new school of whistling will undoubtedly be established in Chicago in the near future.

Margaret McKee, well-known whistler, who recently completed a season's engagement at the Hippodrome in New York, left last Friday for England and the continent where she will concertize for several months. Raye Dawn, another Woodward pupil, is touring in vaudeville in Australia and New Zealand. Felice Jung and Elizabeth Furlow are filling dates in and around Chicago and Uintah. Masterman is engaged in vaudeville work in Alabama.

Trowbridge Recital.

Adelaide Trowbridge will present advanced pupils from her class in recital June 7 at Ebell. The following will appear: Misses Katherine Steward, Gladys Cline, Alberta Metzler, Marguerite Hauber, Rose Waldron, Jeanette Jessurum, Emily Miller, Helen Herlocker, Ivy Goade, Rebecca Quinines, and Mrs. Lois Waltz

Vocal Instructor Here.

Raymond L. Morley in the Music Art Building, is introducing to Los Angeles an interesting method of piano instruction.

Mr. Morley studied under Helen Blake, a pupil of Von Bulow and Dudley Buck. He is from Kansas City, Mo., where he taught a class of thirty-five pupils.

Vaughn Pupils.

A program of interest will be given the coming week, by the pupils of Bertha Winslow Vaughn, in the ballroom of the Egan Dramatic School. The following will appear: Gladys Slater, Ruth Sharlet, Margaret Schirmer, Mildred Wickersheim, Helen Wood, Florence Westlake, Betty Brown, Francis Hickson and Judy Benton.

Dramatic Soprano.

Harriette de Ment Packard, soprano and teacher, gave an attractively arranged program Saturday afternoon at her residence studio in Pasadena, featuring Mary Jane Gunn, dramatic soprano. Miss Gunn came West to study with Mrs. Packard last fall and will return to her home in the East during the summer.

Studio Musicale.

Patrick O'Neil, tenor, and Lewis A. Kerwin, pianist, have announced a joint reception and musicale at their studio in the Majestic Theater Building, June 11, from 3 until 12 p.m.

Solos and Chorus.

Among the soloists to appear in concert Friday at Majestic Hall under the leadership of Mme. Newcomb-Prindell, are Ann Otjen, contralto; Ann Latimer and Jeanette Gilbert, sopranos; Janice Beck, mezzo-soprano; Barbara Downs, Mrs. J. Gordon Frasier and Ethel Doris, sopranos, besides a chorus of fifteen. Assisting will be Helen Newcomb, pianiste.

Pemberton Pupils.

Charles E. Pemberton, violinist and composer, will present his preparatory pupils in a recital tomorrow evening, at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth M. Gilmore. The following will take part: Vernon Green, Stanley Lewis, Virginia Abbott, Rolland Holdredge, Gretchen Lyon, Lloyd Harter, Jane Layton, Starr Devel and Markes Markson.

FEDERATION HEADS HOLD SESSION HERE.

That the activities of the Federation of Music Clubs have not ceased with the closing of the convention was demonstrated Wednesday. The regular business meeting was held and a number of important matters were discussed, while resolutions which were passed at the convention and interesting reports were read.

Mrs. Cecil Frankel, president, presided, and the following members of the directorate joined her at luncheon in the brown room of the City Club: Mrs. Grace W. Mabee, Mrs. Emma Bartlett, Mrs. Alfred Bartlett, Mrs. Hazel White, Mrs. Clarence Gustlin, Earl Bettin, Charles C. Draa, Julius Seyler and Miss Jennie Winston.

Many plans were suggested to prevent clubs and societies from engaging artists to give their services without recompense, and a resolution was made by Mr. Bettin, member of the Committee on American Music, "that a committee be appointed to spread all propaganda in which the club is interested, and to attend to getting invitations from each club for sending a speaker to at least one meeting each year."

PLANS OWN "VILLAGE."

A Greenwich village is going to be added to the Hollywood landscape, according to Otto Lederer, a member of Ruth Roland's serial company. The actor owns two acres on Beechwood Drive, where he has his mountain home, and he is now drawing up plans for several cottages which will be occupied by musicians, painters and writers. The porches will be cemented and covered with awnings; there will be a community parlor where the arts will commingle in soaring conversation, while more earthly will be a big swimming pool. The place occupied the limelight about two years ago when the production of "Julius Caesar" with an all-star cast was given. Mr. Lederer has already named his home the Greenwich Mountain Village, with subtitle, "It is not Bohemian!"

LIGHT ON REFRESHMENTS.

John Bowers, screen leading man, entertained a number of prominent film folk recently aboard his yacht Uncas, at San Pedro Harbor. Included in the party were Mr. and Mrs. Robert McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Beaumont, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Badger, Walter Vann and Don Short. The guests all declared they were excellent sailors and offered to assist in piloting the ship, but Mr. Bowers said for a time he expected it would take him about a week to consume the fried chickens which had been prepared for luncheon, as no one else seemed to care for them. "My guests were of great assistance to me—between trips to the rail," said the Goldwyn actor. "However, when we returned to harbor the 'eats' vanished in short order and everyone seemed to want to try it again."

FATHER AND SON—IN FILM.

Although Max Davidson and John Davidson play the roles of father and son in the cast of "Fanny Herself," the Edna Ferber story being produced by Tod Browning, the two are not related. In fact, the two Davidsons were not even acquainted till they met on the set at Universal City. Max Davidson plays the role of Brandeis, the small-town shopkeeper, and John Davidson will be seen as Theodore, his musically-inclined son. Max Davidson has always been a character comedian on the stage and screen, while John Davidson has played leading roles with the various stars of the spoken and silent drama, and was recently leading man of the Majestic stock company in Los Angeles.

THE NEW.

IN STORES AND HOMES.

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

By Olive Gray.
Per E. B.

Up-to-Datest:

For the subdeb. A quaint garden party frock of figured East Indian print as exotic in pattern and coloring as its name. In style it follows the circular-skirted, peasant-bodiced outline and is worn with a guimpe of white organdie. Completed by a flower-wreathed hat of leghorn in natural tint and buckled colonial pumps of black patent leather, it forms a costume which seems to belong in a French print of date 1800.

A "seashore" wrap of creamy camelshair, suggestive in the foamy quality of its beauty of ocean spray. Wide revers of silky angora turn back the length of the fronts and the final touch of luxury is added in a lining of rich white satin.

Heavy woolen hose in plain colors for women's summer sportswear. Clocks of brightly contrasting colors give the requisite dash to the conventional blacks, browns and whites most affected in these new weaves. It goes without saying that the shoes worn with the heavy hose are thick-soled white ones with trimmings of black or brown leather.

Now is the Time to Buy:

The coat and skirt suit of rough surfaced silk for knockabout wear. Smart of cut and trimly tailored, it is available for the thousand and one occasions upon which a dressy frock is a bit too dressy and a sports outfit a bit too sporty. Quality and style are combined in the excellent examples of this type of suit purchasable at the present moment at a price unbelievably moderate.

Shoes for beach, country and mountain wear during the vacation period. The shopper of retentive memory, to whom war-time shoe prices are still a shuddery nightmare, does not need to refer to yesteryear's personal expenditure files to assure herself that two pairs of substantial outing boots grow now out of the cheque which, twelve months ago, barely covered the price of one.

Summer shirts for the men of the family. Whether taste inclines to solid colors, stripes or pristine white; to cotton fabrics, all-silk or the practical pongee weaves, the offerings of the day are sufficiently varied to fulfill any and every demand.

Any Color—So It's Red.

In the face of the modern judgment of Paris that women of all ages, stations and complexions are best clad for daytime in unrelieved black, it's a riotously colorful world on this side of the water, this early summer of 1921. And the largest single contributor to the joyousness of the clothes landscape is the Indian red which is crowding the primal blue and yellow and violet to the far edge of the canvas.

One questions if the powers that invent clothes saw a fancied necessity for pepping up a world swathed for too long in the subdued shades of the dust when the insistent sounding of this red note was begun. Or if it was to exploit the discovery, after age-long search by chemist-wizards of many lands, of the oriental secret of carmine dye—the overwhelming, gorgeous red of Assyrian kings and captains; of triumphant Egyptians and learned Persions. In any event the brilliancy of result is an answer sufficiently glowing to make speculation anent the origin of the present rage for crimson seem a synonym for nothing to do.

Too, the red wave has considerably increased our color nomenclature. For instance, we have "flamingo" and "tomato" and "Indian" and "primitive," not to mention such blood cousins as 'rust" and "nasturtium" and "tangerine," a trio of red-yellows; and "henna" classified by manufacturer-purists as red-brown. It will not be surprising, before the crest is reached, if we find ourselves splitting hairs over "pirate" as distinguished from "bullfight" and discriminating between "gypsy" and "brigand"—all shades of the good old danger-signal color which were once blanketed under the homely cover of "turkey."

Exemplifying the Glad Color.

To specialize. A morning frock of checked red and white gingham is adorable when it shows triple bands, graduated in width, of the gingham, encircling a foundation skirt of sheer white organdie. A long, wrinkled bodice of the gingham is fastened to the skirt with a plaiting of the same material and similar frills finish the round neck and the puffed sleeves—the latter of organdie.

An afternoon gown of red dotted Swiss is combined effectively with gray organdie—the softest of quaker tones. If the woman who finally possesses this creation is sufficiently daring she will carry to the garden parties where she wears it a frilled sunshade of red silk, which looks as if it might have belonged on Cleopatra's royal barge.

Of the combinations of red jackets and white skirts in flannel sports suits there is, literally, no end. Running these a close second are the one-piece sports-wear dresses in red and white "candy stripe" silk, with which one wears white stockings and low-heeled white ties. Red hats of milan, hemp or lisere for wear with these gowns we have with us always—or at least, as long as the present red flag waves.

Wool three-piece suits in which red is used for the pepful touch upon black and midnight blue received the conservative woman's stamp of approval early in the blossoming season of red. Red roses and even red lace have been thrown at blue serge and have stuck with gladness of result. Richest and most striking, perhaps, of all red garmenting of the moment is a wrap of deeppiled red velour, worthy to be the mantle of a queen. Its wide sleeves are heavily embroidered in black and a wide collar of black monkey clasps high about the throat.

Humoring the Humorist.

The wise women are buying their furs now. Not from philanthropic motives of substantiating the well-worn joke of the funny-columnist who, like the rest of us, must live, and to live must take his funny subjects where he finds them, but because furs bought in May are bought at exactly half of December prices.

No further clinching of this argument is necessary than an inspection of the silky-haired chokers of Baum marten, soft as satin to the touch, which she, who shops the length of Broadway, may see, providing she follows the proper scent. Also, this thrifty explorer will find collars of squirrel and neckpieces of moleskin to delight her fur-loving soul. And the purchase of these will prove no undue strain upon her purse strings, either, as fur prices go.

The Dicta of Style are That:

Insertions of shirred net give an unusual air to an embroidered organdie.

Taffeta and glove silk lingerie comes in such popular shades as gray and orchid.

Negligees of white crepe satin are heavily quilted in squares, with colored silk.

A kiddie's dress of orange linen is attractively embroidered in black dotted rings.

Long, narrow bands tacked on each shoulder, serve as sleeves of a velvet gown.

A yellow organdie dress has deep bands of folded organdie in intricate lattice design.

A long, black crepe de chine shawl is edged all around with long, hand-knotted fringe.

The sleeves of a chemise frock are seamed from the Florentine neck line to the cuff.

The new slip-on sweater opens on the shoulder with a tiny button on either shoulder.

A dress of citron-colored Georgette crepe is trimmed with black silk shadow embroidery.

DYED IN WOOL.

An actor at Universal City, who recently married, returned from his honeymoon and brought the new Mrs. —— to the studio for the first time.

"Oh, she's a blonde," remarked Edith Roberts. "I thought he married a brunette."

"He did," replied King Baggot, "but she dyed."

JAZZ MUSIC NO LONGER JAZZ, SAYS BLOSSOM.

SYNCOPATION WITH ART IN THE HARMONY IS TAKING ITS PLACE.

Some one called Blossom Seeley a "jazz queen" the other day and the appelation caused a storm of protest from this talented young woman. And the reason? Because, she asserts, "jazz" no longer is. That's to say, it is steadily being refined.

"I not only abhor being referred to as a jazz singer," spoke up Miss Seeley, "but I am emphatically not one. The stormy shoulder shaking period has died, I think, except among people of very low tastes.

"That is why I call my present Orpheum act 'syncopation.'

"Syncopation is a basic type of music which has for its essential rhythm. The beginnings of jazz, as commonly known, came for the southern negro spirituals and expressed the basic feeling of a simple people. But its growth which at the present time has brought the popular type of music to almost symphonic proportions, I feel sure, will cause the rhythmical tuneful syncopation of the present day and of the future to be the typical American music."

The growth and development of the type of music commonly referred to as jazz can be seen, it is believed, in the development of Blossom Seeley's performance. Six or seven years ago the main ideas seemed to be the element of noise and cowbell trimmings.

At the time Miss Seeley was first in vaudeville the main idea was to have her shout as loudly as possible and have the drummer in the pit hit as many kitchen utensils as he could at one time. All of the members of a popular musical organization had to be able to do stunts bordering on athletics.

Two years ago, it is said, Miss Seeley and her partner and husband, Mr. Fields, introduced a novelty in the form of a muted cornet playing a fine obbligato with their orchestras. This idea has been taken up by practically all dance organizations. Miss Seeley recognized the fact that people enjoyed good music, be it syncopated or not, and since that time the orchestrations which she has used in her act have been steadily improved.

Although she sings practically all "blues," they are so melodic and harmonious that one hardly recognizes them as "blues." She has had the temerity to introduce a waltz number in a syncopated act. Her orchestrations feature the strings, especially the 'cello, and the horns have parts of symphonic proportions to perform. She has realized that the one instrument of percussion which is a real musical instrument, the tympani, can and will be used to advantage in the music of the future, so the tympani and soft tom are prevalent.

MAY SHOW FILM AT JAIL.

Arrangements are being completed to hold a special showing of "The City of Silent Men," which opens at Grauman's Rialto Sunday at the local jail. Chief of Police Pendegast, Sheriff W. I. Traegger and other city and county police officials have been invited to attend. Many of the scenes in which Thomas Meighan appears were actually filmed in Sing Sing. Upon its completion, "The City of Silent Men" was shown to the inmates of that prison, this being the first time in the history of Sing Sing that such a presentation was permitted.

MUSICALE AT THEATER.

Assisted by a group of resident musicians Dr. Bruce Gordon Kingsley will give a symphony orchestra and pipe organ concert at the new Apollo Theater at 1:30 p.m. today. Following the initial concert Messrs. Swope, Young and Grant of the Hollywood Theaters, Inc., plan to offer a new departure for suburban motion picture houses with the establishment of a series of regular Sunday symphony recitals preceding the usual motion picture presentations.

COMEDIAN IN HOSPITAL.

Larry Semon is recovering from an operation which he was compelled to undergo two days ago, but will be in the hospital for another week or two. Physicians had hoped to avoid the operation, but it seemed that the extent of his injuries when Semon leaped off a moving house plunging over a cliff in his latest picture, were too serious.

Charge purchases made Tuesday will be charged on bills payable in July.

PERSONAL—The object of this ad is to get into touch with a few ladies and gentlemen between the ages of 55 and 65, who find themselves quite alone in the world, and are compelled to live on a fixed income of from $600 to $1000 per year, which goodness knows only provides the most scant living. I find myself in just this condition and I believe there are many others like me. To ask employment at these ages is not pleasant, in fact, no one wants us, my object is to meet with those of culture, and if possible, world travelers. The object I have in mind cannot possibly bring me in one penny, not even to paying for this ad, but if it works out, those that become interested will be glad to stand their share. If your income is much beyond these amounts, this ad will not interest you, in fact, I do not want you. Address F, box 258, TIMES OFFICE.

TO LET—THE BELMONT APARTMENTS.
Figueroa at Tenth st. Easy Walking Distance.

We have a heap of letters from summer visitors, most of 'em from old friends who have passed previous summers at the Belmont. They will be coming, thick and fast, right after June 1, when the reduced railroad rates go into effect.

We have only a few apartments vacant now, and if you are not perfectly satisfied where you are, it would be well to call and see what we have to offer at once.

Single apartments, $65 and up.
Double apartments, $125 and up.

You can doubtless get apartments for less money elsewhere, but nowhere do you get as much for every dollar you pay as at the Belmont.

"The Place Like Home."

FOR SALE—

In looking for used and bargain

PIANOS AND PLAYERS.

Price is not the only consideration. Used instruments, as they are ordinarily sold, simply mean passing a piano or player on to another owner in about the same condition in which it was traded in by the old owner. Truly some are very good—but most all with very few exceptions should be put in condition both as to action and case before being resold. By good shop work only can satisfaction be assured. Every instrument offered has been put in good playing condition—many are like new. We guarantee every one—will allow all the money you pay on any new piano or player you may wish from our stock within one year, should you decide to exchange.

USED UPRIGHT PIANOS FROM $150 TO $585. GRANDS FROM $695 UP.

We always have on hand many excellent used pianos in both grand and upright makes that have been turned in to us in exchange on Duo-Art Reproducing pianos or on new grands. This collection embraces all styles and sizes of pianos in practically any finish you may require and includes the following well-known makes:

Steinway
Weber
Steinert
Sohmer
Estey
Kurtzmann
Brinkerhoff
LaFargue
Davenport-Treacy
Krakauer
Birkel Co.

PLAYERS FROM $450 UP.
All play 88-note and latest music.

These also embrace practically all styles and finishes. An unusual opportunity to realize a worth-while saving.

FOR SALE—BY OWNER AND BUILDER.
SEVEN BEAUTIFUL HOMES ON NORTH KENMORE AVENUE, BETWEEN MELROSE AVE. AND SANTA MONICA BLVD.
PREWAR PRICES FROM $8250.

Prospective purchaser will do well to inspect these splendidly constructed homes. The owner and builder bought the land as raw acreage and has converted it into what is undoubtedly one of the finest residence streets in Los Angeles, reached by both Red and Yellow car lines, a stone's throw from new State University, and immediately adjacent to and midway between Hollywood and Wilshire.

Some of these beautiful places are of brick construction, some of stucco, some of hollow tile and others of frame work and plaster. All were designed by skilled architects, specializing in fine residential work, and every detail of construction was executed by careful mechanics who knew their work and are proud of a good job.

The houses are situated in the 800 and 900 blocks on North Kenmore ave., just west of the Branch State University, and are open for inspection every day to anyone interested in fine construction work.

The owner has deliberately reduced the prices in every case, some as much as $1500, and the new prices are guaranteed against further reduction.

MINES AND MINING.

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING—

No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

Don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling, with large and expensive machinery. Never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "square of its diameter."

So drill small diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machine ever built for territories from 800 to 2500 ft. deep. Write for particulars and circulars.

BUSINESS INVESTMENTS—

PRESIDENT of company manufacturing and selling highest quality machinery will negotiate with one or two aggressive men of achievement and successful business ability with a view of transferring his interest. Business is absolutely permanent and has unlimited possibilities and is indirectly backed by the largest and strongest concern of its kind in the world. Actual previous experience in this particular line not really necessary, but good business ability is a prime necessity. If you can measure up to handling big business and have enough vision and judgment to expect big results only through big efforts and continuous hard work, this is an unusual opportunity, and while the money is necessary the right man or men are infinitely more so. An investment of $9000 in cash will be necessary to purchase my stock only. All finished material on hand strictly modern and results will only be governed by efforts. Advertiser will continue to devote (gratis) part of time for few months in advisory capacity. I invite and expect most thorough investigation and analysis. I invite answers only from those who can comply with the necessary conditions and that give some details of their past experience. Address POSTOFFICE BOX 442, LOS ANGELES.

HAVE you $300 or more to invest if the following statements can be proven to you?

1. "Your money back" is guaranteed quickly with 100 per cent profit.
2. You will still retain your interest in property after original investment and initial 100 per cent profit is returned to you.
3. You will receive additional dividends every 30 days.
4. Large profits certain—perhaps millions.

Remember this is a bed-rock, ground-floor opportunity for you to recoup your losses previously invested in stocks and other speculative enterprises. Come in, let's talk it over.
See MR. GREENLEE, Suite 925, Stock Exchange Bldg., 639 S. Spring st.

AN experienced mechanical engineer who developed and successfully marketed a large automatic machine which revolutionized the industry in its line, has now ready for financing another highly profitable automatic system which simplifies and replaces an antiquated, laborious hand system, and which has been highly indorsed by the best authorities. The field for this enterprise is nation-wide, and the need urgent. Will require an initial investment of $15,000, during the next few months, with perhaps $35,000 additional later for manufacturing. Wish to meet individual or small syndicate to handle. This is a high-class proposition. Address S, box 180, TIMES OFFICE.

OPEN TUESDAY.
ARE YOU THE MAN?
INVESTMENT $4500.

A personal friend of mine has requested me to find and introduce to him a reliable, hard working man, to take equal interest in his auto accessories, gas and oil station business. This business has one of the best locations in city of Los Angeles and does a record business. His register shows $250-$350 daily receipts. Gas runs 900 to 1200 gallons daily and will positively guarantee you $400 net monthly minimum as your share of profit. Always work one extra man steady, as volume of business is beyond capacity of two men. There is an excellent lease and 2 sources of subrent business secures rent practically free. Equipment is all automatic. This is not a dirty manual position as you might imagine. Has contract for Puente gasoline under guarantee. With 2 principals and one extra man the hours of work are so arranged for reasonable helpers. No real manual work of any nature is connected with this business and any one skeptical of receipts or profits can watch register and see gas receipts, check paid bills, bank account, etc. Owner is very genial and business has an established trade that positively assures good business times. Prefer middle-aged man who desires pleasant connection, good position outdoors and who knows how to meet trade congenially. This is no "get-rich-quick" scheme, but a clean, legitimate business opening that will pay good dividends at increased investment value. Stand most rigid investigations you care to make. This business will be shown by appointment only. Bank references required. Price for equal interest is $4500. No terms or property considered. Details only from MR. WITHERALL, 1100 Citizens' National Bank Bldg., 1st and Spring, on Tuesday, 31.

TEACHERS' PAY WILL NOT DROP.

Imperial Valley Salaries to Remain Stationary in Spite of Economy Drive.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

EL CENTRO, May 28.—Salaries of school-teachers in Imperial County will be practically the same during the next school year as they were this year, action to this effect having been taken by a number of school districts in the county. A determined effort to bring about a cut in salaries as one means of reducing the maintenance costs of schools has been made by the Taxpayers' Association. A recent report of the county grand jury dealt with the teachers' salary question, but, despite these activities, salaries generaly will remain the same. Other steps toward retrenchment will be taken.

Trustees of the Brawley and Calexico high school districts and of both the grammar and high schools of Calipatria have already announced that they will make no reduction in the salaries of the teachers employed for the next school year. It is their contention that in order to maintain the high educational standards of Imperial Valley present salary schedules must be continued.

Economy will be practiced in every school district in the county and various methods of reducing expenses will be tried, in some instances departments being discontinued as in the Brawley High School, where the manual training department will be eliminated and no further money will be spent for girls' athletics.

C. R. Prince has been re-engaged as superintendent of the Calipatria schools and will be in charge of both the grammar and high schools for the next school year. At Brawley, George Momyer will again be at the head of the high school, but will take no part in the grammar school supervision.

Calexico High School trustees have elected J. A. Riatt of Las Vegas, Nev., as superintendent to succeed A. T. Vinake. In each instance the superintendents will receive the same salaries as those paid during the present school year.

HIT BY TRAIN; ONLY BRUISED.

Young Woman Has Marvelous Escape; Dragged from Under Trucks.

A few slight bruises and lacerations about the legs were the only injuries suffered by Miss Mable Benedict, 26 years of age, of 916 East Third street, when she was knocked down and run over by a Salt Lake passenger train at the Salt Lake tracks and Avenue 34 late yesterday afternoon. At the Receiving Hospital, where the young woman was treated, police surgeons were unable to account for her escape.

According to Miss Benedict, she was struck by the passenger train as she was walking on the tracks. She was pinned beneath the front trucks of the engine and the train was brought to a stop. Members of the train crew hauled the young woman from beneath the train and rushed her to the hospital.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

That he was held up at the point of a gun by three well-dressed young men and robbed of $75 in cash, a gold ring and suit case full of clothing, was the report made to police here at 4 a.m. by Floyd Phillips of 25 Clubhouse avenue, Venice. CITY INTERESTED IN TWO PUBLIC HEARINGS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, May 28.—Two hearings of vital importance to the people of Redlands will be held before the Railroad Commission in Los Angeles, on June 13. One is the hearing of the Southwestern Home Telephone Company's application for an increase in rates, the other is the hearing of the commission regarding the sale of the Citrus Belt Gas Company to the city of Redlands.

The preliminary hearing on the application for an increase of 33 1-3 per cent in the charges for telephones on the Southwest system was held here several weeks ago. It was continued to give commission engineers an opportunity to appraise the plant.

The city has been in control of the management of the gas property here for some time. It is understood that there is now a plan on way for disposing of the plant to a corporation which would furnish natural gas.

WORK FOR KIDDIES.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, May 28.—More than a score of business and professional men, aroused by a blast from the siren of the municipal lighting plant at 5:45 this morning, donned khaki and hastened to the settlement house on East Thirteenth street, where they met by prearrangement to erect an arbor for the children's playgrounds.

Dr. John Gardner, pastor of the First Congregational Church, "bossed" the job, while G. Stanley Wilson, architect, directed the workmen, recruited from the membership of the Kiwanis Club.

Swings and teeters for the children's playground were installed before the volunteers laid down their saws and hammers. Breakfast was served the workers by the ladies of the City Home League.

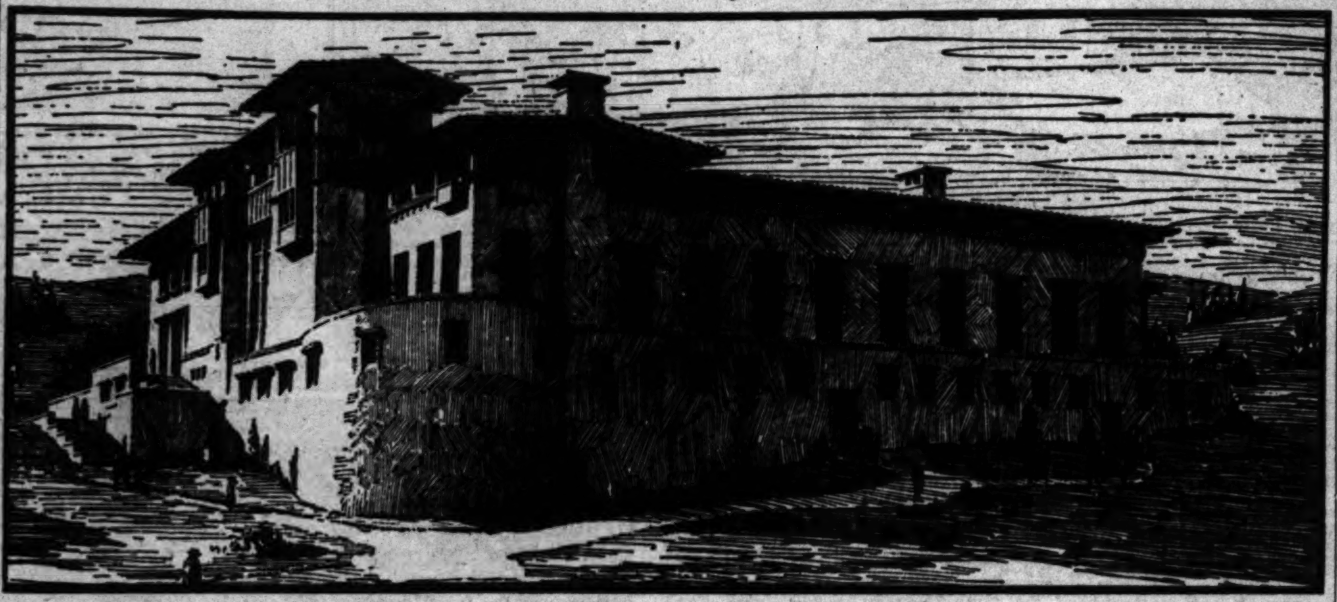
Fine Recreation Center for Foothill Site.



New Building for the Sunset Canyon Country Club.
Revised plan for structure, of Thibetan architecture, to be built on 1200-acre tract near Burbank; H. H. Whitely, designer and builder.

CLUBHOUSE PLANS REVISED.

New Home of Sunset Canyon Country Club to be Started at Once.

Plans for the new home of the Sunset Canyon Country Club, to be erected on a 1200-acre site in Brand Canyon, near Burbank, have been completely revised, and construction of the building, which will be one of the finest of its kind in the vicinity of Los Angeles, will be started immediately, according to a statement made yesterday by E. G. Judah, president of the organization. The new clubhouse, which, it is now estimated, will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000 to erect, has been planned by H. H. Whitely, architectural designer, who will also have charge of the erection of the building.

The clubhouse, as it is now to be built, has been designed after the Thibetan, or Indo-Chinese style of architecture, and the same style will be carried out in the interior decorations and furnishings. The structure is to be three stories in height, 200 by 180 feet, and will be located on an elevation overlooking the main canyon road.

The lower floor will be devoted to shower and locker rooms for both men and women, billiard rooms, and a bowling alley. The main floor will contain two dining-rooms, a ballroom, theater, clubrooms, and a large lobby. The third floor is planned for about thirty suites of rooms, with bath, for the accommodation of guests and members of the club. A special feature will be the tearoom for women, which will be situated on a terrace overlooking the golf course and the valley.

Excavations for the building are nearing completion, and enough native stone and rubble, which is to be used in the construction of the first floor, has been assembled to proceed immediately with building operations. The upper portion of the structure will be built of hollow tile, with plaster exterior.

CABIN SITES.

A distinctive feature of the plan will be the cabin sites, which are available to club members in Brand Canyon. These cabin sites will be available to members of the club without cost, but moderate restrictions, based upon the location of the site, will be placed on the cost of the cabin and the time in which building operations must be started.

A modern sewer system has been installed and completed for a portion of the distance up Sunset Canyon, and water pipe lines have been laid in the two main canyons. The springs on the property have been developed, and a new reservoir, with a capacity for 17,000 gallons of water is ready for use. The golf course has been partially leveled, and prepared for seeding, and an automobile road, extending to the vicinity of the Indian village, has been finished. Other roads and trails over the adjacent hills have been surveyed.

The entire 1200 acres, which are to be used by the club are held under the terms of a long-term lease, with option to buy at any time during the life of the lease. E. G. Judah is the president of the organization, while S. T. Allen is the secretary.

Famous Santa Barbara Ranch Sold at Auction.

C. H. O'Connor, local auctioneer, reports the sale of the famous Ellwood ranch, located about eleven miles from Santa Barbara, to J. E. Doty and Joseph Archambault, well-known farmers of Santa Barbara county for a consideration of $225,000 cash. The property was formerly owned by Mrs. F. G. Greene and Mrs. C. M. Crichton, who were represented in the sale by Alfred Edwards, president of the Commercial Trust and Savings Bank of Santa Barbara.

The ranch comprises 2050 acres under intensive cultivation, most of the property being planted to fruit. The sale did not include the ranch equipment or stock, which amounted to seventy-five head of horses, 200 head of cattle and 300 head of hogs and pigs. These are to be auctioned off within the next two weeks, according to Mr. O'Connor.

NEW BUILDING RECORD IS SET.

May Activity Exceeds That of April, Previous High Month in History.

Building operations in Los Angeles for May will establish a new high record for a single month, according to figures released yesterday by the building department of the city. Up to and including Friday, 2476 permits, carrying a total valuation of $7,179,732, had been taken out and, with two more days to go, the month's total, it is believed, will be in excess of $7,400,000. During April, the previous high month in the history of the city, permits to the value of $7,250,751 were issued.

The number of permits shows a slight decrease, as compared with April, but this is attributed to the rainy weather of the past week, which has held up building operations to some extent. A notable increase in the number of miscellaneous industrial buildings is apparent in the present month's record, buildings of this type having a value of more than $1,000,000 in the May record, as compared with only $20,000 last month. Only three large permits have been issued since May 1, these being for the University Club building, the Security Trust and Savings Bank building in Hollywood and the new administration building for the Union Oil Company at Wilmington.

VAN NUYS STORE SOLD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE]

VAN NUYS, May 28.—As the result of a transaction concluded Thursday, Prince Bros., well-known merchants operating stores at Anaheim, and at Alamagorda, N. M., became the owners of the Emporium Dry Goods Store, located at 307 Sherman Way. Immediate possession was given, and Mr. Prince stated that a general clearance will be made soon and that a new stock of well-selected merchandise will be brought to the Van Nuys store. Mrs. Ella Devitt was the former owner.

TO AID IN LANDING BIG CONVENTION.

Strong Delegation of Local Realtors Will Go North This Week to Formulate Plans.

To promote good fellowship between the realty boards of San Francisco and Los Angeles, and to offer co-operation with the board of the northern city in its efforts to land the 1922 convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards for San Francisco, about seventy-five prominent local realtors will journey to San Francisco on the Yale on Thursday, June 2. Three days will be devoted with officials and members of the northern board in outlining plans for the program of action to be taken by the two big California delegations to the national convention to be held in Chicago in July, with particular reference paid to mapping out a course of action for bringing the national convention to San Francisco next year. The return trip will be made by railroad.

Joint sessions of the two boards will be held on Friday afternoon and evening, but no other arrangements have been made for a formal program. The whole affair is planned in the nature of a rally, to support San Francisco in its claims for the big 1922 convention. The plan was originated by Frank Ryan, president of the local board, who sent the following telegram to Colbert Coldwell, president of the San Francisco board, on Monday of this week:

"To give further evidence of the regard in which the Los Angeles Realty Board holds its brother realtors from San Francisco and Bay cities, the Los Angeles Realty Board is not only willing, but anxious, to go into the Chicago convention with the determination to initiate the force and do all in its power to land the National Realtors' Convention for San Francisco in 1922. This all being based upon our belief that the San Francisco Real Estate Board would welcome such co-operation on our part. If this is your hope and your desire the thought has occurred to me to gather together a sizeable delegation from the Los Angeles Realty Board to make a friendly call on the San Francisco Real Estate Board, to give evidence by our personal presence of the desire above outlined.

"My thought is that we would leave here on the steamer Yale, if possible, Thursday, June 2, arriving in San Francisco the morning of Friday, June 3. If you feel that this would be, on our part, an act that

HEMP AND MACHINERY TO CREATE NEW INDUSTRY.

Fiber Production Multiplied by New Processes; California Conditions Ideal; Start is Made.

SYNOPSIS OF HEMP DEVELOPMENTS.

1. Thousands of acres opened up to a new rotation crop.
2. Mechanical retting and breaking to supersede hand labor.
3. Disagreeable conditions of handling abolished, making possible the use of white civilized labor.
4. Time of retting and fiber making reduced from weeks or months to a few minutes.
5. By-products of paper pulp, oil, feed and fertilizer, important new profit considerations.
6. Hemp now to be raised to equality with flax for linen fiber.
7. Means great reduction in cost of linens and vast increase in the supply.
8. Means the development of great textile and cordage industries based on cheap and quantity production.

An "S.O.S." call is sounding round the world for relief from the linen famine and the almost prohibitive prices asked for even the coarsest fabrics woven from flax fiber. The cause of the famine is in the economic or productive breakdown of Russia, which, until the war, was the world's principal source of flax fiber. Irish, Scotch, French and Belgian flax production had been gradually decreasing for some years before the war, due, no doubt, to the disagreeable features connected with the primitive methods of dew retting or water retting, which involved the handling of masses of decayed matter, the immersion in water of the workers for considerable periods and a stench-laden atmosphere during the retting seasons, all of which became more and more unbearable with the advance of civilization, leaving this form of labor more and more to the Russian peasants, while no advances were made toward ridding the industry of its deterrent features.

MACHINERY INVENTED.

Within recent years mechanical "breaking" for hemp fiber has made some progress, and hemp growing has become fairly established in Kentucky and in Wisconsin. Flax is grown for seed in the Dakotas and in Wisconsin, but the retting and breaking have not mechanically advanced sufficiently to make fiber production profitable.

Now, however, two inventions appear to have solved the age-long problem, and interest is being aroused that bids fair to establish the three great vegetable fibers—flax, hemp and ramie—firmly among the profitable crops which white and civilized agriculturists can produce under livable conditions, in line with grains and other farm products. The Agricultural Department of the Chamber of Commerce has given the matter considerable attention and is giving its endorsement to plans for immediate demonstration of the feasibility of placing hemp, and possibly also flax and ramie, among the future rotation crops from which to add millions yearly to the agricultural income of California and Californians.

The Shely hemp break, invented by William A. Shely of Chicago, after many years of concentration on this one thing as his life work, was recently tested and demonstrated before interested parties, including growers and spinners, who pronounced it an unqualified success in the decorticating or separating of the fiber from the green or dried stalks, without crushing the fiber into tow, but leaving it strong and sound for spinning.

The DeLape Chemical retter, invented by D. E. DeLape of Los Angeles, does in a few minutes a perfect job of retting and separating of the fibers of green or dried flax, hemp or ramie, without injury to the fiber, thus entirely eliminating the obnoxious features of handling, while so shortening the time and cheapening the process of marketing that the opening of the fiber industry is made feasible and practicable, with every promise of profit to the grower, as the process becomes applied.

Patents have been allowed for the DeLape chemical retting processes and patents on machinery for handling the stalks in large quantities have been applied for. A company has been formed by Mr. DeLape to commercialize the processes and the machinery, under the name of the International Fiber Company. It is in view of these inventions and the assurance that at last the handling of these vegetable fibers is to be modernized, that Dr. Clements, chief of the Agricultural Bureau and the Agricultural Department, have concluded that the time is ripe for a sustained and thorough experiment, on a scale of magnitude sufficient to carefully prove the points involved, and every encouragement consistent with the policies of the Chamber of Commerce will be extended the project.

TESTS ARE MADE.

The Shely hemp break was tested in Chicago, early in April, in the presence of growers and fiber dealers from many countries, and the reports of what it accomplished are enthusiastically favorable. W. Scott, of the large firm of Scott & Hansen, fiber dealers at Scottdale, near Manchester, Eng., writing to Col. William Grassie of Winnipeg, said: "It is incomparably the best, most efficient, handy, portable tool I have yet seen. It is extraordinarily clever, and bears evidence not only of mechanical genius, but intimate knowledge, and a close and thoughtful study of what is required of it."

J. P. Daly, manager of the Cudahy ranch, reported to T. W. McDevitt of this city as follows: "Our Mr. Carmody reported that the demonstration and work of the machine was very satisfactory. He advises that it did a fine, clean job on a volume of hemp, and operated in a steady, efficient manner, without trouble. Judging from Mr. Carmody's advice, it would appear that this machine is a solution of a problem which has long confronted hemp growers, in being able to satisfactorily decorticate hemp by machinery.

In order to have the benefit of personal inspection, Dr. Clements of the Chamber of Commerce last week had a quantity of ramie run

WEST ALHAMBRA IN INDUSTRIES.

Claims Ideal Conditions for Workers' Homes.

Is Incubator Where Restful Conditions Inspire.

Has Some Unique Developments Now Under Way.

West Alhambra, adjoining the city limits at the northeast, and between this city and Pasadena, is perking up as an industrial community. While making no claims as the logical site for heavy manufacturers, requiring unusual facilities in the way of fuel, power and transportation, West Alhambra claims distinction as an ideal home site for the employees of light manufacturing institutions, where elevation, climate, schools, home atmosphere and living conditions, provide a steady and happy working community; and its people point with pride to a number of other successful industrial enterprises with which they are aiding Los Angeles to increase its importance as a manufacturing city.

TRUMBLE'S INVENTORIUM.

At Lemon and Palm streets, only a few blocks east of the great felt factory, is one of the most unique industrial enterprises hereabouts, but one from which the Standard Oil Company made a big profit, at a cost of $1,000,000. M. J. Trumble is the man to whom Standard Oil paid the million, for his invention for making gasoline directly from crude oil. Now Trumble has a bright new workshop, filled with latest machinery, and is spending his million in the development of other new things which his inventive genius and engineering training suggest to his fertile vision.

The Trumble Manufacturing Company is the title of his plant, but he is the company all by himself, and as a millionaire in overalls is having the time of his life, with a number of expert mechanics in his employ, working out problems that appeal to his imagination.

A machine for making building bricks or tiles or shapes, from any kind of soil, has been brought to perfection in the Trumble shop and is to be given a practical test within a few weeks, when it is to make the bricks for another new industrial building on an adjoining lot. The new machine is a portable affair, can be set up wherever a building is to be erected, and manufacture the needed bricks from the soil excavated from cellar and foundations. It is claimed these bricks, when stucco covered, will last as long or longer than burnt bricks, while their cost is almost nil in comparison. A steam tractor is another invention on which Trumble is now working, and a steam motor truck, on an entirely new boiler principle, is approaching completion.

STEEL TANKS.

The American Steel Pipe and Tank Company has a large and prosperous plant on Palm avenue, near Standard Felt Mills, where it turns out an annual product of about $500,000 in the shape of steel and galvanized pipe, tubing, tanks and corrugated sheets.

This company has a factory building fronting 450 feet on Palm avenue to a depth of sixty feet, with a wing 150 feet in depth. Here is installed one of the two corrugating rolls in this district, and there is a first-class equipment of rolls, power shears, multiple punches and riveters, suitable for the manufacture of all diameters of piping for gas, oil and water and for oil wells, up to three-sixteenths of an inch gauge.

The American Steel Pipe and Tank Company is capitalized for $100,000, and is officered by J. E. Graves, president; C. C. Barr, vice-president; C. B. Johnson, secretary, and L. P. Welch, treasurer and superintendent. It gives every evidence of prosperity and furnishes employment to about fifty mechanics.

The Community Manufacturing Company has a large bulding in which the development work in connection with the Allen Model A tractors is being carried on, and a number of the completed tractors have been turned out and are being demonstrated in actual use on southern roads and ranches. Organization for the manufacture of these tractors in or near Los Angeles, is proceeding and confidence is expressed that the Allen tractors will shortly advertise Los Angeles industries as favorably as have the Moreland trucks.

The Pacific Cotton Mills Company has just been organized, with a capital of $50,000, to manufacture the standard styles of mattresses, and to specialize on a new tuftless mattress, invented by William A. Loft, its president. This company is the outgrowth of the Alhambra Mattress and Comfort Company, which was started less than two years ago, on a capital of $185, in cash and a million dollars' worth of nerve; made a mattress at a time and kept on doubling that output, until a steady production and a steady sale had been established.

Now a new building is planned, two stories, 60 by 130 feet, and this is the building on which the new Trumble brick machine is to prove that enduring bricks can be made from common soil, on the spot where they are to be used in construction.

Another new plant has just started to manufacture a new automobile sporting grip, for fishermen or for tourists. This is a leatherette case, with callapsible metal lining for carrying ice for refrigeration; will hold four pounds of ice and twenty pounds of trout, with trays for tackle or for dishes, for the auto camper. These are the invention of F. F. Drew, and are being manufactured under the name of the Drew-Jackson Manufacturing Company.

Our New Industries.

Industrial fairs and expositions are good "get-acquainted societies" where the public can come to know the men and methods that keep the supplies of necessities and luxuries up to or ahead of the demands, and where the manufacturers can get acquainted with each other, for their mutual advantage and for trade extension purposes.

Since Jan. 1, 1920, something like 500 new factories, from one-man shops to institutions employing hundreds, have been added to the industrial colony of Los Angeles, and there is merit in the suggestion made by the Chamber of Commerce that these newcomers stand to reap the greatest profit from the forthcoming Trades Exposition through getting acquainted with their competitors, their co-workers, and the public, and that the newcomers will do well to make the broadest use of publicity this exposition will open to them.

True, continuous advertising has superseded the old-time string of industrial shows, and industry has become too big to show its true form in trade shows. But Los Angeles as an industrial center is such an astonishing and so novel a modern instance of industrial expansion, and is focusing the attention of the world in so exceptional a manner, that the Trade Show here becomes an attraction with far more than ordinary publicity value to the wide-awake manufacturer who is able to see and take advantage of "psychological moments."

Los Angeles Infant Industry has shed its swaddling clothes, is rollicking in rompers, and will make its first appearance in long pants on the occasion of the Industrial Exposition, August 15 to 20, next.

JANSS COMPANY WILL HOLD ITS TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY BANQUET THIS WEEK.

The Janss Investment Company was founded twenty years ago when Dr. Peter Janss, with Henry E. Huntington and a group of associates opened Forest Heights at the end of the Brooklyn avenue car line. Later Dr. Janss opened Belvedere Heights, where 5000 lots were sold, and the Belvedere Water Company, which now has 3800 consumers was started. Since that time forty-nine properties have been handled by the company, these properties including the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands of 47,000 acres, the Yorba Linda ranch, and tracts in the Imperial and San Joaquin valleys. RECOGNIZES LOS ANGELES AS EXPORT CENTER.

Local Delegation Wins the Cleveland Convention and Puts City on Map With Older World Ports.

Los Angeles as a port, enjoying the limelight by reason of its energetic and progressive spirit at a time when other ports are slumping, and when doubt and uncertainty pervade the atmosphere of world trade, made a mark for herself at the national foreign trade convention held last month in Cleveland.

First the census made Los Angeles a national headliner, with its population first on the Pacific Coast and tenth in the United States. Then the news that this city was "tenth in industry" attracted attention in the eastern factory centers. Then the news that this is the only port showing gains in both exports and imports, set the world looking for the causes.

MATSON REPORTS.

The recognition accorded Los Angeles at the recent national convention is interestingly set forth in the report to the Chamber of Commerce, made by Clarence H. Matson, head of the chamber's trade extension division, from which excerpts are given as follows:

"The Los Angeles delegation had two objects in view at Cleveland. One was to put Los Angeles on the map as a foreign trade center in the minds of other delegates; and the other was to gather as much practical information as possible to bring back to Los Angeles.

"President Weaver certainly is to be congratulated for the manner in which he, as spokesman of the Los Angeles delegation, put Los Angeles to the fore. He was appointed a member of the general committee of eighty to decide on the final declaration or recommendations of the convention, and he was then selected as one of seven on the subcommittee, which prepared the draft of this declaration.

"As vice-chairman of the group session dealing with 'Trade Relations with the Far East,' President Weaver made the final address before this group, making some very practical suggestions. He also spoke briefly

"At the closing session of the convention President Weaver was chosen to present the resolution of thanks to the city of Cleveland and its Chamber of Commerce, for the manner in which the convention was entertained—which he did in such a happy manner as to call forth many congratulations from other delegates.

INTEREST IN EAST.

"The interest of the East in Los Angeles is indicated by the fact that President Weaver was one of three or four delegates at the convention selected by the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the leading morning paper, for feature interviews.

"He told the Plain Dealer a few striking but modest facts about Los Angeles and its Chamber of Commerce, with the result that before breakfast the next morning he began to receive telephone calls at his hotel from people who wished to know more of Los Angeles. Appointments were made for the manager of the trade extension department to meet some of these persons and before the convention met for the morning session, at least two had expressed a determination to come to Los Angeles with a view of going into business.

"Still another man, Mr. A. W. Neal, who had met Mr. Weaver in Los Angeles, spent considerable time with the latter and entertained the Los Angeles delegation in various ways. Mr. Neal announced that his company proposes to build a $300,000 storage warehouse in Los Angeles, to be operated in connection with a similar plant in Cleveland. He stated that his company has so many shipments coming to Los Angeles from Cleveland that a warehouse is necessary in both cities."

RECOGNIZE PICTURES.

"Recognition on the convention program of the motion picture as an aid to foreign trade, was the result of work of E. H. Kaufman, manager of the Interocean Film Accessories Corporation of Los Angeles. Chairman Farrell of the National Foreign Trade Council, in chatting with some of the Los Angeles delegates after the first session, recalled a conversation he had had with Mr. Kaufman a year ago, and stated that Mr. Kaufman's presentation of the case had been responsible for setting aside one group session for the consideration of the moving picture and its relation to foreign trade. Mr. Kaufman also prepared a brief paper for this group session on the financial side of the exporting films.

"Mr. Paul H. Cromelin, of New York, head of the company with which Mr. Kaufman is associated, and also vice-president of the National Association of the Motion-Picture Industry, was chairman of the motion-picture group. He also presented a paper on "The Film as a Promoter of Foreign Trade," which was extremely informative in its description of how the exhibition of American films in foreign lands, showing all kinds of American products incidental to the picture, creates a demand for those products. For instance, sets in which American furniture or plumbing, or electric fixtures or clothing, are used, make an unconscious demand for such articles.

"The Los Angeles delegation was particularly interested in the motion-picture group program as this city is the capital of motion-picture production. They were particularly impressed also with the personality of Mr. Cromelin as a representative of the industry.

"Within the next few years films undoubtedly will have a large place in foreign trade, both as a commodity of export and as a means of promoting trade.

HONORS TO WEAVER.

"President Weaver was the guest of honor at a luncheon of the Manufacturers' Association of Cleveland given at the Cleveland Athletic Club Saturday noon. There were about 200 business men present, of whom about fifty visited Los Angeles some time ago.

"Mr. Weaver told them a number of facts about Los Angeles and suggested the desirability of establishing branch houses here for handling their Pacific Coast business and exports to the Orient.

"A luncheon was held by the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce on Friday of convention week, at which President Weaver and Mr. Matson were guests, the former occupying a seat at the speakers' table. Edward N. Hurley, former chairman of the Shipping Board, was the principal speaker.

"In referring to changed economic conditions in this country, Mr. Hurley made the startling statement that the operation and upkeep of farmers' automobiles in 1920 were as much as the proceeds of the entire wheat crop of that year at $1.50 per bushel.

"Mr. Hurley recommended a survey of distribution similar to the census of manufacturers that is made every five years. He said that while a census of manufacturers is made regularly, there has never been a similar survey of jobbers and distributors, although this is as important to the consumer as is manufacturing.

"The day before the convention closed the Los Angeles delegation received 1000 copies of the Commercial News, containing a large amount of fine Los Angeles boost material. There were no facilities for distributing such literature to the delegates, and it is questionable how effective literature is when handed out in a crowd. The Hotel Statler, at which most of the delegates stopped, has a practice of delivering a Cleveland morning paper under the door of each room in the hotel each morning, a practice much appreciated by the guests.

'This gave a cue for an effective distribution of the Commercial News. With the approval of the hotel management, arrangements were made with the bell captain to place the Los Angeles paper under the door of each room the following morning. About 800 papers were thus utilized. The balance were used in other ways.

ANGELENOS LEAD.

"Alexander S. Cowie of the Hellman Bank, made a telling point in the discussion at the group session, which considered 'Trade Relations With the Far East.' He called attention to the need for cooperation between different parts of the country and between different industries. He cited the fact that there was a large amount of cotton stored in Los Angeles, which could not be moved because of the inability of foreigners to purchase. Japan had a large amount of silk that was not moving. Arrangements were made for silk manufacturers in the East to take some of Japan's silk, which enabled Japan, in return to buy some of Los Angeles' cotton, to the benefit of all concerned.

"Mr. Cowie also emphasized the desirability of eastern manufacturers utilizing Los Angeles as a distributing point for exports to the Orient and to Pacific countries generally.

"Marius De Brabant, chairman of our Foreign Trade and Harbor Committee, was called away from the convention to deliver an address at Toledo on the American merchant marine. This was the result of the address he gave on this subject the week before at the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce at Atlantic City. Mr. De Brabant spoke at the group session relating to agriculture and foreign trade, showing how the farmers of the country should be interested in building up and maintaining an American merchant marine.

"In conversation with Los Angeles delegates, O. K. Davis, secretary of the National Foreign Trade Council, paid a high compliment to the late George B. Carpenter, as having had much to do with working out the plan to make the foreign trade adviser service of the convention a success."

Man's Necessity Offers Your Opportunity

I have a client who holds an option on a small block of privately owned stock (not treasury stock) in an oil company that is paying dividends of 5% per month on par, from settled production of oil from their wells. These dividends have been paid in cash regularly for months. He got in early when the stock was at a low price. He is now a little short of ready cash to pay the balance he owes on his option and will sell a part of his holdings at a price that will pay 5% per month on the investment (at the rate of 60% per annum,) in order to raise the quick cash he must have to pay the balance he owes and take up the remainder of his stock.

People with ready cash who are keen enough to grasp this situation and who realize the necessity for quick action are given an opportunity of a lifetime.—Money and quick money talks. By getting this stock Monday or Tuesday you will get 5% on your investment from the oil produced during the month of May. Send your check—Phone your orders or come into the office at once. This cannot last long.

A new well in proven territory is expected to come in any day which should double the price of this stock.

TO LAUNCH CAMPAIGN FOR FUNDS.

Mardi Gras Will be Held in Hollywood This Week for Picture Players' Church.

A "Little Church Around the Corner" is planned for Hollywood. The idea was first conceived two years ago by Rev. Neal Dodd, pastor of the Church of St. Mary of the Angels. The plan was but slowly advanced at first, but with the hearty co-operation of the motion-picture folk and many prominent citizens, its culmination is now assured, and the garnering of funds to build the edifice is now in progress.

It is with this as an objective that a great gala Mardi Gras will be staged in Hollywood this week, the affair opening tomorrow on the big half-acre property of the Directors' Association on Highland avenue.

All the delightful hurly-burly of an old-fashioned carnival will be featured for the big entertainment, there being more than seventy concessions listed for the event. A towering ferris wheel, a merry-go-round for the kiddies of all ages, a spacious open-air dance pavilion, a Hawaiian Village, and many other kinds of amusement features that will serve to entertain the throngs and garner dimes and nickels for the cause will be among the concessions.

The proposed "Little Church Around the Corner" was originally planned as an exact replica of New York's famous edifice, but the matured plans will provide for a structure that will be unique in several ways.

It will be Neo-Spanish in architecture, following the most attractive lines. Carleton M. Winslow, who was supervising architect of the San Diego Exposition has completed the preliminary plans for the structure, which, with the site, is expected to approximate a cost of $250,000.

In addition to the chapel, the church will be a community center, with a great auditorium, a gymnasium, shower baths, pool and billard room, bowling alley and an extensive library. It is planned that the little house of worship shall be the sanctuary of people of all faiths, or of nonfaiths, its parishioners including all motion-picture folk from the greatest of the stars to the least of the "extras."

Los Angeles Wins Bay City Trailer Plant.

W. E. Tice, factory representative of the Reliance Trailer and Truck Company of San Francisco, now in Los Angeles in connection with the opening of the new salesrooms of his company at 513-519 East Ninth street, refers to the industrial advance which has become so marked a feature of this city's economic status as "a startling thing:" by which he means, no doubt, that the rest of the State as well as the nation, has been startled by the unprecedented showing made by this city in all recent reports of financial and civic bodies, which place Los Angeles in a class by itself as the "white spot" on the country's economic map.

"Despite the generally unsettled conditions throughout the country," says Mr. Tice, "conditions in Southern California have shown remarkable progress 'straight ahead,' in which the increase in the use of trailers and industrial tractors has been marked, to such an extent as to make it advisable for us to add an assembling plant to our local sales department. Special attention will also be given to export from the Los Angeles port.

"A staff of industrial engineers will also be at the disposition of the tractor and trailer using public, for the solution of any and all problems involved in the efficient use of these modern aids to production and distribution. The local branch will continue under the management of H. C. Seymour and O. Kehlet. The public is invited to make itself at home in the use of the new salesrooms, the mechanical and engineering service, and the facilities for solving transportation problems in the industries of the Southland."

CHURCH WILL BUILD.

Christian Scientists of Porterville Enlarge Property Holdings.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, May 28. — The First Church of Christ, Scientist, of this city has just completed a deal whereby the church secures the property adjoining its present location at the corner of Mill and Third streets. The newly acquired property consists of a lot with fifty-five feet of frontage on Mill street with a depth of 120 feet. The site was purchased from L. N. Cornell. This addition gives the church a frontage of 110 feet on Mill street, one of the leading residence streets of the city, and close to the downtown district. It is the intention of the church to erect a larger and more modern church home on this property in the near future.

Announcement has just been made of the opening of a new piano store in Porterville in the Odd Fellows' Block. The Dundeen Piano House of Fresno has taken a year's lease on the office until larger quarters can be obtained. This is the first branch to be established by Mr. Dundeen, who has had thirty-one years of experience in piano construction. W. D. Tanner will have charge of the local store. A shipment of pianos has already been received and the new establishment is expected to open in a few days.

HEMP INDUSTRY FOR SOUTHLAND.

through the DeLape chemical retter. The sample consisted of green ramie, just after cutting; another bunch that had been cut for several days, and a third dried bunch. These were all passed through the chemical process, neither of the three bunches consuming over five minutes under process, and in each case resulted in perfect fiber, needing but little further scutching to make it ready for the mill.

In view of his investigations and the results of these tests, Dr. Clements stated yesterday that, with the successful operation of the two new machines, a great new avenue for profit is opened for Southern California agriculture, and that a veritable revolution in textile industries will begin through the unlimited production of the fibers of flax, hemp and ramie, the reduction of time and labor in the handling of the fiber crops, in the tremendous cheapening of the cost of preparing the fibers for market; the recovery for commercial use of by-products in the way of paper pulp and oils, and the saving of seed from fiber stock.

SEED IS FIRST NEED.

While hemp for fiber has been a limited success in more northerly latitudes, the seed seemingly must be produced further south, and dependence thus far has been upon the river bottom land in Kentucky. Seed for fiber planting is therefore scarce and high in price. Steps have been taken to secure sufficient seed for this year's planting to provide California seed sufficient for next winter's planting of not less than 10,000 acres to fiber hemp, and if this plan is successful the growing will have been by this operation put on a substantial basis, and the new mechanical devices can with such a planting be definitely tested in their application to quantity production.

J. S. Laidlaw, of Canada, who has been in Los Angeles for several months, in the interests of the hemp project, he having an interest in the Shely breaker patent, has formed a company, known as the California Hemp Seed Company, and is arranging with ranchers in Southern California to furnish them with seed and instruction for small acreage, on a basis making the seed crop available for next year's fiber planting. T. W. McDevitt has made arrangements to plant hemp seed this year on a small part of his acreage in the Imperial Valley, and has decided to include hemp in the serious plans for providing work and land for ex-service men, in which he is collaborating with the United States government.

Laidlaw and McDevitt hope to put sufficient acreage into seed production within a couple of months to insure a minimum of 10,000 bushels of seed for fiber planting, and if present plans mature, McDevitt expects to have such acreage available, and men to look after its cultivation and harvesting when the seed is ready. It is expected that the Chamber of Commerce will encourage organization which will bring the newly invented retting and breaking machinery into the enterprise, to the end that proper impetus can promptly be given to: first, production of California seed for California hemp, flax and ramie; second, stimulation of these plants as rotation crops with other ranch plantings, such as cotton, grains, beans, etc.; third, the development of a fiber producing industry, and, fourth, the development of textile and cordage industries from the local fiber, with by-products of paper pulp, oils, fertilizer and oil cake.

FACTS ABOUT HEMP.

Hemp is an annual, woody, tall-growing when thickly seeded, ranging from five to fifteen feet in height. The fiber from hemp is obtained from the inner bark of the stem, is long, and has great strength, pliability, and resistance to water and general wear. Hemp is a native of China, where it has long been grown for both birdseed and fiber, but has been transplanted to nearly all temperatte and semi-temperate countries.

California climates and soils have been proven very satisfactory for growing hemp plants, and under irrigation there is every reason to believe it will thrive even more luxuriantly than cotton, with which it is designed to rotate.

Little has been accomplished during the centuries for the improvement of the plant and its fibers, because it has always been a difficult crop to handle; this in spite of the fact that it is easy to grow.

In fertile soil hemp is the best smother crop for all sorts of weeds, and in California would serve as an eradicator of Bermuda grass, devil grass and Johnson grass, or any other weeds which give trouble in different localities. After hemp is seeded, no cultivation or other attention is necessary until it is ready to harvest. Hemp improves the physical condition of the soil. Its long tap roots penetrate to considerable depths and loosen the subsoils; the leaves give abundant shade during the greater part of the growing season; it removes less plant food than other annual crops, and leaves the soil in such condition that succeeding crops make better yields.

Hemp is seeded broadcast, requiring about forty pounds of seed to the acre (forty-four pounds to the bushel) and requires from ninety to 120 days for maturing. In California it has been known to mature in seventy days. Two crops a year can be raised in California, under the climatic and irrigation conditions obtaining in the southern counties.

WILL REVOLUTIONIZE.

All methods of harvesting, curing, processing, etc., in the past have involved weeks and sometimes months of dew retting with frequent turning and constant watching, which made it a laborious and unsatisfactory crop for white agriculturalists. The success of the new retting machinery and breaking machinery, will entirely change these methods of handling, so that the crop may go directly from the harvester to the processing machinery, or may be held as long as necessary, inasmuch as the retter is efficient with both the green stalks, or with dried or partially dried stalks; the difference being only a matter of the number of minutes required to treat green or dried plants.

It is predicted for the new methods, that within forty-eight hours from harvesting, the fibers can be made ready for the spinning and weaving industries, having in that period gone through the retter, the breaker, the scutcher and hackle, with 100 per cent recovery of fibers, tows, pulp and by-products.

All this will mean an entire restudy of the plants, the methods of planting and harvesting, crop rotation, community systems, and fiber marketing. So important, however, are the possibilities, agriculturally and industrially, that Dr. Clements urges continued interest and investigation, under his co-operation, for the working out of proper methods of procedure to insure the fullest profit to Southern California, through the proposed modernizing of one of the world's most ancient industries.

Hollywood Man at Ninety-two is Inventor.

At the age of 92 years, with all the enthusiasm of a youth in his twenties, Samuel Hedges of this city has just been allowed a patent on an improved system of making matched flooring, which he claims will replace the standard form of groove and tongue, because of the economies made possible by his invention.

Mr. Hedges has been a carpenter contractor in this city for thirty-four years, and twenty-five years ago he built the first house in Hollywood, so he states, at what is now Cahuenga and Hollywood boulevards. He now makes his home with his son at 4607 Welch Place, in East Hollywood, where, if he lives until next Saturday, he will be the honor guest at a celebration in honor of his ninety-second birthday anniversary.

Officials of Morgan, Walls & Morgan, architects, and of the Hammond Lumber Company, agree in attributing merit to the invention of Mr. Hedges, the feature of which is the substitution of a wedge, flat on top and slanting upward on its lower surface, in place of the oval-end straight-edged tongue and groove. The groove is deeper than the wedge, insuring a tighter joint on the wearing surface, and longer wear to the flooring.

It remains for the lumber and sawmill interests to substitute the new system for the old, as a standard system is vital to the lumber trade. As merit is conceded to the invention, it is possible Mr. Hedges, who is still in good health, in spite of his years, may yet live to see his invention accepted as the standard in the manufacture of matched flooring, both for hardwoods and pine.

NEW COUNTRY CLUB BEING ORGANIZED.

SAN BERNARDINO BUSINESS MEN TO PURCHASE RESIDENCE AND TRACT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN BERNARDINO, May 28.—Plans for the establishment of the San Bernardino Country Club, which have been under way for several months, are nearing completion, and the committee of local business men who are in charge of the project is preparing to conclude negotiations for the purchase of 285 acres northeast of the city. The site selected has for many years been a private home, and is situated in the San Bernardino Mountains, within fifteen minutes' drive from the city. It is planned to remodel the present home into a modern clubhouse, and to erect several bungalows. A golf course, tennis courts, and other outdoor amusement features are planned.

Richard E. Roberts, vice-president of the San Bernardino National Bank, is the president of the association; Milton Standish, advertising manager of the San Bernardino Sun, is the secretary, and J. J. Wilkins, local realty broker, is the promoter of the enterprise. The project is indorsed by the business men of the city, the Chamber of Commerce and civic organizations. Among local men who are actively interested in the plan are Herman Harris, president of the Valley Bank; H. S. Webster, business manager of the Sun; W. H. Swan, president of the Security Investment Company; M. D. Katz, local capitalist; J. B. Gill, president of the San Bernardino National Bank; S. E. Bagley of the Farmers' Exchange National Bank; W. S. Shephardson, vice-president of the American National Bank; R. E. Swing, attorney; C. W. Bennett, H. E. Jones and S. W. McNabb, Mayor of the city. It is proposed to have 100 participating members.

LITTLE PALS."

Shoe Company, with a little plant at West Al- has been obliged to notify retailers, who are the highest class stores in Boston, Chicago and that their orders must to less than recent de- pending the increase of facilities, now taxed utmost to supply the growing western trade. This emanating from the Chamber of Commerce, was so strikingly indicative of unrealized conditions awaiting investment in shoe manufacture that investigation followed, with surprising results.

The Just Shoe Company was started six years ago at Venice, as the Venice Shoe Company, by a man named Billings, under whom it failed. It was moved to Torrance, by a man named Harris, as the Just Shoe Company, but again failed for lack both of capital and standard quality of output, and was moved to a small shop on Ceres avenue, in Los Angeles, where it struggled along until financial disaster overtook it three years ago, when it was taken over by its creditors and then acquired by L. A. Wolff, sales manager of the shoe department of the Standard Felt Company and moved to West Alhambra, in December, 1918.

That was but little over two years ago. Since that time, by the simple application of the idea of standardization, specialization on a single style and bringing that single style to a state of perfection, the "little pals," as the boys' and girls' shoes have been named, have reached annual sales in excess of a quarter of a million dollars, have shown a handsome profit, have acquired reputation as far east as Boston, and are now preparing for expansion in manufacture and sales, on the basis of $100,000 capital and enlarged selling organization.

COSTS ARE LESS.

All the leathers used are tanned in California—and the need of tanneries in Los Angeles is thereby shown—all the supplies are made here, and Mr. Wolff declares that his costs enable him to compete in the eastern markets with eastern shoes, even after the addition of freights for the long haul; and that he can undersell eastern shoes of similar quality in the western markets.

The present plant of the Just Shoe Company at West Alhambra, consists of a two-story brick building, 65x75 feet, with equipment for turning out 400 pairs daily, and an organization that is working the plant to the limit of this capacity. With the increase of the capital to $100,000 additional land has been bought adjoining the present building, and new buildings are to be added, when the selling plans for increased production have been worked out, and national advertising plans have broadened the market for the California, or the Los Angeles shoes. The present successful company is officered by L. A. Wolff, president; F. L. Clark, vice-president, and H. Mitvalsky, secretary and factory superintendent.

The Tanners' Leather Company, with a capital of $100,000, has also brought to successful operation another plant for the manufacture of shoes for boys and girls exclusively, after a year of what its sponsors declare to have been commercial grief due entirely to the dependence on the East for machinery and supplies during the first year of getting a plant into working order, with limited facilities.

This company now has under lease the entire three-story building at 134-36 North Los Angeles street, has the two upper floors equipped with modern machinery for making children's welt shoes, in all sizes from 2 to 12 years.

Capacity of the plant is 1200 pairs a day. Production began last September—only eight months ago—but already 300 to 400 pairs a day are being made, on orders only, from dealers in the three Pacific Coast States, while the sales organization is being gradually extended to include the entire eleven western States and the men behind this enterprise say they will have difficulty to supply the demand as soon as their salesmen open new territory.

The officers of the Tanners Leather Company are Eli and Theodore Elias, and Philip Katz, all of whom came here from Cincinnatus two years ago. They have brought many of their workmen from eastern points.

E. Elias, the president, is firm in his declaration that experienced eastern shoe manufacturers, with proper capital, will be able to manufacture men's and women's shoes in Los Angeles at lower cost than in the East, and will find a ready market, waiting to absorb millions of pairs of shoes annually, if styles and prices are on a par with competitive products.

MORE FACTORIES.

The Chamber of Commerce has taken cognizance of the situation that makes this the most promising field in the United States for new shoe manufacturing investments, and also of the sure field for tannery enterprises, which will find a big foreign, as well as domestic market from this port. The experiences of the two successful makers of children's shoes are being made the basis of a survey for the enlightenment of the shoe manufacturing interests and negotiations are already started, which are expected to bring experienced manufacturers of shoes to Los Angeles in the near future, to occupy the waiting field.

BIG LUMBER FIRM OPENS BRANCH HERE.

Important Addition Will be Made to Local Building Material Distributors.

The building and lumber trades of Los Angeles are to be augmented by the addition of a new yard under the auspices of the Siler Mill Company of Raymond, Wash., at present large producers, with a force of 600 men, half of whom are engaged in cutting timber in the northern woods, and the other half in the various mills operated by the Siler Company.

A new California corporation is to be formed, to be known as the Vernon Lumber Company, with headquarters in Los Angeles, under the management of A. C. Teagarden, assisted by W. R. Cram, son of one of the Siler executives, who has come to Los Angeles from Raymond, to make his home in this city.

For the purposes of their local business, the Vernon Lumber Company has just leased from Gilfillan Brothers, Inc., three acres, plus a triangle for spur track, on the north side of Vernon avenue, east of Alameda street, for a term of ten years, with option to purchase within one year.

Buildings for handling a large stock of lumber will be erected within sixty days, and a planing mill will also be installed. A box factory is contemplated as an addition to this plant in the near future. The Siler Company cuts about 350,000 feet per day of fir and spruce, and is among the large operators on the West Coast. The Sudden & Christensen Steamship Line will transport most of the Vernon Lumber Company's product from the north to Los Angeles, the Hanify boats hauling the residue. The Roy C. Seeley Company negotiated the realty transaction.

The officers are J. F. Gibson, Jr., Visalia, president; E. D. Farrow, Visalia, vice-president; Guy Jones and Homer Johnson, Bakersfield. The company has a tract of several thousand acres of rich west coast land which will be developed rapidly.

PROGRESS ON ALBERHILL'S "CLAY CITY."

Projectors Making Headway and Interest Spreading; Research Extended.

"Alberhill, the Clay City," whose interesting proposals and ambitious plans were described in The Times some months ago, is making progress toward the realization of the visions of its developers, and is making a stir in the ceramic world, as is evidenced by the numerous articles appearing in current issues of a number of trade journals, east and west, devoted to clays and their products.

At a recent dinner given to the various chambers of commerce of Riverside county, at Riverside, with forty-five representatives present, the great Alberhill clay deposits were the chief subjects of discussion and steps were taken for joint action toward putting the force of all the commercial bodies back of the project for developing the clay city, as the only municipality in the world devoted to ceramics, in the multitude of forms and utilities to which clays lend themselves.

Active negotiations, as the direct result of this meeting, are going forward, having as their object the creation of a large pottery at Alberhill, with local capital, for the production of a diversified line of potters' products.

Addition of another kiln to the Alberhill Research laboratories at Griffin and Alhambra avenues, within a week, puts this laboratory in position to furnish small-scale commercial production in the testing of products. To further the development of high tension insulators for the growing hydroelectric power systems, this new kiln has been placed under the supervision of LeRoy C. Williams, a young insulation engineer, formerly with the Westinghouse company, for which institution he has for the past two years been inspector of insulation in all the western States, thereby gaining first-hand knowledge of the requirements of the high-power lines.

Mr. Williams has been commissioned by the Alberhill interests to make intensive and thorough tests of all Southern California clays, with special reference to the improvement of insulators for the increased current which the modern requirements of western power is forcing the power companies to install. These investigations will be directed toward securing better insulators under severer tests than have hitherto been considered necessary. They have the co-operation of the power systems and of manufacturers, who are contemplating the erection of plants for making the insulators, when the tests and the small-scale production have proved the clays and their methods of treatment.

The opening of the laboratories to the teachers of the city's vocational schools, and to clay workers with problems to be solved, has proved popular, and a number of these are constantly making use of the facilities so generously placed at their disposal. They are already giving impetus to clay research, which cannot fail to react favorably to ceramic progress in the Southwest.

We're Racing With the Secretary of the Treasury

Andrew Mellon and his associates are spending half a million dollars drilling for oil 330 feet from "Kentuck's" two wells that are speeding towards the sands.

Andrew Mellon, among the world's wealthiest men, chosen as Secretary of the Treasury of the United States because of his rare foresight, his keen business judgment and his knowledge of finance and investments. Andrew Mellon's Gulf Production Co. is one of the largest and most successful Oil producing organizations in the State of Texas.

The Mellon interests are drilling as close as possible to the 4200-barrel Kentucky Company well. Foster's "Kentuck" Syndicate's 20-acre lease and two drilling wells separate them from this giant producer. Mellon's deepest well is down 800 feet. "Kentuck's" No. 1 well is at 1310 feet. "Kentuck's" No. 2 well is at 1225 feet.

There'll be no delay completing Kentuck's wells—they're being drilled by rival contractors.

"Kentuck" has Standard Oil subsidiaries drilling on the adjoining leases, both east and west, big producers—none less than 1000 barrels per day—on every side. Mellon's interests wells on the south and the Kentucky Company's 4200-barrel well 1070 short feet north.

FOSTER'S TWO "KENTUCK" WELLS ARE GOING DOWN.

To the Golden Sands of Breckenridge

that continue month after month to pay millions to big and small investors alike. Oil sands that with over a thousand completed wells have shown less than 5% dry holes. Long-lived sands that produce 14% of the entire oil output of the United States—8.9% of the world's production. The oil sands from which other Foster-Breckenridge Syndicates have paid $100 investors $1000 per month—from which 14 representative Breckenridge Syndicates have already averaged paying $233 on each $100 invested.

"Kentuck" must set a new high dividend record. It has 20 acres where other fortune-making syndicates had only 4—two wells where they had but one. It is closer to big production than even the Gonzolus that paid $1700 on each $100 invested.

Fred B. Foster & Company own the "Kentuck Oil Syndicate" and all the oil it produces. We supervise its operations from the drilling of the wells to the distribution of its earnings. We offer ½ interest in "Kentuck" for $75,000, terms 40% cash with order, 20% monthly for three months, payments due July 1st, August 1st and September 1st. Subscriptions for this amount are being accepted in denominations of $5000, $1000, $500 and $100.

$5000 buys one bbl. out of every 30 the syndicate receives.
$1000 buys one bbl. out of every 150 the syndicate receives.
$500 buys one bbl. out of every 300 the syndicate receives.
$100 buys one bbl. out of every 1500 the syndicate receives.

Transfer of title to oil will be made before a Notary Public—each transfer calling for cash payment at the market price of oil every 30 days, commencing 45 days after the first well is completed. Each transfer is perpetual, non-assessable and shares in all the oil the "Kentuck Oil Syndicate" receives from its entire holdings.

Building Toward Enormous Profit!

Yes, we mean just that! We have what it takes to make an oil company one of the biggest! Look at our holdings! We have 160 acres next to the property which raised General Petroleum from debt to an ability to pay MILLION-DOLLAR DIVIDENDS! In addition, we have another 160 acres—sureshot stuff—in the field where Union Oil made its start! STILL MORE! Twenty acres in Huntington Beach, where new millions and new powers in California oil are being created right now!

South Mountain!

Right on the same anticline as a 1,000-barrel producer which is flowing out of only 250 feet of its 1200 feet of oil sand! Less than 1900 feet from this well, and on what drilling operations show to be the richest portion of the whole great field!

Lost Hills!

We have a quarter-section—the other three-quarters are yielding millions of dollars worth of oil to the General Petroleum Corporation! We're right up against their 73 producing wells—and we have room for an equal number on our own ground!

Huntington Beach!

PROBLEMS OF WEST DISCUSSED.

Commercial Travelers Meet at Stockton.

Industrialization of Pacific Coast Necessary.

Electrification of Railroads to be Next Step.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

STOCKTON (Cal.) May 28.—Commercial travelers representing 3000 business interests in California closed their annual convention here today with an address by D. M. Reynolds, director of research of the First National Bank of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank. Reynolds gave the delegates the results of a survey made of California industry, pointed out the necessity for supporting the Foreign Trade Financing Corporation to the end that California products may find overseas market, and outlined the necessity for the creation of free zones in Pacific ports in order that oriental trade with the United States might be handled through Pacific Coast ports instead of directly to the East through the Panama Canal.

In outlining the necessity for the industrialization of the Pacific Coast and the turning of raw materials into finished products, Reynolds said in part:

"For Pacific trade we must compete against cheap oriental labor by using labor saving devices and by placing every facility possible at the disposal of American labor, to the end that our own standard of living may be maintained.

"The electrification of railroads must be carried on in order to reduce the cost of railway operation and to divert oil from the railroads to industry—this in order both to cheapen the cost of railway operation and traffic rates as well as to eliminate the cost of transporting excess fuel by the carriers.

"It is an economic waste to transport oil for railways over long distances and at great expense when power can be sent forward by wire and the engines and tankers now required for this transportation can be turned to better uses. To do this and to provide cheap fuel for industry, every support must be given to the immediate development of water power, not in the interest of any one city or of any one State, but in the interest of the entire West.

"The Colorado River should not be developed to provide power for any particular section or municipality, or even for the State of California alone. This power must be made available throughout the West as far north as Idaho and as far east as Denver, because present freight rates cannot be reduced simply by the electrification of railway lines in California. This electrification must extend across the continent, and the production and transportation of raw materials in the entire inter-mountain section must be cheapened in order that the industries of California may benefit thereby.

"No one State nor one city can develop to its fullest extent at the expense of any other section of the West, because this power belongs to the whole people, not of this State alone, but of adjacent States, and should be developed either by the government itself, or by existing organizations, under strict regulation."

PERMIT ISSUE FOR GLENDALE LABORATORY

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GLENDALE, May 28.—One of the largest building permits issued in several years, was taken out by Dr. Henry Harrower, for a two-story administration building for the Harrower laboratory, to cost approximately $47,000. The building will be located in front of the laboratory, at the corner of Belmont and Broadway, and will face Broadway. The structure will be of red brick, and will contain twenty-eight rooms arranged to accommodate the various executive offices.

Ground has been broken for the Coker-Taylor Building to be erected at 209 South Brand Boulevard. The plans call for three store rooms, the permits were for $11,000. The realty firm of Kelly and Van Arsdol are moving today into their new office building at the corner of Colorado and Brand. The building is the first of its kind to be built in Glendale. It is a replica of an old house on the Belgian and Holland frontier. The outline and drawing was given to Mr. Kelly by a former Canadian soldier. L. D. McKean, the builder, will be associated with the firm as their contractor and builder.

NEW HOMES ARE UNDER WAY AT PORTERVILLE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, May 28.—An example of the growth and development of the city of Porterville and the demand for more homes is found in the number of attractive bungalows now under construction. C. V. Hamilton, local contractor, has just started excavation for a five-room modern bungalow, costing $3500, on Ducommon street for Sam Richardson, a recent newcomer from the East. Mr. Hamilton also has under construction on Oak street three up-to-date modern homes, which will materially add to the attraction on one of the oldest residence streets of the city. A. M. Hammond, local photographer, will have a six-room $10,000 home. E. C. Freye is building a five-room $5000 house, and Mr. Hamilton, himself, an $8500 residence. All of these buildings are expected to be ready for occupancy within the next thirty days.

COMMERCE BODY TRADE NOTICES.

Head of Trade Extension Offers Services.

Items of Interest to Various Trade Concerns.

Foreign Opportunities and Government Supplies.

After a month's absence, in attendance on the sessions of the nation-foreign trade convention at Cleveland, Clarence H. Matson, head of the trade extension bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, is busily taking up the threads of his busy bureau, which sagged more or less during his absence. Among many interesting bits of news of value to the world traders of Southern California, the following are noted:

BIDS FOR ARMY SUPPLIES.

Practically every day the trade extension department receives from various quartermasters' depots of the Army specifications calling for bids for supplies of all kinds for the Army. Also frequent lists are received of supplies which the Army has for sale. For instance, one list just at hand gives 90,000 burlap bags of various sizes for sale. Also more than 28,000 pieces of men's underwear; nearly 20,000 pairs of shoes of various kinds, and other items, bids for which will be received up to June 7 at Brooklyn, N. Y.

Anyone interested either in purchasing these commodities from the Army, or in selling supplies to the Army, may see these proposals at the trade extension department.

SUPPLYING ALASKA.

Through the assistance of Congressman Osborne, Los Angeles merchants have an opportunity to bid on supplies for the Alaskan Engineering Commission, which maintains its purchasing agent in Seattle. Calls for bids for supplies of various kinds for Alaska government work are now received by the trade extension department of the Chamber of Commerce, and merchants interested in bidding on such supplies should communicate with the trade extension department.

FOREIGN TRADE EDUCATION.

Ansel R. Clarke, commercial agent at large of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, will be in Los Angeles June 7-10. His immediate mission is to get in touch with all universities and colleges for the purpose of making detailed study of the nature and extent of foreign trade education being made available for those desiring such training.

Incidentally, however, Mr. Clarke desires to meet as many business men as possible, who are interested in foreign trade. He will also probably meet with the Harbor and Foreign Trade Committee on June 7.

LUCKENBACH GULF SERVICE.

The Luckenbach Steamship Company announces a new service between Los Angeles and the Gulf ports of New Orleans and Mobile. This will be in addition to the present Luckenbach service to New York, as the vessels going to the Gulf ports will turn back from there and not go on north.

The service will be inaugurated by the S.S. Pleiades sailing from Gulf ports about the middle of June to be followed by the S.S. Hattie Luckenbach a month later.

Eastbound the service will begin with the S.S. Pleiades sailing about the middle of July. Monthly service will be maintained.

MEXICAN REPRESENTATION.

Winfield Scott, formerly manager of the Ribera Hotel at Ocotlan, Jalisco, on the shores of Lake Chapala, near Guadalajara, Mex., but who lived in Los Angeles during the last part of the Mexican revolution, has returned to Mexico and has opened his hotel. Incidentally he desires to represent Los Angeles firms in that territory, which includes Guadalajara.

BUSINESS LEASES.

The J. R. Swan Company reports the following leases made recently involving approximately $250,000, all parties being represented by J. R. Swan: 318 West Eighth street, to Board & Grauer, tobacconists, by Bertha Building Company; South Broadway, to Nunan & Ryan, confectionery and light lunch, by Bertha Building Company; Southeast corner Eighth and McGarry streets, to Co-Operative Mattress Company, manufacturing and salesroom, by R. H. Arnold Co.; 919 West Sixth street, to Keller Dye Works, salesroom, by A. L. Hammell; 344 South Broadway, to Albert Mellinkoff, footwear, by The Trustee Company; 105 West Fourth street, to Louis Davis, stationery, leather goods and picture framing, by Boggs Hotel Company; 124 West Sixth street, lunch and confectionery, to Linard & Anagostou, by A. Lewison; 118 West First street, Long Beach, to Myers & Ashkins, light lunch and doughnuts, by California Chocolate Shops, Inc.

BREA REALTY ACTIVE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BREA, May 28.—Among the most important improvements now under way at Brea is the twenty-five room hotel which is being erected at a cost of about $20,000 by A. Friedliph. Recent property transfers here include the sale of the east half of the E. Huddleson acreage on West Cedar street to J. L. McMechan, and the transfer of two lots in Sunny Crest tract to C. Williams of Los Angeles. Mr. Williams will improve the property with a fine bungalow court. W. C. Perdew has bought the corner lot at Flower and Ash streets for a home site, and Mrs. Anna Welty of Los Angeles has purchased a lot in Laurel Heights tract. L. V. McKelvey and L. P. Volts of Fullerton have leased the corner store in the new Craig Building for a term of ten years, and will open a first class drug store in the near future.

PROGRESS ON MARKET WEEK

"Industrial and Trades Exposition: First Annual Market Week," is the official title of the big manufacturers' exhibit to be instituted this year under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. This title was decided upon last week. The date of the exposition also was officially set for the week of August 15 to 20, inclusive, this date having been chosen in deference to San Francisco, whose furniture makers have announced a market week for the week of August 8-13. San Francisco's visitors will thus be enabled to come to the comprehensive display to be shown here.

The intensive direct-by-mail advertising campaign, to be started at once, will be directed to the buyers of the twelve Western States, covering some 30,000 establishments. Other advertising, nation-wide in scope, will also be done. Advertising matter for individual distribution will be furnished by the Chamber of Commerce, and it is urged that every piece of mail leaving this city prior to the show, shall include advertising of, and invitations to attend, the exposition of natural and manufactured products of the Southland.

The building trades are organizing a unique feature in the shape of a "own your home," or a "build your own home" exhibit, which is intended to provide a liberal education in the various departments of residence construction and to familiarize the home owner with the costs of the various building materials, with the new conveniences and the many building devices which have been originated in Los Angeles, and which are being adopted in other parts of the country.

As over 500 new industries have been established in Los Angeles since the census, special invitation is extended by the Chamber of Commerce to these new manufacturers to interest themselves in this exposition, and to secure recognition for their products among the home folks, as well as from the visitors from all over the world, who will crowd the market week full of the new commercial spirit that is the distinguishing mark of the new business era in Los Angeles.

The Big Sensation

of the week was the

OVERSUBSCRIPTION

on sales of the

Sandburg Petroleum Co.

Another Over-subscription was announced a few days ago by another good Huntington Beach Company, but afterwards they discovered that they had more stock and are still selling.

Not So With Sandburg

The oversubscription amounted to over 300,000 shares, many orders were declined and many big checks rturned. The company has no more stock for sale.

We Were Fortunate

in buying a sufficient number of shares to fill all of our sales. Each and every client of ours has received, or will receive the full number of shares purchased. The only mistake we made was, that we are unable to secure any stock for ourselves. OUR ORDER FOR PERSONAL STOCK WAS TURNED DOWN.

Personal Pride

We take a personal pride in the results of the sale of the Sandburg stock. We picked it for and our clients are getting the benefits.

Other Opportunities

The entire district, along the coast, including San Pedro, Signal Hill, Seal Beach, Huntington Beach and Newport, will be fully explored. We keep in close touch with developments and are in position to give our clients the very best information obtainable.

Another Huntington Beach Co.

is now offering its stock for sale that we look upon with considerable favor. Ask us about it.

COUNTRY CLUB FOR MONROVIA ASSURED.

ORGANIZERS TO BUY SIXTY-ACRE TRACT; PROJECT WILL COST ABOUT $90,000.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONROVIA, May 28.—A country club for Monrovia, with a $25,000 clubhouse, sixty acres of grounds, golf course, tennis courts and all the appointments of a modern institution of its kind, was assured for Monrovia today with the announcement by Rex P. Harbert, local realty dealer, and A. I. Mellenthin, vice-president of the National Bank of Monrovia, that the purchase price of the grounds had been agreed upon with the Bradbury Estate, from which a sixty-acre tract east of Monrovia will be bought. The land averages $700 an acre, and will cost $40,000. The whole property, including clubhouse, real estate and the work upon the links, courts, etc., will represent an expenditure of $90,000.

Solid financial backing to the big project is assured with the purchase of memberships and stock by Wm. Baird, former president of the National Bank of Monrovia and one of the big financial figures of Wyoming; F. E. Kenaston, millionaire president of the Minneapolis Threshing Machine Co.; J. B. Stair, vice-president of the First National Bank of Azusa; C. L. Dunham, president of the First National Bank of Arcadia, and others. Both Mr. Baird, at his country place in Duarte, and Mr. Kenaston, for the past six months a resident of Monrovia, each purchased a $5000 block of stock in addition to their club memberships.

It is the purpose of the club organizers to sell $350 memberships to the total of 200. This will bring in actual cash to the amount of $50,000. The remaining $40,000 will be financed through a bond issue that will be retired over a period of years. The bonds will be interest bearing, and will be worth something like $1000 for each $350 invested when the issue is finally retired. This makes the club not only a big addition to the social and sports life of the community, but an attractive financial investment as well.

The sixty-acre tract of the Bradbury estate that will be carved into golf courses and tennis courts lies just east of the Monrovia city limits and south of Huntington Drive.

Contracts Let to Construction of Twenty Homes.

That Los Angeles home-building activities, in view of the present demand for accommodations, will continue throughout this summer without interruption is the belief of Victor Girard, who reports having just made contracts for the erection of twenty new dwellings at Walnut Park and West Adams Place. The recent price reductions in several basic lines of building materials, in his opinion, justifies operations on a more liberal scale. Moreover, he is convinced that any cessation of home building at this time probably will mean another house shortage next winter. At a meeting recently of Los Angeles firms allied with the building industry he strongly advocated the erection of more homes of five, six and seven rooms as a wise protective measure. Those to be erected at Walnut Park and West Adams Place will be of this type, a number of frame construction and several of modernized adobe.

The Girard company's main offices in the H. W. Hellman Building have just been enlarged by additional quarters to accommodate the sales organization. John M. Lyle, sales manager, is in charge of this department and also directs the Girard excursions conducted from the three downtown branch offices. According to Lyle's records, more than 4000 persons visited Walnut Park and West Adams Place on these excursions during April and the first half of May.

LEASE STORE ON GRAND.

The Helsbels California Company has leased the ground floor storeroom at 1028 South Grand avenue for State headquarters and distributing center for Helsbels, a new automobile theft alarm. The Helsbels company have already moved into their new location and will be open for business in a few days. They are preparing to open branch offices in San Francisco and San Diego. Officers of the company are: J. M. Campbell, president; F. Babbitt, secretary and E. S. Schultz, treasurer. The lease on the property at 1028 South Grand, owned by H. E. Nelles, was negotiated by Ralph L. Foehl, of the sales and leasing department of the W. Ross Compbell Company.

BUNGALOW SOLD.

The McCarthy Company, which is erecting a number of bungalows in the southwestern portion of the city, reports sale of a number of these structures before completion. L. R. Ricewray, realty broker, has sold a bungalow for the McCarthy Company at 920 West Florence avenue to Mrs. Phebe Harter. Several duplex bungalows at Normandie and Fifty-first streets have also been leased, it is reported. Four additional double bungalows are to be erected by the McCarthy Company in this vicinity.

NEW RECORD IN BUILDING FOR HARBOR.

Permits Issued During First Three Weeks of May Exceed Half Million in Value.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, May 28.—The building program for May at Los Angeles Harbor has broken the best previous record in the history of the city building department, it was announced yesterday by Building Inspector Charles E. Boits, chief of the building department at the harbor.

Permits have been issued for more than $500,000 worth of buildings at Los Angeles Harbor since May 1, smashing all records for that part of the city. The best previous month was in April, when the permits soared over the $300,000 mark. That the harbor district is now experiencing a building boom is shown by the figures for the last few months.

The first three weeks of May were sufficient to break every previous record for buildings there. The issuance of a permit for the erection of a three-story administration building for the Union Oil Company, at Wilmington, to cost $305,000, sent the May figures far above the best previous month on record.

Among the largest permits issued during the month, besides the Union Oil permit, were the following:

Eighteen stores on Seventh street, between Center and Mesa streets, for George H. Peck, to cost $18,000; four stores at 315-21 Sixth street, for R. F. Feldmeier of Colorado Springs, to cost $13,800; garage at Thirteenth street and Pacific avenue, for J. Harris, to cost $9000; bungalow court at Fortieth street and Pacific avenue, from R. A. Sanford, to cost $14,000. Among the contemplated improvements for the harbor are a three-story, class-B hotel building by George H. Peck, to be built on Seventh street, between Palos Verdes and Center; four-story, class-B hotel, in the same block as the above, for Hickman Brothers.

The contract has been let for a one-story brick store building to be erected at Sixth street and Pacific avenue, for A. Goldstein, at a cost of $31,000. The building will be 200 by 50 feet in size.

Another building planned for the near future will be the new home of the sailors' union, at Seventh and Palos Verdes streets, to cost in the neighborhood of $50,000. The seamen's union has already purchased the site for their new home.

Improvements Being Made on Mountain Resort.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CALIFORNIA HOT SPRINGS, May 28.—Construction of a large building at the swimming plunge has been started, and with its completion, about the first of June, a noteworthy addition will have been made to this popular resort. The lower floor of the building will be used as dressing-rooms, equipped with showers, while lockers will be provided for the convenience of guests. An ice cream parlor and restaurant will be constructed on the upper floor, with galleries for spectators. The plunge, 60 by 90 feet, filled with the water from the mineral springs, is a recent improvement and one of the most popular of the resort.

Other late improvements are seventeen bungalow housekeeping cottages, three hotel bungalows, and re-decoration of the hotel proper, including new furnishings.

California Hot Springs, formerly called Deer Creek Hot Springs, has been known to people of the San Joaquin Valley for thirty years. About ten years ago, the present management began improving the property by building more hotel accommodations and cottages and can now comfortably care for from 500 to 600 people at a time, during the season. The resort is reached over a picturesque mountain road, which winds around the hills from Porterville and Ducor into the heart of a deep canyon, a distance of twenty-eight miles.

Chicago Prepares for Big Crowd at July Convention.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

CHICAGO, May 28.—To prevent confusion among the thousands who will attend the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, at Chicago, from July 12 to 15, and in other ways to assist in the handling of the huge body of realtors, a corps of sixty young men, assistant sergeant at-arms, is being formed. Robert D. Clow, Jr., of Camden, N. J., as sergeant-at-arms, will head the corps.

The assistant sergeants-at-arms will be on duty at the Auditorium Theater, at the entrances to the theater, and among the audience. Incidentally, one of their duties will be to see that no one enters the convention hall, who has not registered and can not show the proper credentials. The attendance this year will be so great that only those who have registered will be permitted in the hall. The assistant sergeants-at-arms are being "recruited" from the United States and Canada.

DAILY TRADE TALK.

Week in Review; Convention Aftermath; Business and Financial News.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

Another trade month is ended. Friday was really the milestone for very little business was transacted yesterday. Exchanges and business houses generally throughout the financial districts of the leading cities were closed, while in Los Angeles all who found it possible to do so took advantage of the three-day holiday. Tomorrow practically everything will remain closed.

At the very successful convention of California bankers which ended yesterday at Coronado Trade Talk was afforded an oportunity to come into contact with men from every section of California and from eastern centers whose ears are very closely attuned to business trends, and it was gratifying to find in every instance ample corroboration of these preachments for some time past: i.e., that business is upon an upward swing; that readjustment is proceeding towards a normal balance; that credits are easier, and that foreign trade, upon which much of prosperity depends is gradually coming back.

Eastern bankers in attendance upon the convention were a unit in declaring that California has come through this period with credit to herself, and with fewer hurts than any of the centers on the other side of the Big Hills. They unite in agreeing that empire is still moving westward, and that California, and especially Southern California will very soon assume a commanding position in the manufacturing and export world.

The necessity for providing outlet for our surplus goods was emphasized over and over again, and this apparently, can only be provided through a financing of European importers on long-term credits. One of the most significant statements of the convention was made by the president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles, when he said, in effect, that because of the disruption and disorganization of foreign trade which has come about since the $100,000,000 finance corporation was launched a few months ago it would be practicable to proceed with the plans of that corporation under a reduced capitalization. Difficulty in raising so huge a sum has been all that has delayed the functioning of this plan, and if, as Mr. Robinson suggested, it may now be started in a smaller way, and grow with the requirements, one of the big obstacles towards relieving our congested channels of export will have been removed.

Ever since the war California bankers have been talking, and in a measure working, towards the development of a more co-operative entente, and in the convention last week no note was struck more often or more cordially than the triune chord, "Organization, Co-operation, Preparation."

There are now more than 800 members in the California Banker's Association, about three-quarters of whom were in attendance at the convention and although delegates were present from the stricken cotton belt, and the more or less uncertain bean district, and from localities resting under the heavy hand of Jack Frost, it was stimulating to find at every hand expression and demonstration of that constructive optimism which has brought them through a trying period and which has now set their feet in firmer paths. In a word, the banks of California are under a triple A classification.

RESERVE BANK STATEMENT.

According to the comparative statement of condition at the close of business May 25, total gold reserves held by the Twelfth Federal Reserve Bank were $193,224,000 a loss of less than $1,000,000 from the preceding week and a gain of $49,535,000 over the corresponding date a year ago. Other totals are: Bills on hand, $171,101,000; earning assets, $183,010,000; total resources, $416,387,000. This compares with $417,728,000 for the preceding week and with $401,063,000 for the corresponding period in 1920. Total deposits, $120,497,000, an increase of $2,000,000 for the week. Federal Reserve notes in actual circulation, $234,395,000. Discount rates on all classes of paper unchanged at 6 per cent.

For all of the reserve banks on the same date there was a gold reserve of $2,392,947,000 as compared with $2,378,906,000 for the preceding week and $1,953,103,000 for the corresponding week a year ago.

The ratio of total reserves to deposit and Federal Reserve note liabilities combined was 57.6 per cent as compared with 56.8 per cent for the week before, and the ratio of gold reserves to Federal Reserve notes in circulation after setting aside 35 per cent against deposit liabilities was 71.7 per cent, which compares with 70.4 per cent for the preceding week.

GOODYEAR AND COTTON.

The Goodyear interests are withdrawing from the corporation's large landed and cotton interests heretofore held in the Salt River Valley, Arizona, in which they have been represented by the Southwest Cotton Company.

There has been transfer of the Southwest company's interests at Litchfield, including 15,280 acres, and of the company's gins and oil mills at Phoenix, Mesa, Tempe, Glendale, Tolleson, Gilbert, Peoria and Sarivol to the Valley Ranch Company, a new corporation headed by Guy P. Nevitt, attorney for the Southwest organization. A controlling interest is to be held by the Southwest company, with the balance available for sale, the old company accepting the new company's notes for $710,000.

The value of the property affected is set at $3,250,000, nearly $2,000,000 of the sum represented by land. It is announced that this land under the reorganization, is to be planted to various crops and that cotton will not be the only crop, as in the past.

The Litchfield ranch, twenty miles west of Phoenix, in the lower Agua Fria valley, includes a model town and is reached by its own railway from the Arizona Eastern.

Private advices say that the Southwest Company's big ranch at Goodyear, thirty miles southeast of Phoenix, is to be platted for sale to small farmers, as a feature in the general liquidation of Goodyear assets under the new organization.

IN THE RESERVE DISTRICT.

John Perrin, Federal reserve agent for the Twelfth District bank said yesterday that outstanding developments in the district during the past month were the marked increase in building activity, particularly in Southern California and the government forecast of a winter wheat crop of 66,000,000 bushels, the largest in the history of the district, and 10 per cent in excess of last year's yield.

Bank clearings and debits to individual accounts were approximately 15 per cent less. Business failures were about the same in number and slightly greater in liabilities than those for the corresponding month last year. There has been a slight expansion in loans to customers reported by member banks due to agricultural and other seasonal spring activities.

Department store net sales in Los Angeles increased 3.4 per cent but in all other principal cities except Oakland there was an average decrease in value of 4.8 per cent. Oakland showed an increase of 1.4 per cent. Net sales in the eight lines of wholesale trade reporting ranged from a decrease of 7.8 per cent in the case of stationery to 36.2 per cent for groceries.

The total hay crop in the district is estimated by the United States Department of Agriculture at 16,535,000 tons. The estimated production in 1920 was 17,685,000 tons.

Deciduous fruit crops in all States of the district have suffered to some extent from frost damage. In California it is estimated that cherries will approximate 66 per cent of last year's yield; pears 70 per cent; apricots, 45 per cent, plums, 62 per cent, and peaches, 71 per cent. Apples in California are reported to have suffered less than the stone fruits, being 79 per cent of last year's crop.

STATE BANKS.

Charles F. Stern, superintendent of banks, in presenting a comparative statement says that the State banks of California are stronger in resources by $123,189,000 than they were a year ago; their working capital has increased $22,759,000, and their gross deposits have passed the $1,250,000,00 mark, showing an increase of $91,455,000.

Savings deposits have increased since January 1 by $9,326,000. In addition to the increase in resources California investors have put scores of millions in bonds and other securities for the financing of home enterprises. This is money which would otherwise have gone into the savings banks, but which is here serving a useful purpose, and has made California the best investment securities market per capita in the country during the last year.

"These figures," the superintendent writes Trade Talk, "carry a message of congratulation to our people. On the basis of the past and present performance we need have no fear for the future."

Following is the condition of the State banks of California as of April 28, 1921.

	March 31, 1920.	April 28, 1921.
Resources	$1,347,290,000	$1,470,479,000
Capital, surplus and undivided profits..	134,295,000	157,054,000
Loans	754,385,000	872,925,000
Bonds	332,018,000	371,750,000

NEW OIL COMPANY.

A group of Los Angeles business men have incorporated the Federal Consolidated Oil Company, and will undertake to drill on ten acres in the Huntington field. The properties held by the company comprise four leases within 800 feet of the Huntington Central well and adjacent to the property of the Pantages Central. The property is sufficiently large to permit the drilling of eight wells. Under the terms of the company organization, the Federal Consolidated must pay to its stockholders as dividends 50 per cent of all net profits every thirty days, and not more than 50 per cent of the profits can be used for new development work.

Dr. C. W. Bozarth, owner of large oil interests in Texas, is the president of the company. Other officials include T. A. Welshans, vice-president; P. W. Lacy of the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, treasurer; A. W. Figg-Hoblyn, secretary and treasurer of B. B. Bell & Co., secretary, and C. S. Anderson, attorney for the Hammond Lumber Company, director.

LITERARY REVIEW.

Each week contributes its share of important analytical and discoursive articles on live business and trade topics. An especial effort is made to collate and have these available for ready access in the sociological section of the Los Angeles Public Library. Some of the best of the week's offerings are:

Article on the industries and resources of Lower California, by Philip S. Rush.—[Dun's International Review, June.

Discussion of proposed tax on undistributed profits. Motor car industry dangerously inflated, says manufacturer. New banking methods must respond to new banking needs; an argument for branch banking and the general adoption of bankers' acceptances.—[Annalist, May 16.

United States lumber in Latin America. Oil in Venezuela. Alcohol as a motor fuel in Brazil. The trade situation and exchange, by the secretary of the National Foreign Trade Council.—[Pan-American Magazine, May.

Comparison of English and American export trade methods. Review of markets: metals, cotton, wool, grain, provisions, rubber, leather, sugar and coffee. An article on the electric heating in industry.—[American Exporter, June.

Income tax law: United States Superior Court defines invested capital. Text of the address of the Comptroller of the Currency to credit men on May 18. F. W. Geble on the influx of gold.—[Chronicle, May 21.

The May number of the Annals is on taxation and public expenditures, with discussions of proposed changes in Federal taxation, budgetary procedure, indemnities and Allied debts, by Daniel C. Roper, John S. Herd, H. L. Lutz and others.—[Annals, May.

Statistics in business, by Walter Blokell. Practical organization of industry, by Clinton E. Woods, an industrial engineer. Why a sales tax? by B. S. Orcutt. International financial relationships. Problems for the business executive.—[Administration, May.

Cotton crop in Lower California. Mexican garbanzo crop damaged. Hydrogenation of oils in Japan. Quinine culture in the Philippines. Transportation difficulty in Mexico. Polish oil and regulations for export. New oil field in Mexico. Economic situation in Cuba.—[Commerce Reports, May 16, 17, 18 and 20.

THE COUNTRY OVER.

Variations and contrasts in business conditions continue in all parts of the Southwest, but improvement of the general financial situation goes forward steadily, accompanied by favorable psychological indications.

In the southeastern part of the country, of which Atlanta is the hub, the past week is reported to have been one of the most active retail merchants have enjoyed since the first of the year. There is a well-sustained demand for goods from country merchants; collections are better; many old accounts have been liquidated; warmer weather has proved a great stimulant.

From St. Paul comes word that crop conditions show continued improvement; buying has increased, and with ten more days of good weather wheat maturity will be assured about July 1, and before the period when drought, blight and rust are likely to occur.

There are unmistakable signs that the so-called consumers' strike is gradually wearing itself out, and there is a distinct feeling that the period of readjustment is drawing towards its final stages, and that prices have receded to a point where further fluctuations will be of the normal ebb and flow of trade in a normal market.

Except in the Los Angeles district there is still a large deficiency in building operations. This is due to strikes and the contention of many eastern contractors that prices of materials continue out of reach.

In Detroit the Board of Commerce is organizing to push home construction and will arrange to finance large operations.

From Chicago and St. Louis come reports of continued "spotty" conditions and contrasting signs of improvement and depression. Dullness in one field of commerce is relieved by brightness in another. Detroit reports are extremely optimistic.

Pittsburg is witnessing a series of wage reductions in the steel business due to the continued poor market for steel products. Cleveland reports a slow, but steady gain in employment, in production and in sales. Trade prospects in the Orient are said to be bright.

All sections of the country agree in reporting improvement in the banking situation, with liquidation of loans making remarkable headway. Farmers are not borrowing as freely as in former years. They are, therefore, making a cheaper crop than usual.

ORANGES.

LOS ANGELES, May 28.—The demand for California Valencia oranges continues heavy and as a result, sales are keeping pace with shipments, leaving practically no surplus of unsold fruit in the market. Advices from the eastern trade state that Valencias are giving excellent satisfaction, as are the remaining supplies of navels and miscellaneous varieties of oranges.

F.o.b. quotations, usual terms, range from $2.75 to $3 per box on Northern California Valencias, and $3 to $3.25 on Southern stock.

Cash quotations are on a basis of $2.85 to $3.10 per box, according to sizes and district.

Packers are now paying growers 5 cents per pound for Valencias in Orange county districts. The price in interior districts range from $2 to $2.25 per hundred pounds on the trees.

The heavy rains the latter part of last week and beginning of this week came at an opportune time for the citrus industry. Shipments were held back sufficiently to give renewed strength to the situation and in addition the groves received a beneficial cleaning. Groves that have a light setting of fruit are expected to show considerable gain in the size of the fruit, but where there is a heavy setting, the late rains will probably not change the size situation.

Taking the navel deal as a basis, shippers feel that the Valencia situation should show a correspondingly even tendency and with shipments well regulated, prices should advance.

There are about 125 cars of navels and miscellaneous varieties of oranges remaining for shipment and about 275 cars out that are unsold. Valencias will then have the field.

LEMONS.

Rising temperature throughout the East has caused lemon prices to soar. The trade has been buying for immediate wants only and were caught without supplies, hence the scramble for supplies at the first touch of summer weather.

F.o.b. quotations are on a basis of $5 to $5.50 per box on best brands.

Auction sales the past week have shown as high as $9.70 per box.

There are 40,500 boxes of foreign lemons on hand and available for sale within the next thirty days.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, May 28.—The stock market experienced another week of irregular and shifting movements influenced almost wholly by professional operations. The net result was inconclusive.

Dealings were moderate in the aggregate, making allowance for the holiday, but what they lacked in volume, was balanced by breadth, many usually dormant or obscure issues changing hands.

Price changes were governed mainly by such familiar factors as additional dividend omissions, higher money tendencies unfavorable statements of earnings submitted by several prominent industrial and specialty companies. Rails furnished the only stimulating features, the increased Chicago, Burlington and Quincy dividend being accompanied by financial reports which indicated some of the leading systems were gradually solving the problem of excessive operating expenses.

The addresses of Elbert H. Gary and other captains of industry before the American Iron and Steel Institute confirmed what was generally known concerning the status of the steel trade.

Questions of international banking and foreign trade, which entered largely into the conference between the administration and leading financial interests were expected soon to take definite form.

The reported desire of Federal authorities that future foreign loans be conditioned on purchases of our goods and payment of existing obligations presented new aspects in the international credit situation.

The collapse of foreign exchange, especially severe in the British rate, was regarded by dealers as evidence that Germany was preparing to meet her indemnity payments. Reports that private German interests hoped to negotiate a series of loans here probably had their origin in commercial credits recently extended manufacturers of that country.

ARCHITECTS AND BUILDERS WILL CO-OPERATE IN STATE-WIDE MOVEMENT.

Los Angeles architects and builders, through their local organizations this year, expect to actively co-operate in the movement now on throughout California to promote the building of better homes through the extensive use of face brick. They are convinced that the work being done by the national organization of face brick manufacturers, through the use of newspaper advertising, informative literature and permanent brick exhibits to educate the general public, will not only exert a decidedly beneficial influence on the character of residence and commercial buildings, but encourage the construction of more durable and beautiful structures.

The interest of leading architects and builders in the "better home movement" in Southern California, according to local face-brick manufacturers, is resulting in a heavier demand this year for the better grades of brick than has been felt by this important industry in many years. This demand is reflected in building operations in Los Angeles and near-by cities, where recent building permits have shown that a constantly increasing number of brick dwellings and business structures are being erected. The records of the Los Angeles Pressed Brick Company, one of the largest manufacturers of glazed and enameled, plain and ruffled brick in the West, show that the export demand for Los Angeles-made brick is growing considerably to supplement that which comes from all sections of Southern California and Arizona. This company, which operates large plants at Santa Monica and Alberhill, maintains at its Los Angeles building, a permanent exhibit of face-brick and tile products that is just now attracting many intending home builders, architects and engineers. The company arranged this exhibit to show the many ways in which face brick may be applied to residence and commercial building construction, and what economies and architectural advantages result.

FOR MORE ART.

New English Beauty Movement Extends from Tea Pots to Cities.

Posters, jugs, statues, streets and furniture are all to be made beautiful, if the movement now on foot among British artists succeeds. In both England and Scotland, organizations exist whose object is to bring art out of the museums and into the life of the people; and the London Times, whose art critic recently aroused much interest by an article on this subject, has been consulting some of their members and other widely-known English architects, sculptors, painters and designers for specific suggestions, which range from better teapots to better cities.

A member of the London Design and Industries Association, whose name is withheld, demanded more artistic teapots, chairs and shop windows.

One of the artistic reforms most generally demanded is in the quality of the posters and advertisements, many of which are still offensive. The decoration of public buildings with frescoes by great artists, as in the Royal Exchange, the Houses of Parliament and recently in the hall of the Skinners' Company, has also been received with much approval.

Architects have intimated that improvements in the designs for public houses would offer a sure way of appealing to the people, and a recent competition consisted exclusively of such designs.—[Living Age.

Open Plant to Enamel Glass and Fixtures.

R. A. Rowan & Co., through its rental department reports the leasing for a long term of years of the building at 620-624 East Fourth street to E. R. Pillet, who will establish in the building a plant for the decoration of gowns, glass and metal. These decorations are placed on bowls by a spraying brush which operates under air pressure. The enamel dries instantly and, it is claimed, is acid-proof, and retains its coloring under artificial or natural light. The process is also applied to the decoration of gowns and costumes for motion picture companies.

Mr. Pillet will install entirely new equipment in the Fourth street building. A contract was recently closed between Mr. Pillet and a large eastern electrical fixture manufacturing firm, which will send its glassware and fixtures to the local plant to be decorated by this process, after which the completed product will be shipped by Mr. Pillet to the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast States. Contracts have also been closed with local automobile accessory manufacturing concerns through which their products are to be decorated in this manner before they are shipped to other parts of the country.

The Rowan Company also reports a lease by M. Drake Perry to Farris W. Phillips of a store room at 502 West Fifth street, in the Auditorium Hotel, for a high-class grill. Mr. Phillips formerly operated a number of grills in Chicago.

PLAN FINE HOMES IN NEW FOOTHILL TRACT.

P. E. Mason, son of the late George Mason, one of the pioneer business men of Los Angeles, has purchased a large lot, 100 by 280 feet, at the head of Western avenue in Griffith Park Entrance tract, according to William Mead, owner of the tract. The property purchased by Mr. Mason is situated at an elevation, which gives a panoramic view of the city. Mr. Mason plans the erection of a fine home in the near future. An adjoining lot, fronting on Live Oak Drive, has been bought by R. De Steigner of Kansas City, Mo. The lot, to be improved with a fine residence, has a frontage of 300 feet on Live Oak Drive, with a depth of 300 feet. Miss Florence Yoch, landscape gardner, has been retained by both Mr. Mason and Mr. Steigner to develop the grounds. William L. Pollard of New York City, has purchased a lot in the same tract, 60 by 250 feet, fronting on Park Entrance Drive. Mr. Pollard will return from New York next October to improve the property.

LEASE NEW STRUCTURE TO RISE ON SIXTEENTH.

According to an announcement made yesterday, P. N. Connerton and B. H. Brown have secured a long-term lease on a one-story brick building to be erected at 137 West Sixteenth street. The structure, which will be 51 by 120 feet in size, will be built by the Frank Foley Company. Connerton and Brown, who operate under the name of the Reliable Electric Plating Works, manufacture and finish automobile accessories and hardware. The property is owned by Mrs. Julia Mackie. The leasing negotiations were handled by R. O. Searle and Burt Richardson of the commercial properties department of the W. A. Heitman Company.

STUDIO TO BE BUILT ON WESTERN AVENUE.

Plans are now being prepared for an attractive studio building to be erected on Western avenue, between Melrose avenue and Marathon street by Charles W. Wagner for G. W. Miller, owner of the property. The building, planned to house a photographic studio, which will make a specialty of children's photographs, will be of English architecture. The theme of "Mother Goose" and fairyland will be carried out in the exterior decorations, and in the mural decorations of the nursery. Plans will also include an attractive rustic garden, with a pool and fountain, as well as service rooms, dressing-rooms, and play rooms. The studio will be conducted by J. C. Cooley.

APARTMENT TRANSFERS.

H. E. Dominy & Co., hotel brokers, report the sale of the Crest Apartments, at 1325 South Hope street, by Mrs. J. G. Longfellow to Mrs. Jennie Wood. A new lease for eight years was taken by Mrs. Wood. H. B. Pangborn of the Dominy Company represented both parties in the transaction. Other recent sales made by the firm are as follows: To C. C. Weingand, King George Hotel of San Diego; to J. Earl Brigance and A. B. Martin, furniture and lease on the Owens Apartments at Orange and Valencia streets. Alterations and improvements on the property are being planned by Messrs. Brigance and Martin.

FOR KEEPSAKE.

A Newcastle woman, who is not a bit backward in declaring she is a Democrat, entertained two Civil War veterans during the recent State Grand Army of the Republic encampment, and when it came time for the two to leave for their homes she made it plain that she did not wish any money for housing them during their stay. They insisted on paying her, and she held out against accepting money. Finally, the two old soldiers hit on a plan of giving her something as a remembrance. One handed her his souvenir badge and the other presented her with a Harding button. Despite her political prejudice, she will keep it.—[Indianapolis News.

SAVING CAR FARE.

A downtown dairy lunch had been having very good sales on a special sandwich. It was just a sliced hard boiled egg and ham between two slices of bread, but it looked good. No one had ever questioned the value of it, so many paid 20 cents apiece for the sandwiches very willingly.

But one day a waiter noticed that a girl who had been in the habit of buying one every day at lunch, was buying just a plain ham sandwich, which was just 10 cents, and a hard boiled egg, which was 5 cents. And as she sat down at the table where there were a number of other girls, she said: "Here's where I save my car fare home tonight by slicing an egg."—[Indianapolis News.

Is easily the most active stock in the Huntington Beach field today selling at the price of ten cents a share. You have seen Sandburg Petroleum advance rapidly from ten cents to seventeen; you have seen Huntington Central advance from ten cents to as high as forty-five; you have seen Pantages stock selling way above the market that it was originally put out at, and we predict that you are shortly going to see Huntington Midway sell at a price very much higher than ten cents per share.

It is getting to the point now where it is very evident that Huntington Midway will soon be gone, and we advise your immediate purchase at the present price.

Monday, Holiday on the Chicago Grain Market.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, May 28.—A large part of the trading in grains Saturday was in evening up contracts for the two holidays, Monday being Memorial Day and a legal holiday. Indications of a large run of grain, 1700 to 2000 carloads of all kinds, mainly wheat, corn and oats, kept operators from getting too bullish, yet there was no great selling pressure and values held within a moderate range. At the last May wheat was 2⅝c and July ⅝c higher. Corn showed the most strength, with gains of ⅜@½c. Oats finished ⅛c lower to ⅛@¼c higher, rye ¼c lower to ⅛c higher, and barley was ⅝@1c higher.

The feature of the week was the big advance and reaction in wheat, and May after a range of almost 25c finished 3½c higher, while July was unchanged from the close of a week ago. Corn gained 1⅛@3½c, oats lost ½c, rye is 9c higher for May and 1⅛@1⅝c lower on other months, and barley ⅛@1¼c higher.

Prospects of cooler weather for the coming week and with occasional showers, combined with good receipts, created a rather easy feeling in the wheat market, yet offerings were not heavy and were fairly absorbed.

Crop news was not materially changed from that on previous days. From Ohio came reports that wheat is heading short. Inglis reported from Missouri that the uplands had an average and the bottom lands below an average winter wheat crop. No rain was reported in the Southwest. Buying of July wheat was headed by half a dozen of the big commission houses, while the selling on the advance was by another set, the Northwest being well represented. The range was 3⅛c, with 1.29 the top and the close 1.28@1.28¼.

Trade in May wheat was light, with not more than 250,000 bushels handled in all, at a range of 1.65@1.69½, prices changing 1c between trades at times. The finish was 1.69¼. There were deliveries of 113,000 bushels on May contracts and receipts of 101 cars, with 300 to 400 cars expected Tuesday, the bulk of which has already been placed through sales of May. Cash houses were the principal sellers of May.

Corn had a strong undertone, despite the good receipts, 383 cars, with indications of 1000 to 1100 cars Tuesday. The market had good support from leading cash interests, while the selling was by hedgers and speculators. May was up to 63⅝ and closed at almost the top. It was 1⅝c under July, and regarded as relatively cheaper to buy the May and get the cash grain.

Light offerings of oats early, with a little local buying, made the highest prices, with July up to 41⅝ and September to 43, with a decline of 1c in the latter, later, on selling by a few of the big houses, Lewis leading, while on the break he turned to the buying side, and the close was at 42⅜@42½. Receipts were 107 cars. Crop reports were mixed.

New York and Baltimore exporters bought July rye, and the Northwest were sellers. Prices advanced 1⅛c early, but it was all lost later, although the close of 121 showed a net gain of ⅛c. Interest in May was light. There were deliveries of 25,000 bushels in May trades.

GULLS PROTECTED FOR GOOD OF HEALTH.

Edward Hatch, Jr., who owns Four Brothers Island, near Burlington, Vt., a rugged rock that has become famous as the breeding place of sea gulls, yesterday signed up a Harvard graduate for the lonesome job of herding gulls during the nesting season, a private philanthropy in which Mr. Hatch has been engaged for some years, says the New York Tribune.

There were 1600 applicants for the position as the result of the insertion of an advertisement in New York City newspapers, which read:

"Wanted—A man to live alone on an island; inland lake; eight miles shelter, boat, etc., furnished; no work, no compensation. Address Summertime, 600 Tribune Building, New York.

"I have no faith in the theories of Thomas A. Edison, when it comes to selecting the man for the place," said Mr. Hatch yesterday. "I have found in my experience that a search leads to the college man. He may start slowly, but he has the equipment and once started he goes fast and straight.

"That is why I selected a college man to be warden of the gulls. The job is one that requires aptitude and judgment such as an educated man may be expected to possess."

Among applicants for the wardenship of a lonely island were naturalists, lawyers, poets, authors, artists, ex-soldiers, sailors and ornithologists.

Mr. Hatch protects the breeding place of the gulls because he believes they are of the greatest value in conserving public health. He has been interested for many years in plans ot prevent contamination of the waters of New York Harbor.

It is estimated that there are 200,000 gulls in and about the harbor and each of them is said to consume an average of two pounds of refuse a day. To protect the eggs of nesting gulls and save the young from destruction by vandals, who visit Four Brothers Island, Mr. Hatch has constituted himself protector of the breeding ground. This is the ninth warden appointed.

Matched at Last.

A Chicago man is the possessor of a very red nose. Having completed his business one day he was amusing himself by inspecting the shop windows.

While admiring some ties a little girl came out of the establishment, looked up at him, hesitated a moment, and finally caught him by the sleeve.

"Please will you come into this shop with me for a minute?" she asked.

"Certainly," answered the man.

Arrived at the counter, the little one astonished everyone by remarking:

"There, miss; mother wants some ribbon the same color as this gentleman's nose."—[Unidentified.

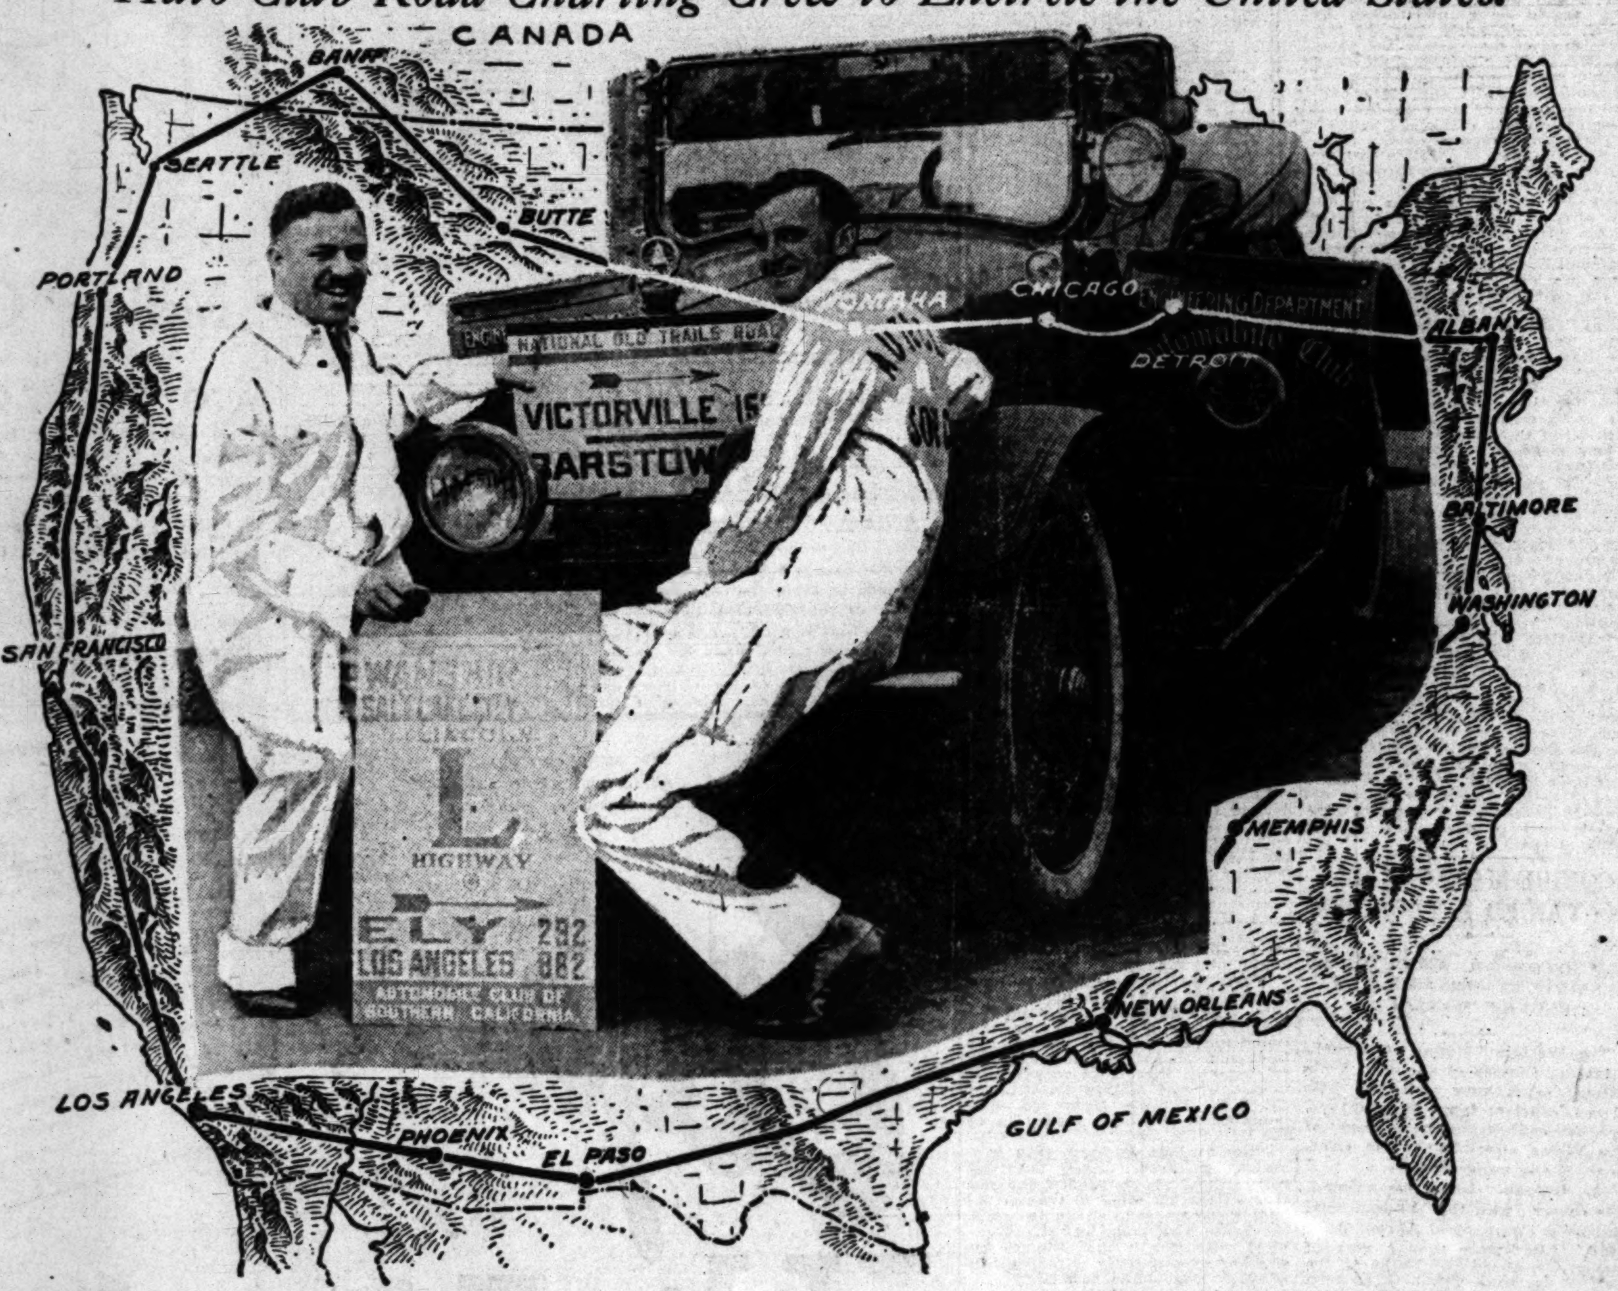
Auto Club Road-Charting Crew to Encircle the United States.



To Give Southern California Motorists Red-hot Information on Roads Everywhere.

That the Automobile Club of Southern California is the largest and livest organization of its kind in the world was proved once more yesterday when O. W. Lewis and D. C. Rhodes started out on a "charting" tour of the United States. Road conditions all over and around the country will be ascertained and information will be wired back to the club for the use of local motorists contemplating transcontinental tours. The sketch by A. B. Dodge of The Times art staff, shows the route to be followed by the crew.

CLUB SENDS ROAD CREW AROUND UNITED STATES.

Local Motorists Will Benefit by the Greatest "Charting" Tour Ever Undertaken.

For the purpose of mapping between 25,000 and 30,000 miles of road, covering thirty-eight States and passing through practically every city in the United States, the Automobile Club of Southern California yesterday inaugurated the greatest "charting" tour ever undertaken.

Leaving Los Angeles, a crew of two men will pass through tier after tier of Southern States, working gradually up the Atlantic seaboard through the New England States, and returning here by way of the Canadian border, including some trips into Canada.

HUGE UNDERTAKING.

It will be an international road-marking trip, the first of its kind ever undertaken by any automobile club in the world.

More than five months will be given over to the dry land "cruise" of the Auto Club's charting car, and after the notes sent in have been checked over, strip maps, such as those for which the club is famous, will be made in Los Angeles for the use of motorists all over the world.

Never before has any automobile organization found itself large enough or powerful enough to be able to send two experts on a trip of such monumental and this tour comes as the climax to another similar, though smaller tour inaugurated by the Southern California club last year, through the Southern and Middle West States only.

IN STRIP MAPS.

In the future, when Mr. Motorist wishes to leave the southern part of the State for some point in New England or in Florida, he will be able to follow his route to its destination by means of "strip" maps, which will give accurate directions over every square yard of the itinerary as prepared by the Auto Club. At the present time, the maps available for such a purpose are not comprehensive, and no maps include the routes along the Canadian border.

No special transcontinental routes are to be followed by "Doug" Rhodes and O. W. Lewis, who are in charge of the charting. Instead, they will endeavor to follow those routes, all selected before they left Los Angeles, which will in the future give the general motoring public the greatest degree of service.

The National Old Trails route has already been charted, sign-posted and mapped by the club, so it will not be necessary to repeat the in- [illegible] The [illegible] to be followed, however, will take them through Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, Alabama, Tennessee, Missouri, Georgia, Florida and the Carolinas.

FURTHER NORTH.

The Lincoln Highway has also been thoroughly covered by the Auto Club as far east as New York City (there isn't any more) and so the attention of Lewis and Rhodes on the return journey will be devoted to the New England States, including Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Vermont. Here data for special strip maps of scenic tours through the Catskills will be secured while the crew is in that section.

Fort Kent, in Maine, will be the point farthest north visited in New England, this being on the Canadian border. The border will again be touched at famous Rouses Point.

Beginning the return journey to California, the crew will pass through the Great Lakes region, touching at all important lake ports.

FIRST PLUNGE.

The first plunge into Canada will be made at Pembina, in North Dakota. From here the club men will tour as far north as Winnipeg, securing data for maps covering a trip any motorist may care to make from the United States to that city.

However, from Shelby, in Montana, the real dive into Canada will be made, as the club car will pass as far as Banff and Lake Louise for road map material, returning to the United States by way of Bonners Ferry in Idaho and thence through the Coeur d'Alene region.

A single line of travel will be followed through the State of Washington from Spokane by way of Colfax to Walla Walla and so into Oregon via Pendleton, where the round-ups come from. The club crew will reach Portland by way of Mt. Hood and Oregon City, returning to the California line through Salem, Eugene and Roseburg.

A trip of this magnitude is made possible because of the support given the organization by interested auto owners in Southern California, club officials point out. But it would not be possible if the club had not already brought its system of "strip" road maps down to such a fine point that they can be turned out with such accuracy that they are internationally adaptable.

TO FINISH WORK.

During the month of May the club crew expects to complete work embracing the cities of Blythe, Phoenix, Bisbee, El Paso, Fort Stockton, Ozona and Laredo.

At the end of June it is hoped that work will have progressed as far as Atlanta, including Houston, New Orleans, Memphis, Dayton, Brimingham and other cities between Arizona and the gif. In July the club car will move on through the southern eastern States including Baltimore, Philadelphia, Atlantic City, Boston and New York.

During August the charting work will be continued through Hartford, Albany, Rochester, Cleveland, Detroit, Grand Rapids, Milwaukee, Omaha, Winnipeg, Butte and Helena, Mont. In September the Lake Louise country will be mapped, and also the States of Washington and Oregon.

The maps, when they are completed, will be available for the general motoring public in order to facilitate motoring, although they are prepared primarily for members of the Automobile Club of Southern California. What final distribution of them will be made is to be determined by club directors.

FIGURES SHOW A BIG MOTOR TRAFFIC.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK (N. Y.) May 27.—Late figures compiled by the United States Bureau of Public Roads estimate the automobile passenger travel of 1920 as close to 5,000,000,000 persons. Fully 4,932,000,000 persons were carried by automobile during the twelve months, as compared with 1,234,222,889 revenue passengers on the railroads. Motor trucks hauled 1,200,000,000 tons of freight, or nearly half the amount carried by rail lines, which totaled 2,504,000,000 tons. The motor car passenger figures increased 400,000,000 during 1920, due to increased motor vehicle registration.

Plan to Enforce Law Regulating Weight of Loads.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, May 27.—Although the State motor vehicle law emerged from the last Legislature with practically no changes, passage of Senate bill No. 789, by Senator J. A. Rominger of Long Beach, is regarded by Charles J. Chenu, superintendent of the Motor Vehicle Department, as one of the most important reforms that could have been afforded.

Breaking up the concrete highways of the State by overloaded trucks and vehicles will be stopped with the proper enforcement of this law, Chenu says, and he promises to give such enforcement.

According to the provisions of the law, the weight of a truck is set at 700 pounds channel base measurement. The old law was defective because it did not definitely include the 800-pound per contact inch allowance, and thereby practically made the measure ineffective.

"The department, with the means available," says Chenu, "will endeavor to protect the highways from further destruction by overloaded trucks."

NO REDUCTION IN PAIGE CAR PRICES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO (Ill.) May 27.—In order to put an end to rumors that a price reduction is impending the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company makes the following announcement:

"Last fall—September 28—to be exact, we announced a reduction in price on all Paige models. These reductions were not warranted at the time as we frankly stated in our announcement. They were made in anticipation of a drop in costs of production which we believed to be inevitable.

"That drop actually materialized this spring, but having been anticipated by our recent price cuts, there can be no further reduction in the price of current Paige models and there will be none. In view of the facts stated, any further reduction would not only be unwarranted, but could not be made without sacrifice of quality."

HEAVY SCHEDULE IN STUDEBAKER FACTORY.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SOUTH BEND (Ind.) May 27.—President E. R. Erskine of the Studebaker Corporation is authority for the statement that 8000 cars will be the scheduled production for June. The factories produced and sold 10,000 cars in the first six weeks of the second quarter of 1921 and unfilled orders on hand total 7600 cars.

President Erskine states that the report that prices of the Studebaker cars will be reduced is without foundation.

"No price reductions are in contemplation at the present time," he said.

HUGE CARAVAN UNDER WAY

Motor Car Dealers Invade Bear Lake in Droves for Annual High Jinks.

Recent occasions on which members of the Motor Car Dealers' Association have been called upon for whole-hearted support, namely—The Call of the Open Road, Automobile Day and the Bear Valley Reliability Run and Annual Jinks—show a very commendable spirit of co-operation and spirit of unselfishness on their part, in the opinion of Fred S. Albertson, aggressive head of the organization and who has twice been unanimously elected to its presidency.

"It is the purpose of the organization as a unit to labor for the best interests of all its members and not the individual," he said. "Members are responding to calls for unified action with a spirit of unselfishness that is so commendable that I cannot help but remark upon it. It is this spirit that augurs well for the future."

LOTS OF THEM.

A total of forty-one cars were entered and divided into two teams in the reliability run that started for Bear Valley yesterday morning from Exposition Park at 7 o'clock, and which will be finished tomorrow afternoon at the point of starting at about 4:30. The representation is an excellent one in the opinion of Bert Roberts, the manager of the association, who added, "There would have been others entered were it not for exigencies that arose that could not be prevented. There are more owner drivers in this event than in any similar one held in Southern California."

The members of the committee in charge of the details connected with this event, which it is hoped to make an annual affair with the famous mountain resort as the objective, and who have worked without regard to hours, are Harris M. Hanshue, chairman; T. P. Tupman and Louis M. Foulke.

GAMES OF CHANCE TABOO.

Crap-shooting, "stud" and other chancy games are to be barred absolutely from Uncle Sam's public playgrounds in California this summer.

Gambling of all kinds, even to nickel-matching, is to tabooed in Yosemite and other national parks of the State, according to word received from government officials by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Never again will the lonesome white chip call to its mate in the shadow of the stately redwoods.

Never again will the beetling brow of El Capitan wrinkle at the cries of a father seeking shoes for his baby, for the bones shall not rattle in either Sequoia, General Grant or Yosemite domains. The only rattling that will be done there will be by the thunderclaps around the mountain peaks.

Sad news is also transmitted by the Auto Club to local owners of pet animals, and pet cats in particular. No animal pet shall be a visitor to any of Uncle Sam's garden spots.

Tabby, however, can now pass through the national parks if in a cage but no pet cat may remain over night in the park. People who live in Yosemite or other national playgrounds, may own cats for catching rats, however, if they get a permit from Uncle Sam.

PINK SHEET NEWS SUMMARY

AUTOMOBILES. Durant Motors jump into the limelight once more by taking over the Sheridan plant. Extensive operations planned for new organization and production plans for new Durant car are being rushed.

Advices from motor car manufacturing centers around Detroit indicate that many factories are now running on normal schedule and have orders far ahead of production.

Automobile Club of Southern California sends out road charting crew on a complete circle of the United States. Information on road conditions from all over the country will be wired the club, and strip maps are to be prepared for Southern California motorists contemplating transcontinental trips. The undertaking is the largest ever attempted by any auto club in the world.

New State motor vehicle law regarding weight of loaded trucks to be rigidly enforced, according to officials at Sacramento. Believe that concrete highways can be preserved by seeing that truck loads conform to regulations.

Not only have the National Parks placed a ban on pet animals, but now come out with the assertion that all chancy games are to be heaved immediately into the discard, according to information obtained by the Auto Club.

The Times Auto Club one-day motor trip leads to the ocean at Ventura this Sunday. Ideal locations for picnic lunches line the whole route.

Maxwell climbs Eagle Rock, but the trip is not recommended as a pleasure jaunt for the average motorist.

SPORTS. Capt. Tom Marshall writes his interesting weekly article for trapshooters, hunters and fishermen, and gives many interesting sidelights on many lines of sport.

Latest doing in the realms of chess and checkers, by John Dougherty.

Shotgun Squad Out to Slow Up Motor Thieves.

Tomorrow will mark the beginning of activities on the part of the new "shot-gun squad" of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

This squad is composed of detectives operating the club's theft bureau for the prevention of car thefts and the capture of auto thieves.

A certain type of thief, however, known as the "stripper," who steals cars for the purpose of hiding them in a private garage, where he strips them of tires and accessories at his leisure, has become so active in the past few weeks that sawed-off shotguns are now going to be used to bring him to time if necessary.

It is claimed by club officials that private garage owners, who rent their garage to auto thieves and do not report suspicious actions on the part of those who rent the garages, are aiding the auto thieves to get away with thousands of dollars worth of motorists' property every month.

FRANKLIN PLANT IS HITTING FAST STRIDE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SYRACUSE (N. Y.) May 27.—Reports from the Franklin Motor Car Company show that as early as May 10 the entire production for May had been sold out with the exception of twenty-one cars. That means that every one of the cars to be built in May will be in the hands of consumers or en route to purchasers by June 1. One of the most hopeful signs of the times as far as the Franklin company is concerned, is that this business was widely distributed throughout the entire country. Since February 10 the Franklin factory has been running 100 per cent normal and has been producing forty cars daily. Franklin dealers in February placed 944 cars in the hands of consumers.

TEN-GALLON TIN MAKES BIG HIT.

Getting away from the time-honored five-gallon can and the fifteen-gallon drum, the Panama Lubricants Company of this city recently came out with a new package, which they have very fittingly named the Pennzoil Handitank.

The Handitank is a sturdy, convenient-sized steel tank of ten-gallon capacity. Motor car dealers and motor supply dealers all over the Southwest are very much on the jump supplying the demand for this ingenious package.

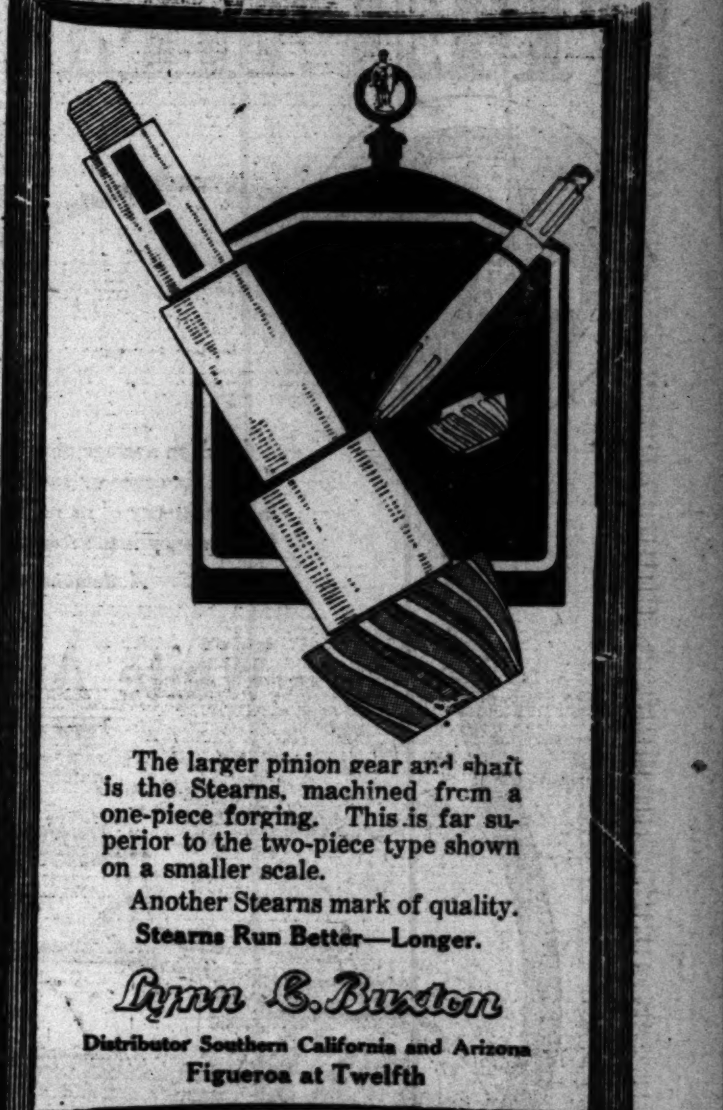
Pennzoil Handitanks are quite good to look at and strike a new note of convenience and usefulness for the home garage.

"We are making a lot of new friends with the Handitank," says Walter Flavell, Pennzoil representative on the row. The new package just exactly fits the needs of the average car owner. It is small enough to be practical and large enough to make bulk prices possible."

NORMAL PRODUCTION.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FLINT (Mich.) May 27.—Normal production is in force at the Chevrolet motor and assembly plants. Following the Chevrolet price reductions, the plant took on 1500 additional men, and the factory is now running full time on a nine-hour-a-day basis. The schedule for the Flint plant is now 500 motors and 300 assembled cars a day.



The larger pinion gear and shaft is the Stearns, machined from a one-piece forging. This is far superior to the two-piece type shown on a smaller scale.

Another Stearns mark of quality.

Radius Rods Are Insurance

The manufacture of steel springs has reached a high state of perfection.

Steel, however perfectly made, nevertheless remains steel. Steel subject to the strain and stress of constant bending under heavy weights is liable to break.

In case of breakage on the truck without radius rods the axle is thrown out of line, the brakes either freeze or all braking effect is lost.

Suppose this happens on a bad canyon grade. Imagine the actual danger to the life of the driver, damage to the truck and its load, the expense and certain loss of time.

Radius rods insure against this. They also preserve alignment at all times and save wear and tear on driving mechanism.

Moreland Trucks are equipped with heavy radius rods with a specially efficient ball and socket suspension.

PLANE KEEPS TAB ON NASH.

Watches Car Buck Its Way to Lake Tahoe.

First to Reach Tallac Over Placerville Road.

Big Quad Truck Lumbers in a Very Close Second.

Another record in western motoring was smashed recently when a Nash six, sent out from San Francisco, proved itself a victor against the winter fastness of the high Sierras and checked into Tallac on Lake Tahoe—the first car to make this trip under its own power by way of the regular Placerville route, according to a report received here by John J. Troy of the Troy Motor Sales, distributor of the Nash six in Southern California.

The Nash checked into Tallac at exactly 2:06 o'clock on May 12, after seven days of the most gruelling ordeal ever undertaken by either man or motor. For the last three days of the journey the party was lost in the mountain fastness of winter, so far as the outside world was concerned, with apparently endless mountains of snow behind and a nequally great wilderness before.

Twice daily reports of the progress of the party were directed from San Francisco, however, through the medium of airplane scouts. As the party was struggling to the summit the airplane scout swept down to within forty feet of the struggling motorists and shouted the first greeting they had received in three days from the world.

The party left May 5, after completing preparations that in themselves assured the success of the trip. Ted O'Day had charge of the crew. He was assisted by Lloyd Lonkey and Edward and William Tarpey. Realizing what was in store for them to a certain degree, the party loaded up a Nash quad with all of the supplies requisite for a long siege—oil, gasoline, bedding and food.

As far as Strawberry the party encountered little or no difficulty. After passing Strawberry and taking the Slippery Ford grade it was a life and death struggle against snow, ice and the elements.

Indicative of the struggle, the party was two days making the first five miles from Strawberry to Phillips. It required another day to negotiate the two and a half miles beyond Phillips, and that night the party camped within half a mile of the summit.

It was just 8:15 o'clock as the party crossed the summit. In the dash from the summit down to Tallac the Nash six quickly outstripped the quad, which arrived nearly a half-hour later an dhad the distinction of being the second motor vehicle to check into Tallac this season by way of Placerville—and a truck at that.

ACQUIRE MANAGER OF VARIED EXPERIENCE.

T. A. O'CONNOR JOINS WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE FORCE AS SERVICE MANAGER.

The Western Motors Company, local distributors of the new Wills Sainte Claire, have added to their already efficient force, T. A. O'Connor, as service manager, formerly of the Willys Overland Pacific Company, in the same capacity.

Mr. O'Connor began his automobile career with the International Harvester Company at Akron, O., in 1910. After more than a year of service he joined the ranks of the Garford company, Elyria, O., as service representative, with headquarters in New York City. In 1915, when the Overland company purchased the Garford plant, Mr. O'Connor was employed by them as assistant to Mr. H. J. Edwards, in the experimental department, designer of the Knight motor.

The company soon felt the need of an inspector in the Middle West and on the Pacific Coast, and Mr. O'Connor traveled the entire territory for a year and a half, then was assigned to the Pacific Coast, with headquarters in San Francisco, for two years and a half, at the end of which time he located with the factory branch in Los Angeles. He has now been here some three years and has won in that time the regard and friendship of all who have come in contact with him.

APPOINTED SUPERVISOR.

A. E. Richmond, for several years in charge of service at the factory, has been appointed supervisor of the Pacific Coast territory for the Chalmers, according to information recently received by the Greer-Robbins Company, Chalmers distributors. Richmond will make his headquarters in San Francisco.

There Are Mighty Few Who Don't Look at the New Moon.

And we're not speaking about the one that parades around the heavens, but the motor car by that name. The new Moon six is attracting wide attention, due to its unusually attractive lines, as well as to its excellent mechanical construction throughout.

Time to Tune up for the Coming Touring Season.

With the tail-end of the rainy season out of the way and the return of real summer weather predicted by the weather man, motorists are now looking forward to the warm months and the many attractive scenic spots to be visited in Southern California.

The usual warning by automobile dealers to owners of cars to have their respective machines "tuned-up" before undertaking a long trip has been sounded many times in the last few weeks. All autoists should safeguard themselves and their cars against breakages which occur on hard trips by having their cars inspected by expert mechanics of the service departments of the local automobile agencies.

"Now that normal conditions have practically been established and with this comes the desire of the business man to get away from the humdrum of the city during the week-end, one of the most successful summer touring seasons is anticipated," said Andrew Baldwin, of the J. V. Baldwin Motor Co., distributors in Southern California of the Columbia six.

"The average business man is a zealous motorist. When Saturday rolls around about the first thought that enters his mind is that of selecting some spot to either go camping or to visit some resort. Complete relaxation is the ultimate desire and consequently to realize this a motor trip is the first step.

"Considerable additions and improvements have been made to our well-known boulevard system. Places which in the past were not accessible due to poor roads have now been placed in closer touch with the motorist. Every owner of an automobile is urged to take advantage of the splendid highways in this part of the State and complete information on camping and road conditions and the installation of new resorts may be obtained through the touring bureau of the Automobile Club.

"However, before setting out on a long week-end jaunt autoists are advised to make sure that the car is in condition to stand the trip. In case any adjustments are needed on Columbias, our staff of service experts are available and thus the driver is insured against unexpected accidents on the road," said Baldwin.

MOTOR TRUCKS GIVE SYSTEMATIC SERVICE.

KISSEL REPRESENTATIVE SAYS ORGANIZED HAULING CAME WITH TRUCK.

"Before the advent of the motor truck, haulage and delivery was conducted in a 'hit or miss' way, whether by wagon or train," says Gilbert Woodill, Pacific Coast representative of the Kissel Motor Car Company.

"There was no system—no means of checking up transportation progress by the hour or day. There was no assurance that goods hauled by horse or wagon would arrive at a certain time.

"Motor truck equipment consists of transportation units which in themselves are efficiency units, and must be operated efficiently and systematically to return the greatest service. Such efficiency unconsciously reacts on the entire department, with the result that out of disorganization comes organization."

JOIN CHANDLER FORCES.

The Chandler sales force of the W. P. Herbert Company, has been recently strengthened by the addition of two new members, Chauncey W. Butler, who has just arrived in Los Angeles from Havana, Cuba, and Peter J. Kennedy, one of the best known automobile salesmen in Los Angeles.

BUY STANDARD PARTS AND AVOID TROUBLE.

"It never pays to buy 'pirate parts,' parts made by other than the manufacturer of your machine, but advertised as 'just as good.' The guarantee is at once voided when you install such parts in your machine," says C. C. Colyear, of the Colyear Motor Sales Company, jobbers of standard units, known the world over.

"There is an old adage that says, 'A chain is no stronger than the weakest link,' which applied to an automobile would imply, 'An automobile is no better than its weakest part.'

"Too often repairs are made from parts taken from the junk piles or are supplied by unscrupulous manufacturers, to the disappointment of car owners as well as to the ultimate loss of the repair and garage man."

Velie Takes the Lea

The most important announcement about motor car prices we have made this year, announcing the vital step Velie has taken to give you complete protection against price fluctuations until October 1, 1921.

LAST Fall the price of Velie 34 was reduced nearly $300 per car. Then Velie guaranteed the new low prices until July 1, 1921, and backed up that guarantee with the famous Velie cash rebate bond.

At about that time several other makers reduced prices because they, like Velie, believed it was the right time from the standpoint of good merchandising to do so.

Velie—and Velie alone—reduced the price, guaranteed the new low price until July first, and backed up this guarantee with a bond given each purchaser at time of purchase.

Velie Dropped Last Fall—many others stayed up

Other makers held to the higher prices, remaining up when the general trend of the market was downward. Most of these makers then guaranteed their prices against reductions until the first of May or June of this year.

Today you open your newspaper and find that this car or that car has come down in price. We urge you to check up and see if the car was reduced last Fall—when Velie prices were reduced—and if it was reduced then be sure to see how much—keeping in mind that Velie (model 34) was reduced nearly $300 per car at that time. Many of the price reductions being announced today do not parallel the one big reduction made by Velie last Fall!

Mack TRUCKS

MACK TRUCK
A Sure Thing
—You Take No Chances

Frequently, when the purchase of a motor truck is considered, an experienced owner will tell the novice not to take a chance. He means by that he should buy a truck that has proved its worth by years of successful operation for others.

Buy a MACK truck and you can take no chances. The MACK has been built by exclusive truck manufacturers for 22 years. There are MACK trucks that have been driven in excess of 300,000 miles and they still are rendering efficient service. Years do not measure the "life" of a truck, but miles do, and you will get more miles at a minimum cost of upkeep from the MACK than any other make of truck.

We would be pleased to inform you about concrete cases of MACK performance. We know these would be of interest. They would prove that MACK buyers are not taking chances.

HANDLES NICELY; GOES FAST

Oldsmobile Eight Performing Well Under All Sorts of Conditions.

"The new eight-cylinder Oldsmobile, model 47, is designed to fill the demand for a light, fast car of exceptional performance with a speed range on high gear from three to sixty-five miles per hour, and with a smoothness of operation at the higher and lower speeds peculiar to a good eight-cylinder car," says J. W. Leavitt, head of the J. W. Leavitt & Co., Oldsmobile distributors.

"To accomplish this result the designers of the car have produced and engine which, due to its exceptional good cooling system and clever designing of the gas passages, responds willingly to the demands of sustained speed with wide-open throttle.

LOTS OF WATER.

"A feature of the cylinder design is that each cylinder bore or barrel is entirely surrounded by water, and the water is distributed evenly throughout the cylinder block by a manifold with five outlets to each cylinder block.

"The engine is equipped with two water pumps, each block having its own pump, and the result is that a splendid cooling of the cylinder bores is obtained, permitting, as stated, sustained high speeds. This is a result that is rare in ordinary stock cars. The engine is mounted in the same chassis as the celebrated Oldsmobile four, which has the peculiar advantage of holding the road nicely at high speeds.

"I have driven this light eight on the dirt roads of Michigan at sustained speeds around sixty miles per hour. At these higher speeds on gravel roads the floating sensation is very agreeable. On smooth straight stretches the car can be driven at sustained speeds higher than sixty miles per hour.

HANDLES NICELY.

"This car, having a wheel base of only 115 inches, handles very nicely in traffic, so that it is a very satisfactory car for all-around use for those who want a car of super-performance."

CONTROL—WHAT IT MEANS.

BY W. P. HERBERT,
President W. P. Herbert Company, Chandler and Cleveland Distributors.

In all books of rules furnished the train and engine men on the railroads a great deal is said about having the train "under control" approaching stations, side tracks, etc. The term "under control," as defined in railroad parlance, simply means traveling at such a speed that the train may be stopped within the distance the track is seen to be clear.

If all automobile owners approached grade crossings or dangerous corners under control, it would materially decrease the number of accidents. A motorist needs not only to have his car under control, but to have an abundance of self-control. Statistics show that frequently people who in their usual walks of life are prudent even cautious, do the most reckless things and take the most foolish chances when they sit behind the steering wheel of an automobile.

This type is far more foolhardy than the racing driver. In fact, the racing driver recognizes that on a well-constructed speedway, where all competing drivers are experienced and confident, there is far less hazard than there is at many street intersections where some motorists, with a total disregard for consequences, drive blindly through against traffic and with no respect or thought as to who has the right of way. It is also a fact that a motorist may be rolling leisurely along a country boulevard when a train whistles. The whistle seems to arouse him to a sudden senseless passion of haste, and he tries to beat the train over the crossing. In such cases self-control is just as necessary as control of the car.

Whirling around curves at high speed is not only dangerous to life and limb, but is so injurious to the car because of the wrench and strain placed upon it. Of course the occasional selfishness of some drivers in attempting to monopolize the entire road, or to take the right of way when it is not due them, or to speed by a standing car, is also responsible for some accidents.

QUALITY FIRST; ALWAYS.

Hysteria of motor car buying and production has passed, and McCall White creator of the Lafayette, believes it is a good thing for the industry. The companies that can build for quality, not price or style, will be the ones that survive, he adds.

Quality can be put into motor cars of any price, the engineer who introduced the eight-cylinder engine to American motordom proclaims. Quality is the next logical development and one that is shockingly overdue, Mr. White said with precision.

And a word on the precision of that powerfully built man with a Scotch accent. Precision to him means perfection, and he regrets that man can only approach either. The thing that changes a ruddy smile to a frown is his confession that he still has to allow a margin of error of .0005 inch in some of the sturdiest parts of his new motor. Translated, .0005 inch is about one-third the thickness of a cigarette paper, one-fourth the diameter of a fine human hair. But as long as super steel is so defiant to expansion and contraction, so sensitive to blows or shocks, will men frown at mention of such a figure.

White's steps toward mastery were in Europe, England, France and Italy. He saw the Darracq motor car convert an eight-cylinder marine engine and aided it in developing fifty-six horsepower. Would miracles never end?

America met White, Scotch accent, European ideas, and all, in 1913. Today, McCall White is vice-president of the company manufacturing a product he created, the Lafayette. The title is nothing. The fact that he is free to direct production is his pride. He proclaims it, he proves it.

ELECTRICS ARE FAVORED.

The electric truck is fast gaining favor in all large cities throughout the East, according to J. Jerome Canavan, Southern California and Arizona distributor for the famous Walker balanced drive electric trucks. In Chicago alone there are more than 4000 electric vehicles in operation, says Mr. Canavan. A close analysis of electric trucks operating in Chicago shows that certain lines of business particularly have been quick to turn to the electric delivery truck. Ninety-five per cent of the electric vehicles sold are repeat orders, which is one explanation for the large number of vehicles owned by single concerns. Another explanation is that economies by a competitor necessitate similar economies by those that follow the same line of business.

Electric truck installations are recommended after a very careful investigation of the operating characteristics of various lines of business so that every truck sold represents a truck well placed. Every repeat order is economy proved and satisfaction obtained. At the present time electric trucks are used in diversified lines of business simply because of their economy. One rather significant fact in connection with the operation of electric trucks is that the lighter classes of deliveries—those of bakeries, ice cream makers, laundries, etc.—have realized that electric trucks operate within their radius, at a saving of 40 to 50 per cent less than gasoline truck equipment, and on account of operating at a close margin of profit these concerns are eager for economical equipment that will reduce delivery costs.

Mr. Canavan stated there is yet a tendency among engineers to regard the electric street truck in the light of its early operating days. In 1907 the Walker balanced drive electric truck was developed, and this design is now recognized as a standard in both the electric and gasoline truck fields. To compare the old electric street truck with the present models is to compare the old "one-lunger" gas car with present twin sixes.

IT'S NOW INDISPENSABLE.

Just in the past few days the automobile has come vividly before our national life, brought to official recognition as an indispensable factor in the political, social and industrial life of the nation in the speech of President Warren G. Harding in the annual message to Congress.

"With the words of President Harding that the automobile is an 'indispensable instrument' brought before Congress," says Wallace Chorn, sales manager of the A. E. Evans & Co., Southern California distributors of the Paige car, "all argument by grumblers that the motor car should be classed as a luxury should be put at rest.

STRONG INDORSEMENT.

"I doubt if any stronger indorsement of the third largest industry in the world could come from the White House, and it comes at a time when new revenue-raising measures are being spoken of and can be combated with the support of our new Chief Executive.

"The placing of further burdens on motorists can wreak immeasureable harm and we are fortunate in having this support. The intrinsic value of motor transportation as proven in the World War justifies an elimination of the usual statement that the automobile is a luxury.

"There is no other factor which has worked more towards bringing the rural community in closer contact with city, or in bringing the farmer closer to the market than the automobile. The part the automobile has played in the economic life of this country is one of paramount importance and these features alone should be sufficient to qualify the statement made by President Harding.

CONNECTING THEM.

"People who heretofore resided in isolated districts are now enabled to be in direct communication with the city due to the automobile serving in a utilitarian capacity. It is a known fact that the railroads do not reach every section of out-of-the-way points. Thus, the automobile has performed with a high degree of satisfaction the task of reaching isolated sections and in helping to build up and populate these districts, whereas, they may still have remained foreign as far as the city is concerned. In short, the progress of automotive transportation should be encouraged instead of being stifled."

BANKHEAD HIGHWAY DELEGATES TO MEET.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) May 27.—On May 28 in this city is to be held a meeting of delegates representing the southwestern section of the Bankhead national highway, locally termed the Borderland route. The highway has had definite routing this way, and there is to be continued advertisement to keep the travel on the main road, not diverted via Bowie or via Clifton. There also has been maintenance of the old routing via Florence and Phoenix, without mention of the Ajo road.

THINNING CEMENT.

The attention of car owners should be diverted to the inadvisability of thinning rubber cement with ordinary gasoline, which contains too much oil to be safe for that purpose. Oil is a deadly foe of rubber. High-test gasoline or bisulphide of carbon are the proper agents for thinning rubber cement.

Huge Trainload of Cars is Due Here This Week.

The forty-car trainload of Haynes fifties which started from the factory recently is due to arrive here the early part of the week, according to advices received yesterday at the local Haynes headquarters. The shipment consists of 140 cars.

"This huge, record trainload of automobiles is the largest single shipment of automobiles ever sent from the Haynes factory," said D. Gerard Chessman of Chessman & Co., Southern California distributors of the Haynes.

Relative to the increased demand for Haynes cars throughout the country which has caused an extensive production program at the Haynes factory, the following report was received yesterday by Mr. Chessman:

"The Haynes Automobile Company of Kokomo, Ind., is producing 33 1-3 per cent more cars than ever before in the history of the company. Approximately 16 per cent more men are employed today than the largest previous number shown on any of the company's past records, and in many departments night and day shifts are being used so that there will be no break in the steady line of finished Haynes cars that passes out of the doors of the final assembly building every day towards the loading dock for shipment. This superactivity is due largely to the widespread demand which exists in all sections of the country for Haynes fifties.

"It will be impossible to fill the actual orders on hand for some time to come. This demand takes on an added significance when it is realized that the buying public are measuring values more carefully now than they have for many years."

SEES NO CHANGE OF STUTZ PRICE DROP.

BELIEVES THAT QUALITY BUILT IN THE CAR MAKES THE COST RIGHT.

In a confidential letter to Walter M. Brown signed personally by W. M. Thompson, president and general manager of the Stutz Motor Car Company of America, absolute assurance is given against any price decline on the Stutz product. The communication goes on to state that the present Stutz model will be continued throughout the year.

"The Stutz has been brought to such a high state of perfection in the present model "K" that the factory is satisfied to rest on its laurels throughout the ensuing year," says Brown.

"Right now, in the face of the price flurry, the Stutz factory can see no possibility of an immediate or remote price decline on its product.

"Stutz is not a quantity production car—it is a hand-built quality product on which the utmost care is exercised to see that each individual car measures fully up to Stutz standards in every respect, before it leaves the factory.

"The Stutz factory organization has been a unity for years. The allurements of temporary high wages failed to entice Stutz workmen from their tasks. Time wages were increased, but not the average extent. This resulted in the small advancement in Stutz price during the years of price ascendency."

SHIFTER LEVER TROUBLES.

Excessive play in the main shaft of the gearset may cause the gear shifter lever to be forced out of position. Usually the front bearing on the main shaft is shimmed, so that the condition is easily remedied. End play in this shaft may also be the cause of chattering in the clutch and a bucking when the car is on a grade or otherwise pulling hard under load. If this is not corrected in time the shaft play may cause permanent injury to the gears.

Tested in California--

The Studebaker Light Six

One of the two experimental models was driven to California and then tested over thousands of miles of mountain and desert roads in this State.

Nearly a year later five of the first hundred run through the factory were shipped to Los Angeles with instructions to place them with customers who were in a position to thoroughly try them out in various kinds of service.

Without any display advertising, just by word of mouth from the five owners, every Light Six allotted to Los Angeles for the first six months was sold.

It is interesting to note now, after nearly another year, what these five owners have to say at present:

P. H. Ducker, Superintendent of Transportation of the Southern California Edison Company, says—

"After running 42,000 miles our Light Six is still in daily service without having been overhauled. The repairs have been minor.

"The operating cost has been confined to fuel, oil, tires and a very few minor repairs.

"The car has had strenuous service and has given very satisfactory and economical transportation."

Charles Stillwell of the Stillwell Car and Supply Company, says—

"We rent cars without drivers and in spite of the fact that our first Light Six has a different driver every time it goes out, it has given us no trouble.

"It is nearing the 10,000-mile mark, but has never needed any repairs.

"It has won many friends for itself among our customers."

"Houdaille" Llewellyn of the Houdaille Shock Absorber Company, says—

"After 13,000 miles of driving over all sorts of roads the car runs as finely as ever. It is the most satisfactory machine I have ever used.

"The valves have been ground once, but there have been no other repair expenses.

"It runs 20 miles on every gallon, but I am disappointed whenever I look in the radiator, for it never seems to require water.

"It still has the original tires, good for several thousand miles more."

S. J. Bush, Realty Dealer at 1201 East Seventh St., says—

"My Light Six has gone nearly 6000 miles to date with but few adjustments.

"I have been driving Studebakers since 1915, but this model is in a superior class all by itself.

"It gives 20 miles to the gallon and the tires look like new. They will certainly break all my previous tire records."

Louis Breer of Tufts-Lyons Company, says—

"My Light Six has run 7500 miles so far and is highly satisfactory. There have been no tire or mechanical replacements and from the way the car is operating now I do not anticipate any other expense than fuel and oil for a long time to come."

CUT PRICES TO PREWAR LEVEL.

Overland and Willys-Knight in Decided Drop.

Reduction is Most Radical of Season.

Policy is in Line with the Trend of Times.

Announcement of the reduction of prices on the Overland and the Willys-Knight has practically set the local automobile relam agog. Many have declared it to be one of the most smashing price reductions in the downward trend of automobile prices. The reductions become effective next Wednesday and already prospective purchasers are flocking to the local Willys-Overland headquarters to take advantage of price slashing, declared one of the officials.

The completeness with which the manufacturers have slashed their former prices shows an earnest desire to come down to the old price level and to get business back on the sound basis of several years ago.

The real values now offered in the Overland and Willys-Knight cars will best be seen by a comparison of the new prices with the old prices of several seasons ago.

No more radical cut has been made in automobile circles, and when the extra values and many improvements and refinements in the new model of today are considered it is easily seen that the Overland of today offers a great deal more motor value than the car of 1917, and yet will be marketed at the same low figure.

First news of the price reduction was brought from the East by J. F. Thomson, manager of Los Angeles branch, Willys-Overland Pacific Company, who returned recently from Toledo. Thomson has been closely in touch, not only with the factory price reduction policies, but also with their organization plans and with trade conditions throughout the country.

"The price reduction policy of the company is entirely in line with the trend of the times," said Thomson. "We are doing our part to bring business conditions and price levels back to the old days. Our price cut is a genuine one. It cuts off everything possible with practically all of the profits as well. But it will offer real values in motor transportation at the most remarkably low first costs ever afforded the motoring public."

HOPE TO LINE UP CHEAPER GASOLINE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) May 27.—Something of a change in the local gasoline situation is indicated by the fact that the Union and Standard companies are establishing their own service stations in Phoenix. The field has been invaded by the Rio Grande Oil Company, which plans erection of an oil refinery on the Santa Fe tracks, southwest of the city. While Phoenix has the cheapest gas in Arizona, 21 cents retail, this is declared out of proportion with the price in Los Angeles and El Paso.

ROAD CONDITIONS ON ROOSEVELT HIGHWAY.

STILL MUCH WORK TO BE DONE ON SCENICALLY UNIQUE ROUTE.

One of the scenic roads of the Pacific slope will be the Roosevelt Highway. This new route, which skirts the Coast from Washington to the California line, will, when completed, be 430 miles in length. It begins at Astoria, and trickles along the Oregon Coast until it reaches the California State line, where it will connect with the highway, now projected, to Eureka. A representative of the J. V. Baldwin Motor Company, Saxon distributor, was up on the Oregon Coast last month and brings a full report on road conditions on the new route.

"Here is the status of the Roosevelt road," said the Saxon man. "There are yet long stretches on which no surveys have yet been made but 261 miles of the total of 430 have now been opened to travel, but the important part of the road, that which passes through the central Coast line of the State, is yet to be worked on.

Beginning at the Oregon line a road in California connects with the Roosevelt Highway. This road leads southward to Crescent City, and is projected to Eureka, from which point a net work of improved roads provides means of travel to San Francisco and further south.

"The California State Highway Commission has scarcely started making a real highway of this road, but traffic can now move over the road in California and northward into Oregon as far as Coos Bay. When the connecting road into Roseburg is constructed, the Roosevelt Highway will be an all-year-round road for Oregon and California traffic.

EXPERIMENTS HAVE VALUABLE RESULTS.

CONSTANT WORK REDUCES WEIGHT, AND YET INCREASES STRENGTH.

The announcement made last week by Smith Brothers, Peerless distributors, that all open cars would hereafter be equipped at the factory with the California top, has created somewhat of a stir in automotive circles. "We have had many people call us up to verify the statement, and generally there seems to be a feeling of pride in the statement, because the now famous top originated right here," said Stanley W. Smith, president of the concern, in discussing the subject.

"The Peerless factory organization is a live one in every way, and experimenting is always going on, in order that the Peerless automobile may be improved wherever that is possible. It is due to long tests and extensive research work that excess weight has been removed, while at the same time the car has been strengthened to stand up indefinitely under the hardest strains."

VALVE STEM GUIDE BUSHINGS.

In engines not fitted with special valve stem guide bushings excessive wear of the guide and consequently valve stem side play and oil leakage may be prevented by reaming the guide and fitting a bronze bushing. The bushing may be obtained already machined from any supply house. In fitting the valve should center on the tappet, otherwise there will be a side thrust against the bushing and it will wear eccentrically.

LOW REPAIR RECORD IS EXPLAINED.

This Car Seldom Enters Shop; Easy to Fix When It Finally Does.

"The manager of a large repair shop in Upper Montclair, N. J., explains the Apperson low repair record," says Harris M. Hanshue, manager of the local Apperson factory branch.

"He handles a lot of cars of all makes. He says the Apperson 'eight with eighty less parts' works two ways to the owner's benefit. It has to go to the shop less often than any car with which he is familiar. And when it must be repaired, it can be overhauled quickly.

"It is possible for the average repair man to take the motor apart and reassemble it in half the time of any other car of like class. In fact, he overhauls this motor as quick as a four. All this comes from the Apperson principle of boiling down mechanism. It's in the same package of good results as the flexible Apperson eight's knack of giving the gas mileage of a good four.

"Apperson cars have been subjected to all kinds of tests on the calendar. From road races over desert roads and mountain passes to economy tests and hill climbs, this make of car has for years battled every obstacle known to the motor car and at no time has it been conquered.

"Owners of Appersons pride themselves in having a car with a truly flexible motor. The new eight has all the necessary requisites demanded by the exacting automobile owner."

SINGLE PLANT TURNS OUT THE WHOLE CAR.

BRISCOE IS NINETY-NINE PER CENT FACTORY BUILT MACHINE.

The wise motorist and also the dealer representing a line wants to know that the factory back of the car has the buying power to procure materials of the right quality and in sufficient quantity, and that the entire factory organization, from the office of the chief executive to the shipping department, is on a thoroughly sound and efficient basis, said Leland S. Foulke, president of the Boulevard Motors Corporation, Briscoe distributor for Southern California.

"The Briscoe is 99 per cent factory built," he asserted. "In other words, there is but 1 per cent of its assembled parts that are made outside of the big Briscoe plant at Jackson, Mich. There is probably only one other automobile made in the United States of which this can be said. To one who has never visited the Briscoe factory, it would be hard for them to visualize the immensity of the operations there, for there are literally thousands of machines used in the manufacture of the car—and numbers of them were specially made for the manufacturing corporation.

"There was a time when the dealer, when compared with conditions today, knew little of the product he sold. And the purchaser knew less. That has all changed. Nearly everyone knows something about a motor car, and the dealer today is selling service after the car has been disposed of. We are carrying a complete line of Briscoe parts."

DISTINCTIVE STYLE IN ORDINARY TOPS.

NEW DEVICE MAKES AN IMMEDIATE HIT WITH THE AVERAGE MOTORIST.

In answer to a demand for a certain device that would give a standard automobile top the distinctive style of the popular California design, the Robert Thompson Company, body builders, have announced a new invention which has been welcomed with undoubted enthusiasm by Los Angeles motor-car owners.

The new curtain is triangular in shape with a large plate glass in the center and can be easily attached to the bows of any automobile top, it is claimed.

The Robert Thompson Company has used only quality materials in the manufacture of the new curtain and a standard automobile top equipped with the device has so nearly the same distinctive appearance as that of the California design that the difference is scarcely distinguishable.

AUTO BUILT TO MEET AN EXISTING DEMAND.

HANDLEY-KNIGHT IS MADE TO FILL VACANT PLACE IN MOTOR WORLD.

The original conception that brought about the new Handley-Knight motor car was akin to the ideal of the high-class milliner catering to a special client that demands "something different from the conventional," according to F. E. Lewis of the Lewis-Hilliard Company, local distributor.

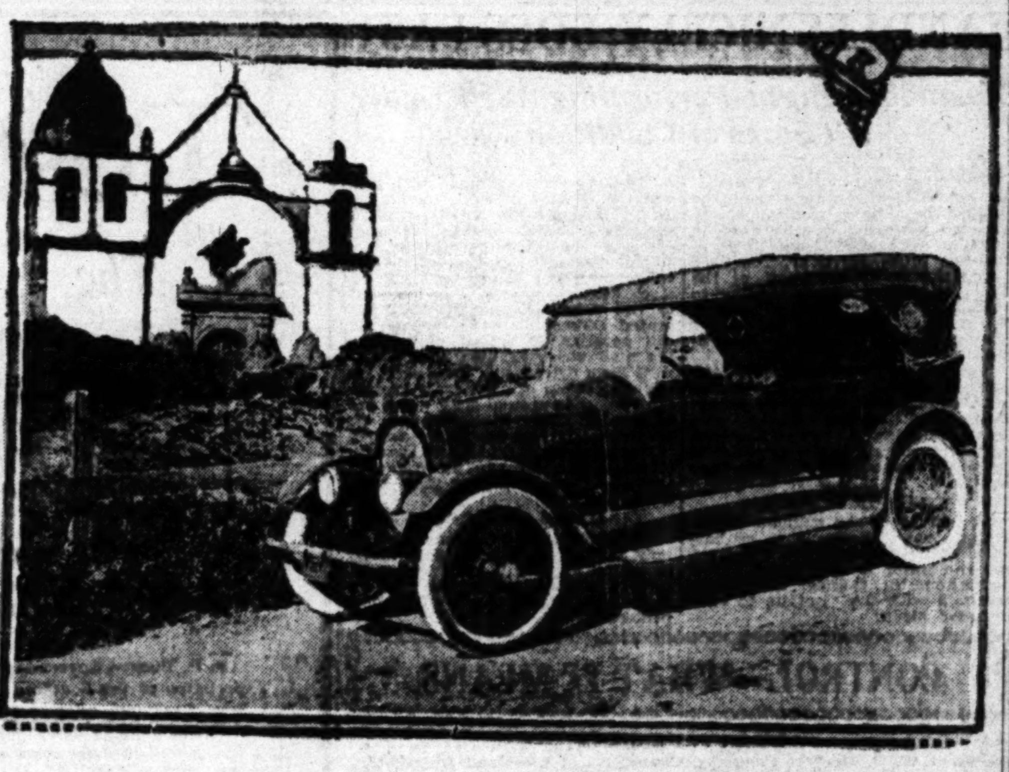
When a well-known automobile factory dropped a seven-passenger Knight-motored car from their production program and directed all their efforts toward the manufacture of a five-passenger model at a lower price, a vast number of discriminating automobile men did not conceal their disappointment.

They had found the 7-passenger Knight-motored model something outstanding because of its particularly efficient power plant. Furthermore, they believed that if an exclusively elegant seven-passenger body could be built around that engine something above the conventional in motor cars would be available.

Handley sensed the tenor of this sentiment and set about to meet the demand already created. The Handley-Knight resulted and the response of the public has far exceeded even the dreams of the builders.

CLUTCH SPINNING.

Clutch spinning is often due to excessive friction in the spring thrust bearing, though sometimes faulty alignment on the flywheel and clutch cone prevents the engaging surfaces from entirely clearing each other. A bent clutch shaft might also cause this trouble.



The Old Carmel Mission—A Famous Landmark of California.

Harris M. Hanshue, manager for the local Apperson factory branch, went up into the Carmel region recently to inspect the various natural and humanly constructed scenic attractions. But few persons know, according to Hanshue, that Carmel is a good fishing spot, and not a rest cure, as some folks think. The picture shows the Apperson eight near the old Carmel Mission. The roads in this country are especially good this time of year, and those lovers of the sport of angling, as well as beauty, will find Carmel-by-the-Sea especially alluring. Hanshue did and so will you.

Thousands Spent Last Sunday Wondering How the Car Got There.

Just a week ago L. D. Nolan of the Grace Motor Car Company of Pasadena drove one of the new Maxwells to the top of Eagle Rock and thousands of motorists who passed the rock wondered how the feat was accomplished. Behind the rock the approach is more or less gradual and it was here that the Maxwell made the ascent. At that the machine had to negotiate grades as high as 56 per cent and the run to the summit was a real test on any car's pulling ability. Above, the Maxwell on top of Eagle Rock; center, the rock and car taken from quite a distance; and below, the Maxwell on one of the worst grades. George Pearson of the local Maxwell distributors was the only one not surprised at the stunt. He claims the Maxwell will go anywhere and it takes more than a climb up a rock to make him wonder.

MAXWELL ON EAGLE ROCK.

Light Car Climbs Steep Sides to Summit of Famous Landmark.

Climbing steep hills in high, or second, or low; establishing road, speed or economy records over long and strenuous routes, or compiling a record of up-keep over a long period of time, showing how little it really takes to run a motor car when it is given reasonable care—these all have their effect in proving to the motor car buyer the real value in the automobile he is considering buying. But when the last word is said, it is power that has the greatest appeal to the average motorist.

He may not care for a ninety horsepower engine that will send him along the highway at seventy miles an hour or better, and fit prey for the speed cops, but he does like to know that if he is out on a trip and runs into heavy sand or mud, or comes across a difficult grade, that his car will take him to the top, even if he can make it only in low gear.

With the object of seeing just what the good Maxwell would do in this line, George Pearson, manager of sales for Union Motors, Inc., combined with G. H. Grace, head of the motor car firm bearing his name, and Maxwell dealer in Pasadena and Riverside, in choosing a "stunt" that would prove conclusively the reserve power, together with the roadability of the good Maxwell.

After looking over the entire field they decided to send a Maxwell to the top of the Eagle Rock, just off Colorado Boulevard on the way to Pasadena—if it could be done. The face of the rock is sheer on three sides, but on the east there was sufficient slant, though, for the Maxwell to obtain traction. If the wheels didn't slip they knew the Maxwell could pull the grade.

"Bill" Sutherland, shop foreman for the Pasadena firm, was made superintendent of the job, and L. D. Nolan, one of Grace's salesman, volunteered for the dangerous task of scaling the granite dome.

With the aid of a few planks the ditch at the bottom and soft dirt was passed and then Nolan saw that everything was "clear," let in his clutch, and the Maxwell rambled up the rough rock, where the grade varies from 20 to 56 per cent, like a mountain goat fleeing from the huntsman. It was a marvelous feat and so far no one has challenged Mr. Grace's statement that the Maxwell is the first car to have successfully climbed to the summit of the rock under its own power, and without ropes or other mechanical assistance.

"We don't care to include such a trip in our regular schedule of demonstrations," said Pearson, "but we can do it again, any time it is necessary."

CARS IN STAGE LINE WORK REALLY TRAVEL.

The average automobile owner who takes a couple of mountain trips a year and averages 1000 miles a month, thinks he is calling upon his motor car to do a creditable amount of work.

As a contrast to the average owner's demands is the work required by the average car in the stage service. The Red Star Stage Company operates six Cadillac cars between San Francisco, Half Moon Bay and Pescadero. Five of these have been in service over five years, and one is now entering its fifth year.

These cars run on an average of over 330 days in the year, making over 200 miles every day. The oldest car in the service has already passed the 300,000-mile mark and the drivers and mechanics say the sturdy old Cadillac is good for many thousand more miles.

These cars often carry nine passengers and baggage and go over the hills both ways on the high gear. They are forced to maintain a high average in their schedule and it is very exceptional when it is necessary to stop one of the Cadillacs on the road to make an adjustment.

Price Always Kept Low
And The Reasons Why

THE Chandler price has always been kept low without sacrifice of quality. This has been made possible by the most efficient management, the most modern factory and the highest financial credit with sources of supply, together with the fact that we have always built one chassis, developed and refined as the years have passed, but never abandoned because constantly more popular.

Some lines have manufactured simultaneously as many as three or four distinct models—not styles of bodies, but chasses. They have come and gone. You can probably imagine what such a policy means in manufacturing cost, in selling prices and in the resale value of such cars.

Chandler resale value is relatively higher than that of any car, after a like period of service.

IN NEW PLANT ONE YEAR NOW.

Moreland Celebrates First Burbank Anniversary.

Production Humming Along at Record Rate.

Adjustments Throughout Are Rapidly Made.

This month marks the first anniversary of the occupancy of its fine new Burbank plant by the Moreland Motor Truck Company. While some of the departments were gradually moved from the old plant in Los Angeles earlier, the entire organization did not migrate to that beautiful spot in the lap of the Burbank hills until May.

The settling of a large manufacturing organization into a new plant is not the work of a moment and is accompanied by the adoption of new systems to fit the enlarged facilities and many other details, yet it went on smoothly and, while the work of production received a somewhat severe set-back for a time, it was not long before it was humming along with all the smoothness of an excellent piece of machinery.

Such an uprooting and relocation not only has an effect upon the organization itself, but introduces new readjustments among the entire personnel. Gradually these have been made. The workers, as rapidly as convenient, have been removing closer to their place of work. They have, in large numbers, left the closer congestion of the city for the clear air and greater freedom of the smaller communities. This has led to the building of many new homes in the rapidly growing cities of Glendale and Burbank and gardens have sprouted where there were no gardens before.

HUNDRED THOUSAND MILES IS NOTHING.

WELL-TRAVELED DODGE CAR STARTS OUT TO CROSS THE CONTINENT.

When George R. Wickham, City Attorney of Hermosa Beach, was appointed and confirmed by the Senate as Assistant Commissioner of Lands in the United States with headquarters in Washington, D. C., he saw that his sturdy Dodge Brothers car, which has already traveled over 102,000 miles, was due to take another little jaunt of about 3000 miles.

An automobile, like ourselves, is as old as it looks, and as Mr. Wickham drove up to the salesrooms of the Albertson Motor Company, Dodge Brothers dealer, to bid good-by to Mr. Fred Cox, auditor of the concern, his early Dodge Brothers car, built in 1915, "belied its age." The original finish was still there, a little scratched, but still there.

"I understand that the field service department of the general Land Office has standardized on Dodge Brothers cars, so that I will be right in style when I arrive to take up my new duties," said Mr. Wickham. "And after the strenuous mountain trips that I have made I can readily understand why the Land Office has decided on Dodge Brothers cars for the use of their surveyors, assistants and supply men."

BALANCING WIRE WHEELS.

Owners of cars with wire wheels will do well to look to the balance of these. In order to reduce the magnitude of the centrifugal force of excess weight on one side of the wheel this latter should be balanced just as a flywheel is. The wheel is jacked up and revolved just slightly to determine which side is the heavier. A piece of electrician's tape is then wound around a spoke on the opposite side. This process is continued until the wheel remains in any position in which it may be placed, showing that the weight is equal on all sides.

CORRECTING BODY SAG.

When the doors on one side of the body do not fit properly, either bind so that they are hard to close or fit too loosely, with so much clearance that the catch will not snap, the trouble may be cured by placing wooden wedges under the body at the rear. Metal plates may also be used. In either case the wedge should be bolted through the frame so that it will remain firmly in place.

We pledge ourselves again to go on building, better and better, a Cadillac that can be depended upon to do all the things an automobile is intended to do; do them better than any other car, regardless of price or size; and continue to do them for a longer period, without any nursing, coaxing or petting.

America's Smartest Car Makes America's Fastest Mile

The Roamer Stock Chassis which established six world's records on Daytona Beach, Florida, demonstrated beyond dispute Roamer's supremacy as America's fastest car

New stock chassis records for a kilometer, one, two, three, four and five miles—six records altogether, created in half as many minutes—demonstrated Roamer's ability to meet the most severe demands that can be made on a motor car.

Ask your dealer for a demonstration of a Roamer with Duesenberg motor now. Note its flexibility in traffic and its speed on the open road. Don't be satisfied with anything less than Roamer offers.

Jay Dewey,
General sales manager of the Lexington Motor Company, who arrived in Los Angeles last week to perfect plans for a greatly enlarged Lexington-Los Angeles Company. Mr. Dewey will spend several weeks in this territory before returning to the factory.

Jay Dewey Here to Keep Eye on Lexington Cars.

In his recent 7700-mile tour of the Pacific Coast from Mexico to Canada, 3000 miles of which he covered by motor car, Frank B. Ansted, president of the Lexington Motor Company of Connersville, Ind., laid the ground for the intensive development of this vast territory for sales and service on Minute Man six cars.

Because of his comparatively brief time in each section, Mr. Ansted was unable to see the various movements he inaugurated carried through to finality. With characteristic thoroughness, however, he is leaving no stone unturned for the fullest development of the section along lines he laid down.

With that end in view, Mr. Ansted has dispatched Jay Dewey, general sales manager of the Lexington Motor Company, to the Pacific Coast with headquarters at the Lexington Los Angeles Company.

Mr. Dewey will spend the remainder of this fiscal year on the Pacific Coast. Throughout the entire territory, he will practically cover the steps of President Ansted, following up the various things the Lexington president started when he was there.

The intensive development of the Coast territory for selling and servicing Minute Man Six cars will be the immediate purpose of Mr. Dewey's tour. Last year the Lexington Motor Company did a tremendous business on the Pacific Coast.

Care Will Boost Your Gas Average to Great Extent.

A car's mechanical condition has a great deal to do with its gasoline consumption, and if certain details were only given proper attention at stated periods, the gas average of many cars would be materially increased, according to R. O. Gould, Chalmers sales manager for the Greer-Robbins company.

"The Chalmers record of almost twenty miles to the gallon under most adverse conditions in the recent Yosemite economy run, is one that can be attained by Chalmers owners, if they keep their cars in A-1 condition and exercise due care in driving," he said. "The Chalmers driver who knows his car averages on overland trips—so they have told us—seventeen and better to the gallon, with the car loaded to capacity.

"The proper oiling and greasing of a car, tire inflation, carburetor adjustment and coasting when the opportunity offers, add to gas mileage. Take a car that is in need of greasing, that has not had its oil changed at every thousand miles and with tires underinflated, and give it the attention it needs and note the change in the way it gets over the road. The change will be so marked that even the greenest owner and driver cannot help but mark the car's performance after this work has been done."

NOW WANT TO KNOW ALL ABOUT THE CAR.

AREN'T WILLING TO TAKE SALESMAN'S WORD FOR IT ANY MORE.

The outward attractiveness of the car and the insistency of the salesman were once the determining factors in a motor buyer's selection of an automobile. But now he wants to know what the car will do and how economically it will do it.

So declares Mr. J. C. McGill of the McGill Motor Company, local distributors of the Gardner automobile. He is congratulating himself that he is selling a product that has a proved record of economy and that can deliver the goods.

The record of the Gardner in the recent Yosemite Valley Economy Run, when it emerged from the snow and mud with the laurels in its class, is still fresh in the minds of the motoring public.

The Camp Curry feat, together with economy records in daily performance is building an enviable reputation for the Gardner motor car.

RUSHING WORK ON RAY-KELVIN ROAD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RAY (Ariz.) May 27.—By July 1 there is to be completion of the new five-mile road between Ray and the main-line railroad station of Kelvin. All concrete bridges and culverts are in place and most of the grading is complete. The route is down Mineral Creek, for much of the way the roadbed was blasted from the hillside. The present road is a mountainous and circuitous one, with dangerous features in wet weather.

TALKS OLDS DURING THE ENTIRE DAY.

Stage Celebrity is a Bug When He Gets Started on Motor Cars.

All the world loves to hear a "nut" on certain makes of automobiles get all wound up in a raving spell. In Harry Langdon, well-known stage celebrity, the Oldsmobile has a perpetual booster.

It is not a common occurrence to meet the chap who is sold "heart and soul" on the car he drives or owns—the fellow, who, whenever the subject of cars is brought up, starts with a "you just ought to see my little bus perculate, some wagon," etc.

If you are desirous of meeting a man who talks to hundreds of people each day about the very car he drives and owns, and keeps hammering at it, twenty minutes at a lick, during which time one will not always be able to get a word in edgeways, it would be advisable to get in touch with Harry Langdon when he comes to town.

Langdon is a dyed-in-the-wool Oldsmobile owner; he thinks, dreams and talks Olds. In fact, if Harry couldn't talk about the Olds, he'd be out of a job.

Langdon, both on and off the stage, is th eoriginal motor bug. To dig more into facts, when a mere lad he began to dive into the hidden mysteries of automobile mechanics. With four wheels and a couple of soap boxes he designed and constructed what was then looked upon in the smayy boys' world a real speed demon, that had it on anything in the whole neighborhood. In later years he followed this hobby to a real car, with real tires, a real motor and real troubles. The latter he experienced enough of till he purchased his first Oldsmobile. Since that time it's just been a case of Olds, Olds and more Olds.

GIL ANDERSON IS SNIFFING AROUND.

BURNING CASTOR OIL BRINGS BACK OLD DAYS TO DEMON PILOT.

The urge of the sawdust smell that brings thousands of circus performers back into the fold each year has nothing on the peculiar odor of burning castor oil used in racing cars, according to Gil Anderson, who won renown along with the Stutz car in the various successful campaigns of this automobile company. Walter M. Brown of the Stutz agency has just received a letter from the veteran of the race course.

Seeing many of his old friends sign up to enter the various rides for glory and gold, acts as a magnet to anyone who has ever felt the thrill of the checkered flag and the plaudits of thousands, according to Anderson.

"But," says Gil, as he is familiarly known to all racing enthusiasts, "it is alot more comfortable experimenting in one of the comfortable new model Stutz cars than it is having pounds of weight jolted off one in a hard-hitting race car as it jolts over a rough racing road or speedway."

Anderson, with all his wonderful racing experience, holds the unique position of chief experimental engineer of the car that he helped make famous.

FENDERS AND BULBS.

In cars where the head lamps are fastened to the fenders, looseness in these latter results in excessive vibration, which will account for many a ruin of bulbs.

AFTER THE PURCHASE PRICE—DEPENDABILITY

Dodge Brothers have never lost sight of the fact that dependability must be included in the purchase price of their car.

Because of its dependability, the United States Government, officially selected this car without solicitation, for the strenuous service which the battlefields of France demanded.

Dodge Brothers will continue to build their car so well, that it will always be dependable and the purchase price will be as nearly as possible the last expenditure.

Not just one outstanding feature combined with others of obscure origin and unestablished quality, but each and every one of its ten principal units is the product of specialists. That's the wonderful thing about the Moon. Consider the powerful six-cylinder Continental Red Seal Motor, which the best engineering skill of a generation has made the accepted standard of motor efficiency.

And just as it embodies the talent of the world's foremost specialists, unsurpassed in their particular field, so every one of the other nine principal units has been established by demonstrated excellence of quality. Delco Starter and Ignition; Timken Axles; Spicer Universal Joints; Brown-Lipe Transmission; Borg & Beck Clutch; Rayfield Carburetor; Exide Battery; Fedders Radiator — Nickel-Silver; Gemmer Steering Gear—these are the exceptional units of specialists whose work no single plant or factory, however great, could equal.

Their selection by Moon engineers is backed by an experienced judgment of sixteen years. The record of Moon accomplishment in engineering and coach work is expressed in this wonderful car. No one feature dominates at the sacrifice of others. There are ten units of equal merit in the Moon, each one of proven quality, guaranteeing goodness through and through and resulting in a car that hasn't a shortcoming to trifle with the judgment or confidence the owner puts into it.

ow Much Service
hould You Have?

"'Battery Service' should not be a question of 'how much' or 'how little'—it is a matter of 'satisfaction.' The service you receive on your battery should be sufficient to keep it in first-class condition at all times.

"That is what Westinghouse Service will do. Most of this service is absolutely free to you, regardless of what make of battery you own. If any repairs or special work is required, you are told just what it will cost before the battery is taken from your car. You are not advised to replace with a new battery unless your old one is too far gone for economical repairs.

"Nearly everyone who comes here seems to appreciate this sort of service."

LARGE PLANTS ARE COMBINED.

Miller Engines for Leach Biltwell Cars.

Merger Promises Big Results for Local Concern.

Plan to Enlarge Present Factory Soon.

Marking a large transaction in Pacific Coast automobile circles, the Leach Biltwell Motor Company and the Miller Engine and Foundry Works of Los Angeles have been acquired outright by the Leach Biltwell Motor Car Company, which was recently incorporated with a capital of $5,000,000. The announcement was made by M. A. Leach, president and founder of the motor company and who becomes president and chairman of the board of directors of the new company.

At the same time, the definite announcement was made that the Leach company would manufacture in entirety the Leach power plus six in its factory at 4800 Santa Fe avenue, Los Angeles, thus giving California and the West the first high-grade machine now manufactured on the Pacific Coast.

The Leach Biltwell Motor Company, which has been absorbed by the new company, was incorporated for $1,000,000, and its latest financial statement showed that it had assets in excess of $1,500,000. The Miller Engine and Foundry Works was owned by Harry A. Mille, well-known motor builder for automobile racers.

Heretofore, some parts used in the Leach power plus six had ben purchased in the East, but now the company will build its own motor and parts and will give the motor-buying public a complete California-built car with the exception of axles and disteel wheels and starting and lighting system.

The Leach Biltwell Motor Car Company acquired with the Miller engine and foundry works, valuable patents from Harry A. Miller, covering the new motor to be used in the Leach car at a later date. The motor is declared to be one of the most remarkable ever constructed, having fewer parts and giving greater power than any motor used in a high-class machine.

M. A. Leach, who heads the new corporation, has for a number of years been prominently connected with the automobile business in Southern California.

Harry A. Miller, who becomes second vice-president of the Leach Biltwell Motor Car Company, has for years been building motors for race car drivers, including Barney Oldfield, Tommy Milton, Ira Vail, Bob Burman and others. The new motor he has designed is modeled similar to those used by the speed kings and will be used exclusively in the Leach power plus six. Mr. Miller also will actively supervise the construction of the new motor at the Leach plant.

John T. Dye, widely known Los Angeles automobile dealer and who has been prominently connected with the industry in Southern California for a number of years, becomes first vice-president of the new corporation and will take an active part in its management. He also occupies a position on the board of directors.

Heads of Big Concern.
M. A. Leach, above, president of the Leach Biltwell Motor Car Company, and Harry A. Miller, vice-president of the organization. This new company is taking over both the Leach Biltwell Motor Company and the Miller Engine Works.

Perfect Ideas; Then Start to Build Real Car.

What family wields more influence in a greater variety of American industries than any other?

That is the question that has been sprung in the midst of the intellectual furor over Thomas A. Edison's recent questionnaire by A. G. Denton of the Mark Motor Company.

He answers the question himself in the following manner:

"Trapshooters, duck hunters and other users of different kinds of ordnance are well acquainted with the name behind the famous gun powder.

"Some, no doubt, know of the connection of the name with the motion picture industry of late.

"But a great many people have not realized the importance of that name in the history of the development of the automobile industry. For years the famous DuPont family has been one of the leaders behind the scenes of the motor car industry, building with an ideal of supreme excellence as its aim. But it was not until the DuPont engineers had perfected their idea that they consented to appear upon the stage of the world's auto row with a product bearing that name.

"In beauty of line, in quality of workmanship, and in excellence of materials DuPont bodies are worthy of the DuPont chassis, and this chassis, carrying its master engine, is worthy of the DuPont name."

TIRE INDUSTRY IS READJUSTED TODAY.

DOESN'T TAKE LONG TO GET INTO SWING OF NEW CONDITIONS.

The rapidity with which the tire industry readjusted itself to meet new conditions, the increased production of tires at a lowered cost and the low prices on raw materials have brought about a downward revision of selling prices at the most opportune time for the motorist.

"Price adjustments came just as the spring demand for tire replacements was starting," said Frank Price, of Nelson & Price, Inc., "and the price revisions announced by the factories have served to stimulate trade by giving the motorist the added advantage of anticipated reductions in the cost of manufacture which will be made during the months to come.

"Business in general is keeping up remarkably well, and while this season's demands are being met at the new prices, yet the total volume in dollars and cents is not far from the peak of the extraordinary seasons of the past few years.

"This is conclusive evidence that there is an actual increase in the ranks of motor car owners in Southern California, and portends a season of unsurpassed activity in the motor car and accessory industry in the south this summer.

"With the opening of the mountain and seaside resorts," concluded Mr. Price, 'I expect to see every boulevard swarming with motorists, especially when the weather warms up enough to make the city a trifle oppressive. All that is preventing the migration of the motorists now is this prolonged spring season, and that is merely a temporary condition that will not last more than a few weeks at the most."

ASSORTED ROADS ON COAST-TO-COAST TRIP.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, May 28.—Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Taltavall, well-known Redlands people, are making a transcontinental automobile tour and have reached Kansas City on their way to the East. They have written to friends here telling conditions as they found them on the trip.

They found the roads good, bad and worse as far as the Kansas border. After leaving California, the roads were in poor condition most of the way although there would be stretches of good road. This was not deterrent to travel, however, for they met many other transcontinental travelers. In Kansas the roads are excellent.

Single Question Brings Back Red Hot Responses.

Circular letters often bring unexpected replies. Last week Don Lee, the California distributor for the Cadillac, sent out the first of a series of letters to possible prospects. The first letter was a very short affair, reading as follows: "Can you think of any manufactured product in the world today that stands higher in the esteem of the public than the Cadillac motor car?" The letter did not exactly call for a reply, but a number of the recipients were moved to a response by the message contained in the letter.

The first reply came back with the short notation in lead pencil, "Yes, Babe Ruth." This was about as brief a reply as could be expected until the next day brought one word, "No," written across the face in blue pencil. In the same mail the humorist got into action with the following reply, "Sure—Carter's little liver pills." The next mail contained additional replies such as "You win," "Tell us something we don't know," "We'll tell the world you're right," "Yes, my home brew," "The old greenback and the round iron man." Manager J. E. Brown was pleased with the replies and it showed that people read his letter.

According to Manager Brown, the present spring and summer will see more touring done in California than ever before. It is an indisputable fact in May that the sale of seven-passenger touring cars immediately picks up. During the winter months, the various closed models hold their own with the open touring cars, but with the coming of spring, the minds of the people turn to the outdoors and the pleasures of summer touring. It is then the seven-passenger comes into its own.

PRICE REDUCTION FILLS SALESROOM.

BUSINESS IS BEST IN YEARS SAYS LOCAL OAKLAND DEALER.

A bargain sale could attract no greater crowd than has buzzed around the Oakland salesroom for the three weeks since the announcement of the price decline.

"It looks like a return of the good old days," says H. C. McVey, general manager of the Los Angeles Oakland Company. "Business has been better than during any period since 1919.

"The first day after the initial reduced price announcement was made, we sold and delivered two open cars and two closed models, and we have been hitting up this clip right along, except for the few days last week when the bad weather set in.

"I remember when we had to turn buyers away. The Oakland then sold for $1275 here. Today the price is only $1375 and the present model 34-C Oakland is better by $500 than any previous model. No wonder we are selling them at a lively rate."

HEAVY TRUCK HITS DESERT.

Bucks Boulders and Sand on Old Wagon Trail.

Four Round Trips Completed Without Trouble.

Mack Takes to Strenuous Life and Likes It.

An undertaking fraught with transportation difficulties as severe as those encountered by the argonauts who came to Southern California sixty years ago in caravans of ox-drawn prairie schooners recently was accomplished by a Mack truck owned by the Globe Truck Company of Los Angeles. The motor truck performance was in line with preparations for another pioneering expedition, which is expected to locate hundreds of homesteaders from Canada on a holding of 42,000 acres near Warren's Ranch in Riverside county.

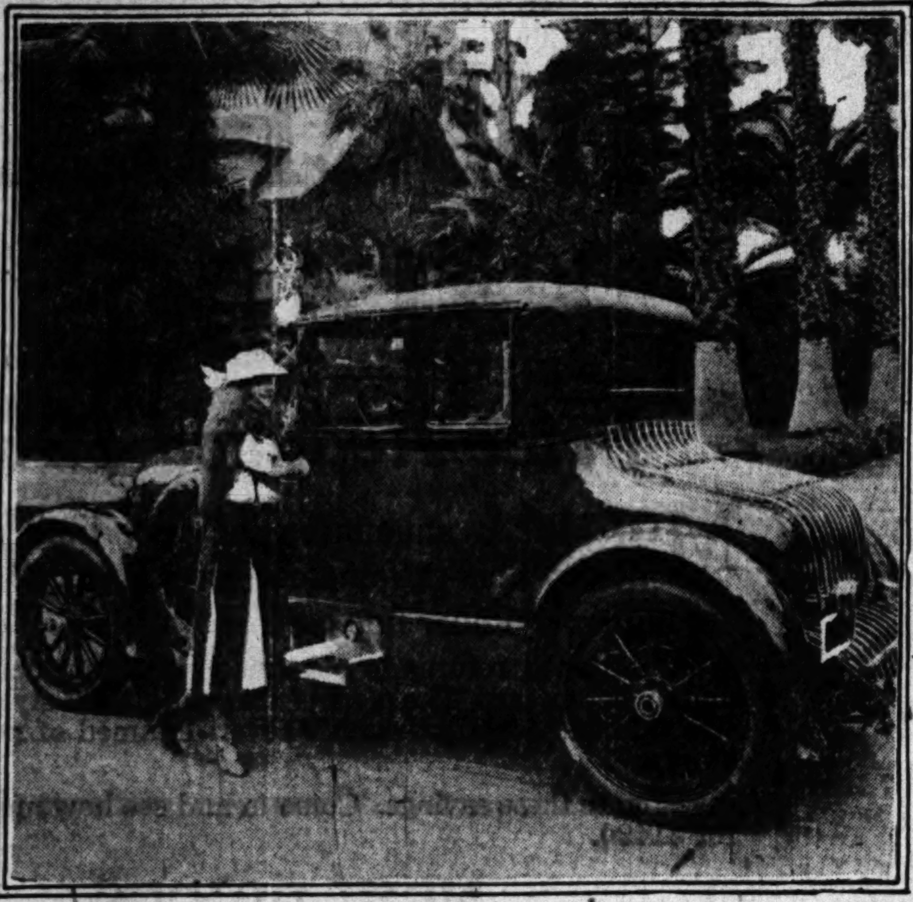
Unlike those early settlers who fought their way across the bleak sands of the trackless Mojave Desert not knowing what their destination might be, when the newcomers from Canada arrive they will find housing provision already made for them due primarily to the stability of the Globe Truck Company's Mack truck and adventurous spirit of one of their drivers.

The truck took a supply of building materials and provisions from Los Angeles by way of Riverside and Banning. From there it was necessary to negotiate eighteen miles of dirt road, which was no better than a trail before making the junction with the road to Twenty-nine Palms, Painted Hills and Warren's Ranch. From that point it was necessary to make forty-eight miles over a wagon trail cluttered with boulders, deep in sand, through washes and over mountain grades. The Mack battled its way against such difficulties the entire distance in low and second gear. No heavy-duty truck ever had been over the road, but the Mack made four complete round trips against odds that had been said by all would prove insurmountable.

According to C. P. Hebenstreit, service manager for the Globe Truck Company, the two and a half-ton Mack truck was bought in February, 1920, and the only repairs made since that time have been to replace one valve which became out of adjustment. The service manager says the oil consumption amazes all the company's drivers, because the average is only about one quart a week. Mr. Hebenstreit also says that almost any make of truck can meet the requirements of street and boulevard work, but it is performance such as his Mack accomplished in the wilds that proves what a high-grade truck will do when emergency demands.

BATTERY READINGS.

In taking battery readings with the hydrometer the operation should be performed before the distilled water is added to the solution, which will otherwise be diluted and a wrong reading given. Also after the water has been put in it takes some time to mix with the acid. The water being lighter stays on top, and if the hydrometer is used say an hour after the water has been added it will take up only a weak solution, which is not the real one.



One of the Prettiest Things Seen Around These Parts for a Long Time.

We're speaking of the Chalmers coupe, as well as of Miss O'Conner of the Greer-Robbins Company. The car was built for S. H. Wray, superintendent of the Greer-Robbins organization, and is a knockout all the way through. The coach and body work is unusually attractive, while the engine in this sport coupe puts the car along the road at seventy-five miles an hour without a murmur.

NEW CARBURETOR ON PACKARD SIX CARS.

TWO STAGE JET ADDS GREATLY TO ECONOMY OF OPERATION.

An invention which, combined with the famous Fuelizer, greatly increases gasoline mileage, is announced by the Packard Motor Car Company in connection with its Single-six cars. It is a new style carburetor, designed to give automatically a mixture which meets the needs of either heavy or light pulling. It is known as the "two stage jet" carburetor, is being supplied on all new Single-sixes, and is being provided without charge as rapidly as possible for cars already in service.

"This new carburetor meets one of the most serious difficulties which has stood in the way of high gasoline mileage," says H. A. Sperl, general sales manager, for Earle C. Anthony, Inc., local distributors of Packard cars. "The ordinary carburetor gives entirely satisfactory service either when a car is idling or when it is pulling wide open, as on a heavy grade. But to do this it must provide a mixture which cannot be made materially leaner without loss of power on heavy pulls, or stalling when idling. Unfortunately for economy about 90 per cent of all driving is neither idling nor heavy pulling. So for this 90 per cent the carburetor must give too rich a mixture.

"The two stage jet carburetor takes care of this situation automatically. It gives the rich mixture when it is needed fully as well as the old style did. But in ordinary driving a leaner mixture is given without any attention from the driver. This is accomplished by having two jets, and the one for the richer mixture is placed so far above the medium speed jet that it will not work during ordinary running, but responds perfectly to the high suction from the engine which is created by a heavy pull.

"The result is greatly increased economy without a single drawback. Under heavy load the mixture is the same as always. There is full power when it is wanted. But under cracked throttle conditions there is a lean mixture which gives a gain of nearly three miles to a gallon, or between 10 and 20 per cent. The result is a considerable increase in the economy of the Single-six, which already has a reputation for economy, without any loss in performance."

OIL INSTEAD OF GREASE.

The car owner who is handy with tools may find it profitable to replace a number of the grease cups which lubricate important parts of the mechanism by an oil reservoir with leads running to these various parts, such, for instance, as the thrust bearing or throw out collar of the clutch. This oiler should be constructed much like a mechanical oiler, with controls for each lead.

ALLOTS TERRITORY TO COAST DEALERS.

OFFICIAL OF DURANT MOTOR COMPANY DIVIDING UP WESTERN STATES.

C. M. Steves, vice-president of the Durant Motor Company of California, and in charge of sales for that organization, is now in the Northwest, where he is making the first allotments of Durant territory.

The work Steves is now doing in Oregon, Washington and Idaho is the first step in cementing together a strong dealer organization to handle the Durant on the Coast. As soon as he completes his tour of the Northwest, Steves will cover California, allotting territory to many of the dealers who have made application for Durant contracts.

Steves is personally visiting the dealers in each locality who have applied for Durant franchises and is allotting territory only after he has interviewed them personally, inspected their places of business and satisfied himself of their ability to give the new line excellent representation.

FORD LUBRICATION.

There are three principal points to be watched in the lubrication of the Ford car—the crank case supply, of course, the universal joint and the differential gears.

ARE ONLY BUILDING HIGH QUALITY TIRES.

EFFICIENT PROCESSES USED ALL THE WAY THROUGH IN THIS CASING.

The so-called long suffering public, accustomed to grieving over the quality as well as the price of automobile tires, seldom delves far into the policies of the tire manufacturer.

Some of these days they'll wake up and not only study this policy but will demand that tire manufacturers build their products on a quality basis entirely, says Leon S. Utter, local distributor for Midco tires.

The Midco people are making an earnest effort to produce a quality tire exclusively. Working on this basis, they have announced their policy of using only high-grade materials and the most efficient process of manufacture. Not only are they stressing the quality of their product, but their recently announced policy of selling to dealers at a cost plus 10 per cent basis makes available to the tire-buying public a high standard product at a reasonable price.

ELKS TO COME BY MOTOR CAR.

Huge Caravan Planned for the Salt Lake Lodge.

Scouting Party is Already Out for Road Dope.

Find the Highway in Fair Shape Most of the Way.

That the Salt Lake Lodge of Elks is to travel to Los Angeles for the big convention of the order by automobile caravan, is the news brought here by Jack McDonald and F. D. B. Gay of the City of the Saints. Approximately 150 cars and trucks (the latter for baggage) will be in the wonderful trek, with a schedule that calls for four days to make the 840 miles.

McDonald, of the family of chocolate fame, will be captain of the caravan and he realizes that he has some job on his hands. It was for this reason that he went over the road with Gay, automotive editor of the Deseret News of Salt Lake City, in order that he might get advance information as to road conditions and accommodations. The trip was made in Gay's Hupmobile "tourfinder," and which he will use this summer in visiting the national parks. Last summer he made a similar journey, with Los Angeles on his varied and interesting itinerary.

"The road conditions are very good considering the country that must be traversed," said Gay and McDonald. "We anticipate no trouble in putting over our little program. To the best of our knowledge this will be the first time in the history of the automobile that anything on so large a scale has ever been attempted. Accompanying the caravan will be several service cars to give aid in case of need. We already have about fifty cars signed up."

Gay told P. H. Greer of the Greer-Robbins Company, Hupmobile distributors for this State and Arizona, that he averaged twenty-two miles to the gallon of gas on the 840 miles, and that between Salt Lake City and St. George, Utah, he never shifted a gear.

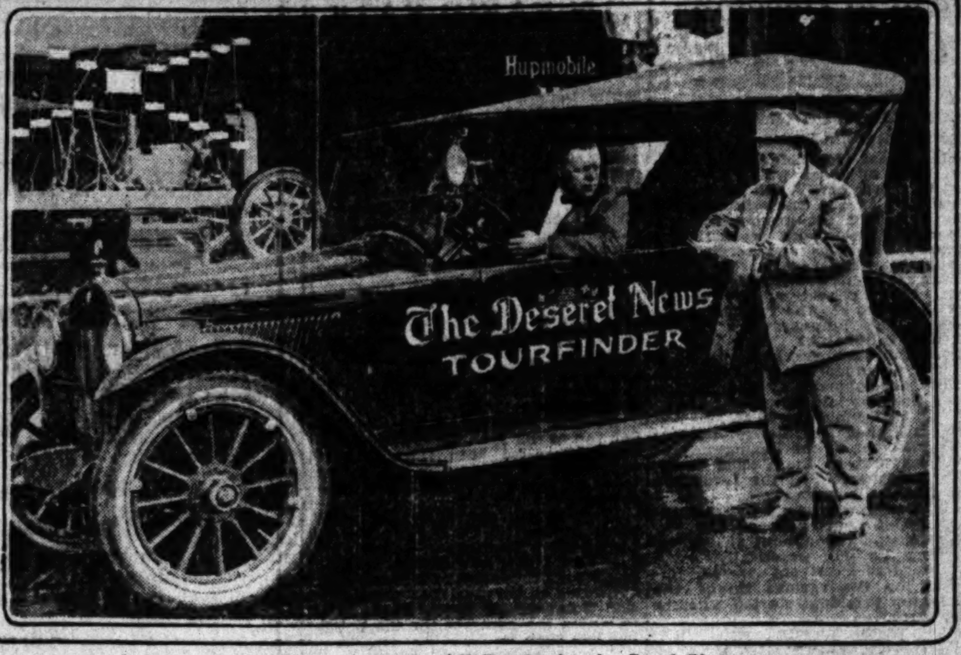
"QUAKER STATE" IS POPULAR LUBRICATOR.

A little over a year ago Ralph Hamlin put Quaker State on general sale throughout Southern California. In that short time the motoring public has come to appreciate the quality of this certified Pennsylvania product, if growth of sales tells anything.

Hamlin says Quaker State medium was soon firmly intrenched and now the "heavy" and "tractor" grades are showing the result of confidence born of actual usage. The heavy is meeting with success in the truck field and tractor lubrication is now a specialty of one of Hamlin's oil salesmen.

FRANKLIN FACTORY IS GOING STRONG.

As early as May 10, the entire production of the Franklin factory for May was sold out, with the exception of twenty-one cars. That means that everyone of the 920 cars to be built in May will be in the hands of customers or en route to customers by June 1. One of the most hopeful signs of the times, in the opinion of officials of the company, is that this business was widely distributed over the entire country.



Taking a Slant to See That All Roads Are in Good Shape.

Here's the Hupmobile "tourfinder" which is blazing the way for the Salt Lake Elks' auto caravan that will descend upon Los Angeles next July. The Hupmobile was driven here by F. D. B. Gay, auto editor of the Deseret News of Salt Lake, and Jack McDonald, the latter of the well-known chocolate manufacturing family.

HARBOR FASCINATING.

An interesting Sunday trip and one that requires only a few hours at most, is one to Los Angeles Harbor and a tour along the shore and out to Point Fermin. The growth of the harbor, as such, within the last few years is amazing, and the battleships, destroyers and merchantmen that always crowd the harbor anchorages make the view an interesting and instructive one.

Last week, "Biz" Clark, the live sales manager of the A. E. Evans Company, who has just recovered from an illness of six weeks or more, took one of the big Paige 6-66 models out for a few hours of open air and turned her toward Wilmington and the harbor. "Biz" rolled into Wilmington with just enough time charged against him to get by on the speed limit and proceeded to tour the harbor district.

At the foot of Canal street, Wilmington, the big Catalina boat, Avalon was just giving up a huge load of humanity back from an outing at the island. Just beyond, and to the left, members of the Los Angeles Motor Boat Club were swarming about their craft at the new anchorage like a swarm of bees, preparing for the season's opening which is soon to come with its regattas, cruises and races, while the ship building yards had their ways crowded with all varieties of craft from a racy-looking motorboat to a big cargo carrier. The lumber wharves were piled high with timber fresh from the Oregon and Washington forests, and the city's warehouses were taking in bales, and crates, and bags brought to the Southern California port from a dozen different countries.

Even the flags at the masthead of the various merchant craft were sufficiently varied for anyone. Great Britain, Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Japan were represented in the congress of nations, and the ships themselves were almost as varied in design and appearance.

The harbor business district of San Pedro is well worthy of a visit, and then on out to Fort MacArthur and Point Fermin, where a view may be had of the huge breakwater, the naval vessels at anchor, with their captive balloons, and perhaps out at sea a number of vessels seeking port, or just on their way to a far-off clime. It is a trip well worth taking, and Clark advises motorists generally to make it at their first opportunity.

Mounting Straight Side Tires.

The proper method of mounting straight side tires is to lay the rim on the floor, inserting the valve stem of the tire in its proper place. The bead for ten inches on both sides of the value should then be forced into place. After starting the tire in this way it should be forced in place further by stamping on it, first on one side and then on the other. Stamping in this way will let the operator seat the tire easily as a general thing, though it is sometimes necessary to resort to a tire tool. The ends of the rim may be brought into place by means of a screwdriver to use in prying, and care must be used not to make a mistake and get the wrong end of the rim on top. This method is for use when a rim expanding and contracting tool is not available, as this latter saves much time and trouble and should be in every tool box.

MISSING.

When missing occurs in one cylinder at slow speed, while the firing is all right when the speed is raised, it is a pretty good guess that the fault lies in too wide a spark gap in the plug on that cylinder.

RECALLS DAYS OF STUTZ RACE TEAM.

"The coming 500-mile race at Indianapolis, which marks the opening of the racing campaign of the gasoline charioteers of the present day, recalls to all racing enthusiasts the wonderful records hung up by the white fleet of Stutz racing cars in 1915," said Walter M. Brown of the company that bears his name.

"It was just eleven years ago that the first Stutz built placed in the money in a gruelling 500-mile dash and immediately became know as 'the car that made good in a day,' a slogan that has remained with the Stutz to this day.

The most sensational and successful racing campaign ever executed was in 1915, when Stutz won first and second in the four major events in the country, establishing a record for 350 miles at Sheepshead Bay, which is still the fast mark for the distance.

Demand for Ford Cars and Trucks Rushes Factory.

Ford is building cars at full speed. And, according to an official statement from the factory at Detroit, the demand for Ford cars and trucks still exceeds the output, despite the fact that a new high level of production has been reached.

By the first of May the figures representing daily production were in the neighborhood of 4000 a day, so the May schedule was set at 101,125 cars and trucks, not including the output of the Ford Canadian plant or any of the foreign assembling plants. The output mounted daily; May 12 brought forth 4092, the greatest number that have been produced in one day so far this year. Since the month has twenty-five working days, present indications point to a new high record.

A comparison of Ford production figures for 1920 and 1921 discloses the fact that for April, 1921, the output was greater by 34,514 than for the corresponding month of a year ago. The output for May, 1921, will probably overshadow May, 1920, by between 15,000 and 20,000 cars and trucks.

Approximately 43,000 men are at work in the Detroit plant of the Ford Motor Company. The factory is operating on full time, six days a week, and three shifts a day.

NEW VEEDOL SERVICE TO MEET BIG DEMAND.

STATION IS INSTALLED AT LOS ANGELES MOTOR SUPPLY HOUSE.

Supplementing their expansion program, the Los Angeles Motor Supply House, Inc., managed by A. A. Derry, has installed a complete and specialized Veedol service station to take care of the ever-increasing demand for Veedol products.

This is a new feature in accessory service and comes at a time when motorists will be wanting their camping supplies, emergency accessories and other necessities for an extended trip. They will there be able to obtain their entire requirements at one store, and naturally, in the minimum of time.

Mr. Derry advises all motorists who intend taking long trips to have the old oil drained from the car, grease taken out and fresh lubrication put in all around. This will help to keep the motor in prime condition over a long and strenuous journey. Knowing that many motorists do this every spring before they start on their summer jaunt, the added wrinkle in the Los Angeles Motor Supply House Veedol service is that an expert will be on the job at all times to give instant service in draining the oil, taking out the grease that has been in your machine all winter and installing fresh oil.

OFFICIAL RESIGNS FOR NEW POSITION.

George R. Scott, superintendent of the Chevrolet factory at Oakland, is the latest addition to the ranks of the Durant Motors, Inc. Scott has announced his resignation from the Chevrolet organization to become superintendent of the new Durant Pacific Coast factory.

When the Chevrolet plant was built at Oakland, Scott was sent out from the East to supervise the construction of the buildings and to assume the duties of superintendent. He has built every Chevrolet car produced on the Pacific Coast since the plant commenced operations in 1916.

Scott's resignation from Chevrolet and his joining Durant was announced in a wire received from New York where he went to close up his affairs with the General Motors.

DON'T NEGLECT DIFFERENTIAL.

"The differential, or 'rear end,' as it is commonly known, is one of the most important parts of a motor truck, and is at the same time one of the most neglected sections of the entire truck," according to L. P. Poyer of the Transport truck distributors. "All the strain of the motor and the weight of the car are thrown directly on the rear end, and jamming brakes, grabbing and slipping clutches, speeding on rough roads and skidding, all make this rear end part deteriorate and give way unless it is given more attention than most drivers pay it.

"Every unusual thing a driver may do, having effect upon the rear end, is bad, but perhaps the worst thing he can possibly do is to fail to lubricate this necessary part of a car's equipment. Lubrication has the same saving effect upon the differential as it has upon the motor or other part of the car where friction is created. If the oil is not drained frequently, it is bound to become full of dirt and grit, while pieces of metal chip off and are carried by the oil among the gear teeth, and the ring, pinion and differential gear wear in corresponding measure. As soon as these pieces of steel or iron work into the heavy grease, they get not only into the gears, pinions and two differential bearings, but often find their way even to the bearings of the drive wheels as well. Wear on the bearings is sure to follow, making them loose, and soon causing too much play in the rear end.

"Loose bearings in the drive wheels and differentials are the cause of many broken axles. As soon as the axles wobble from too much play, the strain is liable to crystallize the toughest steel and the driver may find a broken axle when it is most inconvenient and where it is hardest to procure a tow car.

"This is easy to prevent in the first place. The way to do it is to get familiar with your truck. Get down and look it over now and then. You are directly responsible for it, being the driver. Take the bolts and plate off the rear axle assembly and drain out the heavy lubricant, wash carefully with kerosene every part of the rear assembly as soon as the drained oil permits a close inspection of the parts."

TO BUILD NEW CAR HERE.

Los Angeles soon will add to its rapidly increasing list of manufacturing industries that of the West Coast Manufacturing Company, a concern which proposes to turn out an "ultra exclusive" car in four models for the West Coast trade.

Officials of the company selected Los Angeles as the logical and practical location for such a manufacturing industry after thorough investigation of all the principal cities up and down the Coast.

The manufacturing plant, according to present plans, will be laid out and operated under an efficient and progressive manufacturing system. As the men connected with the company are all veterans of the game nothing in the way of an experimental stage will have to be passed through.

William Augustus King, a designing engineer for many years and well known throughout the country, is the vice-president, general manager and designing engineer of the company. Theodore F. Ruhland is president.

Conected with the company in the capacity of vice-president and sales manger is Hargraves Thompson, formerly sales manager of the Don Lee Coach and Body Works. For ten years Thompson was associated with the Don Lee concern, resigning May 1, and is thoroughly familiar with the automotive sales and manufacturing standards on this Coast.

The NEW HUDSON
HUDSON SUPER-SIX
Offers these Important Qualities

Special Notice to Fine Car Buyers

Hudson beauty is prized by all owners. It even dictates the choice of many. But to most who know Hudson its chief charm must always be quietness of action and ease of control.

So smooth the response to throttle and wheel there seems no mechanical intervention between the driver's will and its accurate execution by the Super-Six.

What the Old Hudsons Tell

Every day you see Hudsons two and three years old which in both performance and style might well be judged of recent production

Hudson design has never been guided by caprice. It has never resorted to dubious extremes. It has been too sure of what are the essential permanencies of beauty, dignity and true riding comfort.

The advance ideas you will always find. But every idea must earn its right to belong. No mere straining after something new has ever won place for a single feature of Hudson design.

Thus has developed a mechanical quality that well-nigh removes all consciousness of motor and other mechanism.

A New Meaning
In Economy

And with it has come an economy in operation that asserts itself not alone in low fuel cost but more particularly in reduced maintenance expense. Owners experience no concern about Hudson's readiness to meet any requirement. Whether it be the instant throttle response needed to shoot the car out of a possible traffic jam, or the ability to go on tour across the continent, the Super-Six in countless ways has proved its fitness. The Super-Six motor is exclusive and everyone knows how it excels.

Best of all, these qualities are not of today's accomplishment. They have been notably Hudson's for five years.

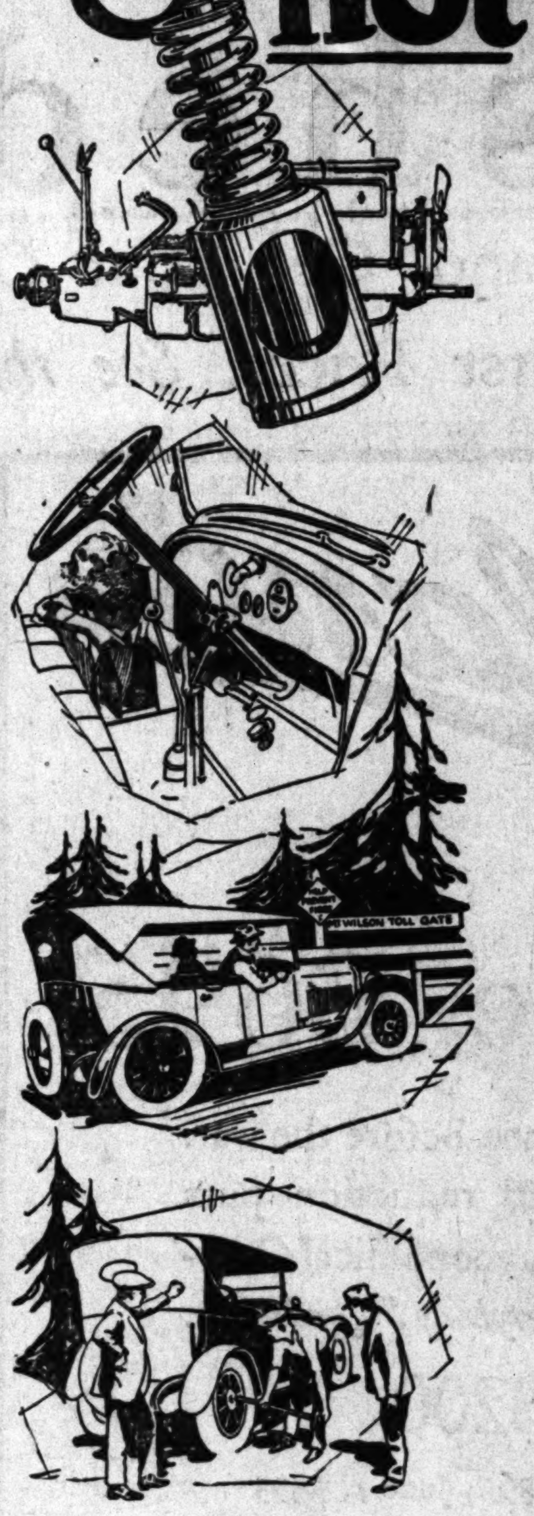
Facts—
not arguments



It is generally conceded that the VALVE-IN-HEAD motor develops more speed, more power and is more economical than any other type of motor. The fact is that practically all racing cars, all aviation motors, including the Liberty Motor, are of this type of construction. But the Buick has this added advantage—an exclusive feature—the valve cage are removable, which permits the entire valve and cage assembly to be removed in ninety seconds.

There are four vital features that stand out far ahead of the procession in the new Buick. They are the famous Buick VALVE-IN-HEAD motor, the wonderful velvet disc clutch, the Buick cantilever spring suspension and torsion drive and the patented Buick full-floating rear axle.

These four Buick features are Buick's alone. They are of vital importance to the driver's safety and comfort and mean enduring worth. The wonderful Buick velvet disc clutch is so easily controlled that a small child can push out the clutch with one hand. This simplicity of operation has been the means of making thousands of enthusiastic women motorists of those who have before shunned driving. It has done away with the bugaboo of stiff grabbing clutches and clashing gears; has made motoring a matter of real comfort and satisfaction. Gear shifting is easy with the new Buick clutch and transmission. The slight pressure of one finger easily changes the gear.

When a new model Buick was driven from the Toll Gate at the foot of Mount Wilson to the top with both the springs removed, it not only showed to what an extent refinement had been carried by Buick engineers, but it proved conclusively the wide margin of safety built in every new model Buick. Buick springs do not carry any of the driving strain, nor do they serve to hold the rear axle in alignment.

Starting from the summit of the Mt. Wilson Motor Trail, a new Model Buick was driven to the foot with both rear axles removed. The purpose of this feat was to show that the Buick rear axles do not carry any of the weight of the Buick car, and in those rare incidents where an accident would cause the axle to break, the passengers are in no danger of a rear wheel coming off.

Twenty years of unbroken success are behind the Buick, and guarantee the slogan, "WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT, BUICK WILL BUILD THEM."

CONQUER ROUGH ROADS OR BUST.

Essex Team Starts Out on a Dangerous Jaunt.

Will Tackle Clark Grade and Rim of World.

Roads in Poor Shape, but Drivers Don't Care.

In the face of warnings not to drive the Clark Grade or the "Rim of the World," which were both put out of commission by the big storm last week, four daring drivers each accompanied by three companions as daring as themselves will attempt the round trip over those roads today.

And these boys if successful will receive some reception when they reach their destination, for there will be several hundred auto fans, in the shape of the Motor Car Dealers' Association, awaiting their appearance at the popular mountain resorts on the shore of Big Bear Lake.

When Harold L. Arnold entered a Hudson and Essex in the dealers' reliability run scheduled for today, Salesmanager Schreiner conceived the idea of showing the genuine road ability of the Essex by sending four of those cars over the other roads where automobiles are not supposed to go until the grades are repaired.

"The regular reliability run is a fine scheme," said Schreiner, "but it's too easy. Our boys have so much confidence in Essex cars—in their ability to go the pace on roads, across country or up the mountain side if necessary, that ordinary road driving does not appeal to them.

"You know we all think the Essex is beyond compare in performance and any of my salesmen would accept a challenge to start across lots between towns and follow a straight line through everything they encountered until they arrived. If you don't believe it, put up the money and we are ready to go.

"That's the way we felt about the Big Bear run. The desert route to be followed on the dealers' run is just ordinary road. The steep pitches on Clark's Grade where the snow still lays to be bucked through, and that treacherous section on the Rim Route called Snow-Slide Hill will demand more than mere skill of driving. Those places will spell car value in capital letters."

CARBURETOR TROUBLES.

Many cars have no provision aside from the strainer in the tank for keeping out the dirt from the carburetor. Owners of such vehicles will do well to fit a trap in the fuel line. All the big carburetor makers offer these traps, which are to be placed in the line near the carburetor or in the bottom of the tank. The trap catches all the dirt and water and should be cleaned out regularly once a month.

TESTS RADIATION HERE.

Studebaker Light Six Gets Factory Workout Over California Highways.

For more than four a months a Studebaker engineer, from South Bend, tested the light six in the mountains and deserts of California to prove the efficiency of the radiation of the motor.

His travels took him into the high Sierras of the northern part of the State, and the final tests were in the hot Imperial Valley.

Not only was every portion of the radiator tested with recording instruments which showed the temperature of every three-inch vertical section, but flow-meters also showed how fast or slow the water circulated around the water jackets of the motor, under varying road conditions.

With these instruments it was possible to learn just what part of the radiator was required for ordinary driving, and how much additional radiator space was required for the adverse conditions of hill climbing at high altitudes and pulling deep sand in the Imperial Valley, where it is below sea level.

Fan speeds also were tested by different sets of pulleys and various widths of fan belts likewise were tried out.

After four months of careful checking, all of the data was taken back to the engineering department of the Studebaker factory and such minor changes as were needed were made in the radiation system of the light six.

Engineers found, some years ago, that, if a car would perform properly in the different parts of California in a manner satisfactory to the owners, it would meet all of the requirements of motorists in all other parts of the world. No longer do the engineers of the Studebaker company rely solely on theory. They build according to the best known engineering practice and then take the car out on the roads of California, try it out on the long, steep mountain grades of the State, plow through the sands of the California deserts and speed it over long stretches. In this way every condition that would be met with in motoring is met and the car built to measure up to the requirements of critical buyers.

In commenting on these very comprehensive tests made by the engineers, Paul G. Hoffman, head of the company, which bears his name and distributes Studebakers in Los Angeles and vicinity, stated that the popularity of the cars here was ascribed to be largely due to the fact that they were built to fully meet all California requirements.

"We are fully convinced," he said, "that no car will measure up in California unless it has had comprehensive tests in this State, conducted by factory engineers. Our rapidly increasing sales bear witness to the fact that California motorists favor the Studebaker line, for in this section, they are buying more of them than of any other make except the Ford."

"As proof of the thoroughness of factory tests and design, the numerous records which the light six recently made between Los Angeles and San Francisco, and between Los Angeles and Phoenix, across the 300 miles of desert trail, stand forth as convincing."

"TAKE IT OUT, DRIVE AROUND AND SEE HOW YOU LIKE IT," IS PRESENT-DAY "DEMONSTRATION."

There are many forms of "demonstrations" offered the prospective purchaser of an automobile. In the early days the prospect was invited to "take a ride." Later he was urged to drive himself, with the salesman or demonstrater seated at his side. But today, the man or woman who is preparing to purchase a high-grade car, is apt to be surprised at the offer of some distributors.

The Lafayette Motors Company, for instance, learns from its distributor that one of the most satisfactory methods of demonstration is to turn a car over to the prospect for a week-end or special trip. Naturally, in some instances, the prospect hesitates to accept the offer, not wishing to assume the responsibility of such a fine car.

This is overcome, usually, by the reminder that the demonstrator is fully insured and that only complete confidence in the car's reliability and dependability causes the salesman to rest all opportunity of sale with the service that the car will deliver under the prospect's hands

John J. Troy, president of the Troy Motor Sales Company, local distributor of the Lafayette, offers similar observations about this policy. "The Lafayette distributor can well afford to let decision rest entirely with the prospect," he says. "Such favorable conclusions, reached from actual experience, are more fixed than any that might come from the suggestions of a salesman.

"The Lafayette distributor gives conclusive evidence of his faith in the car and such confidence is certain to affect the prospect who experiences the performance and dependability of this fine car."

Lexington Sales Head to Develop Coast Car Trade.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CONNERSVILLE (Ind.) May 27. On his recent 7700-mile tour of the Pacific Coast from Mexico to Canada, 3000 miles of which he covered by motor car, Frank B. Ansted, president of the Lexington Motor Company, laid the ground for the intensive development of this vast territory for sales and service on Minute Man Six cars.

Because of his comparatively brief time in each section, Mr. Ansted was unable to see the various movements he inaugurated carried through to finality. With characteristic thoroughness, however, he is leaving no stone unturned for the fullest development of the section along lines he laid down.

With that end in view, Mr. Ansted has dispatched Jay Dewey, general sales manager of the Lexington Motor Company, to the Pacific Coast, with headquarters at the Lexington Los Angeles company.

Mr. Dewey will spend the remainder of this fiscal year on the Pacific Coast. Throughout the entire territory he will practically cover the steps of President Ansted, following up the various things the Lexington president started when he was there.

IMPROVEMENT SEEN ALL OVER THE COUNTRY.

General improvement in the automobile industry all over the country is here, in the opinion of Lou Warner, local distributor for the Mitchell.

"Despite the American public's reluctance to spend money for any kind of a commodity, the automobile market continues to improve and I see no reason why we shouldn't be optimistic from now on.

"Just why this is true, of course, it is difficult to say. Southern California is an extreme in the case, because there are so many enthusiastic motorists here that it is hard for them to pass up this pleasure in the spring and summer months, when conditions are ideal.

"But even though we are able to dispose of cars here in face of the nation's unreceptive mood, eastern points, too, are overcoming obstacles and conditions in the industry appear to be improving generally from coast to coast.

"The fact that we are selling more Mitchells these days than we have sold for many weeks in the past is, I think, indicative of the situation in Los Angeles. Of course, our new models have just recently arrived and are attracting more than the usual interest. This may have something to do with it. But if the public were not slowly succumbing to the lure of the highways, and overcoming their reluctance to spend money, I doubt that the best automobile in the world would induce them to reach for their checkbook."

"COMING BACK" AN RAPID RATE.

cently bought an assembling plant in Long Island.

Some weeks ago the Du Pont interests went into the market with a new $30,000,000 bond issue, the money to be used in the General Motors production. It would appear that Du Pont is in need of additional capital for his securities corporation, and the sale of the Muncie plant may mean a new rapproachement of the Durant and Du Pont interests.

NOT POSSIBLE.

It is not believed that any contemplated Durant merger would absorb Studebaker and Pierce-Arrow, as has been persistently rumored, as the stock of these two companies is too closely held.

Another rumor had Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Company interested with Durant in a proposed new merger in the motor industry, but this rumor lacks verification.

Work on the new $3,000,000 main plant of the W. C, Durant Motors Corporation, Lansing, is under way. The new motor car factory will be ready for occupancy by November 1, according to the Christian Construction Company of South Bend, Ind., to whom the contract for the building has been let.

PRODUCTION.

Production will begin Jan. 1, 1922, it was announced. The new Durant plant probably will be known as the Edward Ver Linden division of the Durant Motors Corporation, and will be entirely under the direction of Mr. Ver Linden, until last week a vice-president and director of the General Motors Corporation, and general manager of the Olds Motor plant in Lansing. It is reported that preliminary steps toward the incorporation of the new division of the Durant interests have already been taken.

When completed the new plant will employ between 2500 and 3000 men. The Lansing branch is to be the place of assembly for the automobile parts manufactured in the several other factories of the Durant corporation, but the type of automobile to be manufactured has not been announced.

According to the plans for the new plant, it will be one of the most modern and attractive factory buildings in the State. It will have a capacity of 40,000 cars annually.

CARING FOR THE TUBES.

The tube should be rolled flat with soft cotton between the layers. A strip of cotton flannel rolled up with a tube is excellent. The roll should then be placed in a thick cloth bag with the stem protruding, and the mouth of the bag be tied around the stem. It is a good plan to put talcum powder in the bag.

BALL-BEARING CARE.

Few owners pay the attention to the ball bearings that these latter deserve. They usually wait until the garage man calls attention to the injury done by breakage. At least once in six months ball bearings should be inspected, the rough or worn balls replaced with perfect ones and the ball run filled with graphite grease.

"It was with considerable regret that a great number of our old customers accepted our announcement several years ago of an exclusively wholesale policy. The Western Rubber and Supply Company some time ago was forced by the steady growth of its business to acquire larger quarters, and now the progressive firm is located in its spacious new building at 1344 South Flower street, where a complete line of automotive equipment, including Gillet tires and Oilzum lubricants are carried.

The new tire department is also of extremely large proportions, and in fact, at the present time, they have in stock about three carloads of their popular tires, the Pharis, India and Nebraska.

Now, however, these two features have been eliminated by the Alemite high-pressure gun and the actual greasing of a car has been reduced to the minimum, as far as time is concerned, and the mussy part has been absolutely relieved.

"For a long time greasing the chassis was done in a slipshod manner. More than twenty-one standard makes of cars have adopted the Alemite systems, while a number of manufacturer of trucks use it as standard equipment."

ROAMER SPEED CAR WAS STRICTLY STOCK.

SUCH IS THE WORD SENT FROM EAST BY ROSCOE SARLES, SPEEDWAY KING.

W. D. Wright of the Wright Motor Car Company, Southern California distributors of the Roamer, is in receipt of a telegram from Roscoe Sarles, noted speedway king, regarding the Roamer Duesenberg, which established the new world's speed records at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Sarles, who is at present in Indianapolis, where he will pilot a Duesenberg in the big Memorial Day classic, sent the following wire, which should prove of great interest to every Roamer owner in Southern California:

"Wright Motor Car Company, Los Angeles, Cal.: Have just made a thorough inspection of Roamer-Duesenberg driven by Goodspeed at Daytona, when he traveled 105.1 miles per hour. Car is strictly stock and was in no way a special job. Drove car here myself today and am astounded at speed obtainable from four-cylinder motor, also at ease of handling. In my opinion Roamer will hold present record for many years.

[Signed] ROSCOE SARLES.

The Roamer-Duesenberg is creating a sensation throughout the East, according to Mr. Wright and engineers, who watched the performance of the car declare it to be the sturdiest automobile yet constructed. Mr. Wright said in describing the car, that the motor has been increased to a bore of 4 1-4 inches and a stroke of 6 inches and the power increased over 50 per cent above that of the earlier motors built. The flexibility has been greatly improved and the motor generally refined, until today it is a splendid piece of mechanism—powerful, full of pep and easy to handle.

"Show'Em" Week Proves to Be a Howling Success.

When a stock model automobile performs a notable feat, there are always a certain number of "doubting Thomases" who want to be shown.

This week has been "show 'em" week at the Walter M. Murphy Motors Company, distributors of the Lincoln. The car which was recently driven by Bill Bramlett from Los Angeles to Phoenix in record-breaking time has been in display and spectators have been afforded an opportunity to inspect the car and satisfy themselves as to its stock model classification.

"Ever since Bramlette drove his car on the speedy trip to Phoenix there has been considerable comment among motorists and on the 'row,' as well, as to the classification of the car," said "Doc" Green, manager of the Southern division of the Walter M. Murphy Motors Company. "That is exactly the reason why Bramlette consented to have his Lincoln Road-Runner put on display in our show rooms, and I am safe in stating that several hundred people are now satisfied that the car is purely a stock model.

"Bramlette's car was the sixth to be turned out by the Lelands. It was the first car to reach the Coast and it is the property of Bramlette. Up to the time of the jaunt to Phoenix, the car had been driven something like 19,000 miles. It has stock equipment throughout.

"The time made by Bramlette to Phoenix, a distance of 424½ miles, was twelve hours, sixteen minutes. It was quite an achievement for the motor car, for the time was more than one hour faster than the speediest train.

REDUCED PRICES INCREASE DEMAND.

Announcement of a considerable reduction in the price of Racine multi-mile cord tires and Racine country road fabric tires is made by Russell Y. Cooke, general sales manager of Racine Rubber Company, Racine, Wis. The reduction places the Racine Rubber Company in an especially favorable position, both as regards tire prices to the consumer and to the dealer. The revised prices also cover Racine inner tubes.

Progress of Racine Rubber Company in the past year has been one of the outstanding features of a spectacular year in the tire industry. With the multi-mile cord as the leader of its line, the Racine company has forged into a commanding position among the important tire manufacturers and the good name of its product has spread to almost every corner of the globe where tires are used.

Liberty Comes at the Head of Yearly Caravan.

A Liberty six, plastered with mud, rolled into Los Angeles recently and marked the beginning of the regular spring and summer season for transcontinental motor trips. The Liberty was driven by Paul S. Allen of Kansas City, Mo., accompanied by Robert Steinburg of St. Louis, Mo.

Travel across the continent by southern route practically ceases late in the fall and is not reopened until spring. There are a few venturesome drivers who attempt to make part of the trip during the winter months, but the real season opens in the spring. The arrival of the first transcontinental driver, therefore, was an event of great interest in this city.

The drivers fought their way through road troubels of nearly every description. At times they had to encounter great snow banks and almost impassable mountain roads. It was with great joy that they finally struck the splendid boulevards of Southern California.

Relating the story of the grind to C. W. McKelvey of the McKelvey Motor Sales Company, Southern California distributors of the Liberty six, Allen said: "No motor could have been put to a harder test and no motor could have delivered more satisfactorily than the sturdy Liberty six. Several other cars were pulled out of mires and ditches along the route and did other stunts, which proved the strength of the Liberty six."

Dreadnaughts and Autos are Similar in Electric Drive.

Comparisons of the navies of the world show that, while the United States sea forces at present are second to those of Great Britain, with Japan third, our Navy will, in the next three years climb into first position as regards number of capital ships and their armament. Not only in numbers, but in quality and design, as well, will the United States Navy lead the world, according to experts.

The designers of our latest ships have fully appreciated and taken advantage of the lessons taught Great Britain in the Jutland battle; gun mountings have been improved; turrets and their arrangement changed; armor thickened here, and made thinner elsewhere—everything has been done to make our ships superior to any other fighting craft in the world.

In addition to these features of design, our later ships have been designed for electric drive, following the important lessons taught several years ago in tests with the collier Jupiter. The New Mexico and her sister ships were the first to be so built, and the others are following on the same pattern. This form of drive, naval engineering experts say, gives immeasurably greater flexibility of control, greater efficiency and economy, and less vulnerability to hostile fire.

Strange to say, a similar method of drive was invented and adapted to the automobile about the same time, if not before, the Navy started its investigations along the same line. Just as with naval vessels, tests proved the electro-magnetic drive an ideal one for the automobile. It removed the nuisance of gears to shift, the bothersome clutch and the difficulty of picking up speed on a hill. At the same time the driver was given varying speeds of from one to sixty miles an hour, merely by shifting his throttle lever, and the latent power, which could be called into being at will for hills or difficult going was almost immeasurable. The driver had means at his disposal for charging his storage battery, for lighting and for the starting motor, he had an efficient electro-magnetic brake, more powerful and more efficient than either foot or emergency brake, and he had a drive equally efficient and easily handled on the open highway or in difficult city traffic.

"I believe the designers of the Owen Magnetic automobile must have driven the ordinary type of auto a great deal, and that they must have become annoyed at the difficulties of gear shifting, grabbing clutches and noisy transmissions, for they certainly found the cure-all in the Owen," said J. W. Gaffney, distributor of the Owen Magnetic, in explaining its features to a friend the other day.

CAN'T DO BUSINESS WITHOUT MOTOR CAR.

GASOLINE CHARIOT GETTING TO BE ABSOLUTELY ESSENTIAL NOW.

That to be deprived of his automobile in a business way would be a handicap that he would hardly know how to overcome, is the statement made last week by M. G. Weltman, manager of the Standard Loan and Investment Company to Omar Wicklin, sales promotion manager on the Pacific Coast for the Moon Motor Car Company of St. Louis.

Weltman, who has unbounded faith in the great future of Los Angeles and all Southern California, recently took delivery of a Moon touring car. "Of all the means of transportation, I don't know a single one that is so much in demand in so many devious ways, as the motor car of today," he declared. "It is always at your command at any hour of the day or night. Wherever there is a road you can travel, while there is no limit to the ground you may cover as long as you have oil, gas and water.

"If I were to wake up some morning and know that I would not be able to have a motor car with which to carry on my business—say for the period of a week, I would feel that I was under a handicap that would be a terrible detriment to success. That's how strong I feel about the motor car as a positive necessity."

and an entertainment program that was ahead of anything heretofore attempted by the organization, has been arranged by a committee composed of Andrew Baldwin, W. D. Wright and Benjamin A. Finch.

Approximately eighty cars and trucks were employed in the transporting of members, entertainers and material to Bear Valley. Although snow and rains that fell unusually late for the season of the year gummed up certain stretches of road, more or less, work by San Bernardino county road crews soon had them in such fine shape that not the slightest difficulty has been experienced.

SHIP TRAILERS TO FOREIGN POINTS.

LOCAL PRODUCT PROVING POPULAR ALL OVER THE WORLD.

Newcomers to Los Angeles cannot understand how this city can have so many manufacturing interests because they do not see tall chimneys belching smoke into the sky. But the fact remains that there are more than 1000 manufacturers here, most of them doing a good business and many of them fabricating machinery or other products much of which has a nation-wide and even a world-wide distribution.

Recently a shipment of twenty-four trailers left this port destined for Batavia, Semarang and Soerabaja in the Dutch East Indies.

These trailers were manufactured in Los Angeles by Los Angeles workmen, almost in their entirety, the bearings and tires being furnished from eastern sources.

The single shipment to the West Indies weighed twenty-six tons and required more than 3500 cubic feet of shipping space. The trailers had to be crated, some of the big four wheelers requiring a single crate twenty feet long, while the smaller units could be packed two to the crate.

The shipment went to the Java Motor Import Company, the largest dealer in automotive machinery in the islands, and represented a value of $10,093 listed at California prices F.O.B. the Los Angeles factory.

Other shipments have been sent to the Philippines and the Hawaiian Islands for other firms.

POUNDING.

If a pound in the engine is regular and continuous it is likely to be from lost motion in the bearings. If it is irregular and occasional it is more likely to be due to preignition caused by incandescent carbon or from imperfect connections. If the pounding is accompanied by occasional missing, especially if the missing is more frequent when the car is running than when the engine is idling, it is more apt to be due to imperfect electrical connections.

ONE-GALLON RECORD RECALLS 1917 TEST.

FRANKLIN DEALER TELLS OF FORMER NATION-WIDE PERFORMANCE.

Ralph Hamlin, the local Franklin dealer, is delighted with the result of the recent Franklin one-gallon noncoast test of motor efficiency which was run off on the Los Angeles Speedway.

The result was beyond expectation, and Hamlin is enthusiastic over the noncoast method as a true demonstration of motor efficiency. Thirty-four and eight-tenths miles to the gallon of gasoline is quite a record for straight running on a set throttle on a level course, and brought back to mind other famous tests of the Franklin.

In talking over the subject of motor efficiency, Hamlin's face lighted up when he recalled the mileage piled up in the Franklin gallon tests held all over the country in 1917.

"You know," he said, "the Franklin people put over quite a test in July, 1917, and it was on Friday the 13th, too. All over the country, in rain and wind, the Franklin dealers were out on one-gallon tests. The most notable performance of all was that at New Haven, Ct., where the local dealer ran 82.8 miles on one certified gallon of ordinary gasoline. In all, eighty-five of the 179 entrants made individual averages of better than forty miles to the gallon, which was the general average. Here in Los Angeles we managed to squeeze out 44.8 miles on a single gallon.

"Of course, these were road tests with plenty of coasting. This is why I tried the noncoast, dead-level test, so I could show the true efficiency of the six-cylinder air-cooled Franklin. Think of it, 34.8 miles on a single gallon of gasoline on a level course at a set speed of better than twenty miles per hour. I expected better than thirty miles to the gallon, but the result was even better than my most optimistic guess."

VELIE PRICE GUARANTEE.

Between now and the first of next October every person who buys a Velie six gets, along with the car, a green parchment bond that looks for all the world like a stock certificate or a piece of extra large currency. It is the Velie Motors Corporation price guarantee bond, and it means that the owner of that Velie car will get a cash rebate of the full amount of any reduction that may be made in the price of the Velie car between now and the first of October.

According to Harry Lord, it is practically a guarantee that Velie prices are not to be dropped during the summer, for Lord believes that only a decrease in the quality of the car or a very radical change in the prices of raw materials, with changes in contracts which have already been signed, could bring about a decrease, so in effect the bond is price insurance to every purchaser of a Velie six. The fellow who wanted a big motor trip to Yosemite this summer, but was hesitating about buying a Velie lest the price of the car get on the toboggan is now assured that the Velie price is not going to do any such athletic stunts, at least not until after the first of October, and that is a long way off.

Commenting on the Velie announcement, Harry Lord said yesterday: "I have just received a letter from the factories giving the reasons for making this important price guarantee now. It states that all contracts for raw materials for this summer's production of Velie cars have been signed, and that the factories now know just how much it is going to cost to build each Velie car, labor costs alone being uncertain. This has enabled them to come out and take the lead in price stabilizing, and to announce the cash refund if there is a price decrease during the coming months, and to back up that announcement with another issue of the famous Velie price-guarantee bonds that have already proved so effective. The plan is so sound, and so thoroughly in keeping with the advanced merchandising methods now being promulgated that I firmly believe the time will come when all automobile prices will be guaranteed for several months ahead, so that the purchaser is protected against price fluctuations. It will be remembered that last fall the Velie prices were reduced by nearly $300 per car, and that since that time several new features have been added to the car."

CANAVAN LEAVES ON TOUR OF EAST.

WILL TAKE CAREFUL SQUINT AT TRUCKING PROBLEMS WHILE BACK THERE.

J. Jerome Canavan, transportation specialist and western factory representative for the famous Walker balanced drive electric truck, left last week for Chicago to attend the annual sales conference of Walker distributors. Mr. Canavan stated the meeting this year will be of more than ordinary interest for the reason that all foreign distributors will be present at the conference.

Walker trucks are popular in Shanghai, China; Christiania, Norway; Christ Church, New Zealand; Cape Town, South Africa; Yokohama, Japan; Havana, Cuba, and Brazil, South America.

During his eastern trip Mr. Canavan contemplates visiting New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and other large eastern centers, where electric trucks are used in large numbers. He is a great believer in compiling scientific data on operating costs of various types of transportation equipment and does not overlook any opportunity to obtain the very latest angles. It is for this reason Mr. Canavan has been of such great help to large users of transportation in Southern California.

In addition to being associated with Durant, this man intends to handle the Durant line in some of the richest States of Mexico where he already has built up a flourishing business in motor cars and trucks.

PRODUCE ONLY ONE CHASSIS.

BY LYNN C. BUXTON.
Stearns-Knight Distributor.

The Stearns factory has adopted a policy of one chassis only, after several years of following the idea to see what effect it would have on production, costs and sales.

Up to a few years ago, 1918 in fact, the Stearns made more than one chassis, being in two different price classes. As production difficulties grew, during the several years just past, it was decided to concentrate on one high-grade chassis, with a reasonable number of different body types so that the Stearns could remain in the high quality field and at the same time keep price within bounds.

That George W. Booker, president of the F. B. Stearns Company, was right in his policy is shown by the Stearns operating record since last September. Since then the Stearns factory has not lost a day. Production has been kept at its regular point and dealers throughout the country have absorbed all Stearns cars built.

The Stearns was one of the few factories that didn't run wild and increase its production during the period when demand exceeded supply. The factory has always been conservative in its ideas of production and no effort was made to increase it by added factory capacity.

Being a purely manufactured car it was not the desire of President Booker to lower his manufacturing standards by increased production. That his course was a wise one is now certain. During the time when constant price advances were the rule, the Stearns continued to put out the best car they knew how and the price was kept low. Even at this time, when prices on cars that did have heavy advances are being lowered, the Stearns price remains stabilized. It is the intention of the factory to keep the Stearns in its present price and quality class. The Stearns of today costs more to produce than the Stearns of six months or a year ago. Quality and refinements have been added as production costs decreased. Stearns owners and prospective owners can rest assured of full value for every dollar spent for a Stearns. Also that the car will remain in its present class regardless of conditions.

SOME STRENUOUS GOING.

When Mrs. Clara Okley of Alhambra and a party of friends tried to negotiate the "Rim of the World" road from Bear Valley they found that snow and boulders on the road made that route impassable.

After reaching Big Bear Valley by way of the Mill Creek road with no other difficulty than negotiating some deep ruts and a few chuck holes that had not yet been repaired by the road crews, they tried to come out by the other and more scenic route.

They had been told that the road was passable. Eight miles from the lake they found snow on the road, and as the wheels of the Locomobile crushed through it they dropped into ruts nearly a foot deep running full with water. This made slow work for the big car, but it plowed through until all passage was blocked by a huge boulder resting in the middle of the road. By digging away on the lower side of the rock and using some poles for levers it was finally rolled down the hillside, and once more the party started ahead, but they had not gone more than a quarter of a mile before snowdrifts from six to ten feet deep hid all evidenec of a road along the mountainside. After scouting ahead still deeper snow was found, that would surely have stalled the car and presented dangers that the driver did not care to encounter.

Then came the difficulties of maneuvering the big machine on the narrow grade of the hillside to turn around. D. F. Robertson of Hare's Motors was at the wheel, and he demonstrated the flexibility of the car by getting it reversed in what looked to the other members of the party an impossible place for turning.

Returning the eight miles to the lake, the party came back over the Mill Creek route and reported that travel over the crest road would be impracticable for some weeks, as there was a considerable amount of repair work needed in even the first eight miles.

The recent storm since the trip has added still more snow, and it may be a month before the road crews can get the road in shape for safe travel.

In the meantime the Mill Creek and Victorville roads can take care of the traffic, but because of the wonderful scenery on the "Rim of the World" road many motorists prefer to travel it for one way of the trip to Big Bear Valley.

Raced Death And Won!

Advantages Revealed in Hard Service of "Used" Essex

Raced Death and Won
Los Angeles, May 17, 1921
MR. HAROLD L. ARNOLD,
Essex Distributor, Los Angeles.
Dear Sir:—

When Death is your companion on a ride of 101 miles in approximately the same number of minutes, and at the end Science overcomes the grim monster, a man appreciates the value of the motor car which serves him so faithfully.

Recently my cousin at Santa Barbara lay dying. They telephoned me. Already dependable for 25,000 miles, I felt that my Essex could win the race. And it did. The medicine saved him. Now we both acknowledge the dependability of Essex cars.

The Essex gives better than 20 miles per gallon. My first set of cords ran over 18,000 miles. Running cost is much lower than any car I have previously used.

It gives me pleasure, Mr. Arnold, to be able to commend the Essex as a faithful servant deserving a grateful reward.

I hope to be an Essex owner as long as Essex cars are made.

Cordially yours,

Dr. Linhart purchased an Essex from us which had already run 6750 miles. Read what he says:

And after you have read that letter remember, you, too, can now buy an Essex Demonstrator for an easy down payment and balance on low monthly terms.

The New Essex arrived last week. Today we supply our salesmen with their new Demonstrators. The Demonstrators they have been using must be disposed of at sacrifice prices. These cars, driven by experts, are better than new stiff ones. They are nicely limbered up and can hardly be told from showroom cars. Yet you can buy them at less money than many another car which does not enjoy the reputation held by Essex.

TRAP GUN AND ROD
BY TOM MARSHALL

[This is the eighty-fifth of a series of articles dealing with trapshooting, hunting and fishing by Capt. Tom Marshall, a noted authority on the great out-of-doors.]

here fish are deaf, dumb and ! The Mammoth Cave of Ken- y. This marvel of interest is American product, located about miles south of Louisville, im- ately adjacent to Green River, gigantic corrie, was discovered 1809, by a hunter in pursuit of wounded bear. The cave has a rinth of 152 miles of charted erranean streets, alleys and by- Supported by gigantic pillars, many stalatite encrusted halls chambers. maze of intricate passageways, ersing the bowels of the under- world. Indians for many rations back, visited this cave, cted by superstitious awe, yet ng to enter those echoing cor- , enveloped in darkness and erating back sounds and pers, which they agreed eman- from the Evil Spirit. They have not as yet agreed upon the author. Those halls grottes and streets, have been visited by many celebrities. Ole Bull, Jennie Lind, Edwin Booth, Robert E. Lee with many others, now have halls and rooms in the cave bearing their names, commemorating their visit. Throughout the cave, Egyptian darkness prevails.

I was guided by Mat Bransford, a descendant of colored ancestors, who have been a family of cave guides since 1837. Dressed in cave touring costumes and carrying open lanterns, we essayed a three-hour underground expedition of continuous tramping. Many monuments were passed which had been erected by visitors from different States, cities, secret societies or colleges, each person tossing a rock upon his selected pyramind as he progressed. Calcium lights were burned and twists of burning waste accurately thrown by the guide into niches far above, thus illuminating halls and chambers, that their grandeur might better be seen. Stalactite formations were pointed out, featured and named.

In the guide's distorted imagination Martha Washington, Jennie Lind, Shakespeare and others were introduced. The Bridge of Sighs and Episcopal Hall, were appreciated and correctly named. Crossing a narrow tract known as Sandy Sahar, we reached the shores of Echo River. A black sluggish stream, over a mile in length, twenty to two hundred fet wide, with depth from one to thirty feet. No current is noticeable. The light thrown by our lanterns was weird and uncanny, the atmosphere seemed oppressive. Darkness was thick enough to slice down and I was momentarily expecting the arrival of Mr. Charon. the volunteer ferryman, who would insist upon having me for a boat guest across the Styx. Echo River is located 360 feet directly under the hotel from which we started and twenty feet above Green River, into which it flows.

Echo Hall is noted for its acoustic properties. The least whisper is carried afar, to be returned in softened, harmonic, musical tones, then repeatedly tossed and juggled around the hall galleries, its volume gradually decreasing, until a final whisper is faintly heard reverberating direct from nature's keyboard, an exemplification of the science of sound. A paddle-propelled square-nosed "john-boat," about twenty feet long and wide enough to be safe, has been portaged in from the outside and assembled as an excursion scow for use on the classic Echo River, seats accommodating about twenty people, along the boat's gunwales.

Echo River is the home of blind fish, both white and craw. It is called the river of the dead. Crawfish are found about four inches long, which are known to the scientific world as "amblyopis spelaeus" (weak-eyed cave dwellers or fish without eyes.) They are indigenous to Echo River only.

Question: Do you think it possible to propagate game to the point that it will afford a line of diversion and sustenance to the sportsmen of America? Is it possible to bring back the good old days, when game was looked upon as a family meal ticket?

EUGENE H. UHANGST.

Omaha, Neb.

Answer: The State of Pennsylvania, measurably furnishes an answer to this query in the recent report of State Game Commissioner of Pennsylvania, Mr. John M. Phillips. Twenty-five years ago Pennsylvania was considered in the category of "shot out States." Under the protection and propogation plan, game has materially increased, the authentic records of 1920 showing over 3000 buck deer killed in the forests of the Quaker State. The increase is such that at least 4000 will be the hunters portion for 1921. There was also 472 black bear, certainly a sufficient number to properly exercise the "tired business man," if Mr. Bear should decide to "put him up a tree." When over 3,000,000 rabbits are added to the Pennsylvania hunter's bag, there will be no question about the efficiency and productive methods of the State Game Commission. Yes, game can be "brought back" by intelligent conservation, protection and propagation. Pennsylvania is especially well located and has an exceptionally large area of territory in its mountain range, where reclaiming of lands is impossible.

CAN SECURE PARTS ALMOST ANYWHERE.

STANDARD UNITS GREAT ADVANTAGE IF ANY OF THEM EVER GIVE WAY.

"In purchasing an automobile probably the most important thing to look into is whether the parts for replacement are easily obtained," says M. O. King, Case motor car distributor of California. "That is, at some future date, if you are in need of a part and in a rush for it, will the distributor that sold you the car be able to furnish the part immediately?

"Take, for example, the car we are distributing. We can say 'Yes,' emphatically because every part in the Case car is a standard unit, and the parts can be obtained within a few hours from authorized parts stations, which are established by these different factories to give service on their units.

"In the Case car, for example, such units as the Continental motor, Borg & Beck clutch, Thermoid Hardy universal joint, Westinghouse electrical equipment, Delco system of ignition and lighting and Columbia rear axle are used.

"Very few distributors can afford to carry the tremendous stock of parts necessary to meet every call of the car owner, for it would mean an investment of close to $100,000, besides the money carried in cars on hand. Therefore, it can be seen that authorized parts stations are a big boon to the car distributor or dealer and also to every owner of an assembled car."

NEW CORD TIRE IS MAKING A BIG HIT.

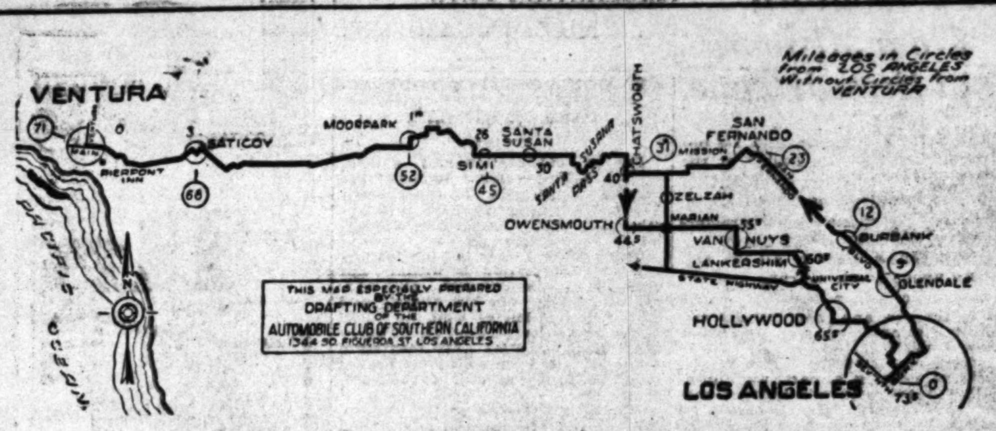
PRICE DROP AND NEW PRODUCT KEEP FACTORY WHEELS HUMMING.

Coincidental with the announcement of an important price reduction, Ajax Rubber Company, Inc., announces a new cord tire which comes into the field heralded as a notable advancement in tire manufacture. The price reduction, which actually went into effect a fortnight ago, is greater than the reductions made by most other large manufacturers, and, coupled with the introduction of the new cord, it has stimulated the company's business to the point where production in the Ajax factories at Trenton, N. J., is rapidly climbing back toward the peak days of last year.

"Our new price schedule," declared Joseph C. Weston, president of Ajax Rubber Company, Inc., "is proving a most potent trade stimulant. Its potency, however, as a builder of good business, is being even surpassed by the announcement of our new Ajax cord, which, of course, is included in our revised price schedule."

A LITTLE SQUARE OF CANVAS.

Few car owners realize what a convenient accessory is a little square of canvas about eighteen inches over all. It saves the knees of the trousers when you have to kneel to get at some inaccessible part; it keeps the jack from slipping on snow or ice; it keeps the inner tube out of the dust when this part is being inserted by the roadside; it will serve to strain gasoline through; it will keep tools from rattling; it will protect the hand in handling hot parts, and, finally, it will make an emergency inside blowout patch. And withal it takes up practically no room in the tool box.



An Interesting One-day Trip Through Mountains to the Ocean.

The weekly Auto Club-Times tour leads the motorist through the famous San Fernando Valley, over several scenic passes and finally down to the ocean at Ventura. The jaunt is easily made in a single day and wonderful spots for picnic lunches are found almost the entire length of the run.

DIRECTIONS FOR IDEAL TRIP

Ventura via San Fernando Valley Gives the Motorist Scenic One-Day Jaunt.

A trip to the sea, but not along the seashore, is indicated by the automobile club drafting department today for Times readers. Later in the summer when warmer days are here, other sea trips will be shown.

Today's tour leads the motorist through the famous San Fernando Valley to Ventura. Every part of the way is interesting and well invested with scenery.

Two routes are offered for leaving the city—either that by way of North Broadway and Glendale, or by way of Hollywood and Lankershim.

If the latter route is chosen it will converge with the other at Chatsworth, a distance of thirty-one miles from Los Angeles. The entire trip to Ventura is only seventy-one miles by way of Glendale, so the round trip may be easily made in a day.

At Ventura lunch may be had at any one of the inns or hotels, or enjoyed on the beach if the party has carried it.

All roads included in this tour are excellent, and no trouble will be found. The trip through the farming districts outlined is of especial interest at this time of year, particularly through the San Fernando section. Mileages will be found within and without circles, showing the distance from this city, and also the distances from Ventura.

Club signs are placed at every turn to guide the motorist on the tour.

OATMAN-GOLD ROADS HIGHWAY IS NOW BEST.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

KINGMAN (Ariz.) May 27.—A large proportion of the autos on the Old Trails highway, are taking the Oatman-Gold Roads highway westward, ferrying at Needles. This road is in very good condition, with smooth going up the only steep grade, that through the mountain pass near Gold Road. Later the main highway will be to the interState bridge at Topock, below Needles. The State is pushing work on this stretch, which is to be completed this fall.

One Effect of Wool Hose.

We imagine you could put a pedometer on a girl in genuine heather mixture stockings and set her down on an overstuffed sofa in a warm room and leave her there for three hours and prove by the interesting mechanical device at the expiration of that time that she had walked at least fifteen miles.—[Ohio State Journal.

Just About All From Missouri at Presedt Time.

"He's from Missouri, and he admits it," says O. R. Fuller of the White Auto Company, local distributor for the Stephens salient six, in analyzing the outstanding characteristics of the 1921 motor buyer.

"This fellow takes in all the statistics about economy runs and the performance of a particular make of motor car, and then blandly and utterly unimpressed, wants to know 'how come?'

"Then he has to be shown all the facts concerning a particular automobile manufacturer's idea of motor construction. He demands a minute explanation of all the details that make for economy in gasoline consumption. In some cases the answers go clear over his head, but he is satisfied.

"What he probably does not understand is the real unselfish idea of service behind that manufacturer's efforts in the direction of motor efficiency.

"The particular 'economy' feature of the Stephens motor is the fuel system originated by Stephens engineers, and found only in the Stephens salient six. These designers were the first to realize the importance of providing a satisfactory method of using low grade fuels.

"In this car a close, high-mounted carburetor feeds the gas directly against the vaporizing wall heated by the exhaust from the two center cylinders. The manifold is built into the cylinder head, forming a smooth chamber that feeds perfectly vaporized, heated gas, evenly to the cylinders. Gas so prepared explodes faster and burns completely, delivering greater mileage to the gallon of gasoline, and enabling the motor to handle low-grade fuels without difficulty. Therein lie the reasons for Stephens economy."

GIVES HIS RUBBER ROUGH TREATMENT.

PROPRIETOR OF LITTLE LAKE HOSTELRY PUTS FAITH IN U. S. ROYAL CORDS.

There is probably no motorist in Southern California or elsewhere, for that matter, who has better reason to know the value of tires, than W. J. ("Bill") Bramlette proprietor of the Little Lake Hotel, that is so well known to those who travel Bishop-way, and who has no mean reputation as a daring pilot of fast cars. Incidentally, he dispenses United States tires in his territory, which is but another tribute to the several well-known makes urned out by the largest tire manufacturing concern in the world.

Because of the location of his home and business, Bramlette depends almost entirely upon the motor car in traveling to and from other communities, while his business is generally dependant upon the class of people who motor, either on pleasure or business bent. "Gasoline and rubber are rather important factors in my existence," he naively puts it.

"I am distributing United States tires because I believe implicitly in them and for the same reason I have used them in some of the hardest tests that ever a motor car was put to, over roads that have a reputation for being bad in every sense of the word," he told J. B. Magee, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the United States Rubber Company. "In every one of the grueling runs, my car was equipped with Royal Cords, and I was not hindered one second by any sort of tire trouble. I can travel at any speed over any kind of wet road or pavement without the least fear of skidding. Their nonskid qualities are too well known among motorists to require any further comment from me."

PUMP LEAKAGE.

When the water pump begins leaking do not assume that necessarily it is because the nut is too loose. Frequently the nut is not to blame at all, but poor packing is the real cause of the trouble. Packing for this part consists of candle wick soaked in tallow, heavy twine similarly treated or special packing material. After the nut has been turned to press the packing down do not turn it further, as excessive squeezing is apt to damage some part of the body of the pump.

LUBRICATION PUTS MILES IN GASOLINE.

AND DON'T CONFINE YOUR ACTIVITIES TO ANY ONE PART OF THE CAR.

Proper carburetion and skillful driving were necessary to make the exceptional records of the recent Yosemite economy run, but still another factor was important, according to D. R. McBryde.

This other factor is lubrication, and by lubrication is meant not only the proper selection and supply of cylinder oil, but chassis and spring lubrication as well.

The reduction of friction in every bearing is essential for maximum economy, and in addition brakes must be free, yet able to act efficiently.

While commenting on the unusual mileage recorded on the run, which was through mud and slush over the greater part of the mountain roads, McBryde stated that had the cars been neglected in regard to chassis and spring lubrication they could not have made such a good showing.

"Many of our customers," he said, "who run their cars on the McBryde oiling racks at our various stations, come back and tell us that they are getting better mileage from the gasoline and want to know if we adjusted their carburetors. We never change the motor adjustments except when requested, but by properly oiling every part of the chassis and draining out the exhausted cylinder oil and putting fresh lubricant in the crankcase it is natural that greater economy will result, even without touching the carburetor or timing apparatus."

HASSLER MODEL FOR DODGE A KNOCKOUT.

CONICAL SPRING IS MAIN FEATURE OF PRACTICAL ABSORBER.

The new Hassler is said to be the most practical shock absorber ever produced for Dodge Brothers cars. The same principle of design and construction that caused more than 1,000,000 car owners to install Hasslers on their cars in the past are embodied in this new Dodge model. They are installed easily, without changing any part of the car—no drilling or altering of the regular spring construction is necessary. Installations are made in just a few minutes. This new shock absorber is inconspicuous and has a very neat appearance—in fact, they add a decided smartness to the car. They are made in several types—for touring cars and sedans, for coupes, roadsters and business wagons.

The principle feature of the new Hassler is a conical spring of chrome-vanadium steel. It is attached in such a manner that the weight of the car compresses the spring so that it gives readily at the slightest jolt. The tendency of the leaf spring to rebound and toss the body is eliminated by a rebound stop incorporated in the lever which holds it stationary. The force of the rebound is thrown into the conical spring and is thus absorbed.

FORD PRICES NOT TO DROP, SAYS MANAGER.

B. L. GRAVES DECLARES REPORTS OF REDUCTION TO BE UNFOUNDED.

On the twenty-second of September, 1920, the Ford Motor Company reduced the price of their cars and trucks from 20 to 32 per cent on the different models.

"Reports are continually coming to us," says B. L. Graves, the local branch manager, "to the effect that there will be still another reduction of Ford products. This I am positive will not come about at this time.

"It should be remembered that the Ford Motor Company was the last to increase the price of their products during the war period and the first to return to pre-war prices. The prices were dropped back to the pre-war basis at one fell swoop, which amounted all the way from 20 to 32 per cent.

"Those who are waiting for another drop will wait in vain, I am thoroughly convinced. No indication has been received—from the Ford Motor Company at Detroit that would point to a further reduction; on the other hand we have authentic information that the Ford Motor Company is selling certain models at a very close margin and will continue to lose money on these types until the price of materials has been greatly reduced."

MORROW STUDIES CONDITIONS HERE.

W. A. Morrow, sales manager of the Standard Steel Car Company, was a visitor in the city last week. He is studying business conditions. He made his headquarters with the Standard Steel Automotive Corporation, distributors of the Standard eight. Morrow is pleased with conditions in the West, declaring them to be satisfactory from every standpoint.

"The West is just as important as the East, so far as business is concerned" he declared yesterday in a chat with Glenn R. Keith of the distributing organization. "The people of the Pacific Coast are no different from those on the Atlantic seaboard. I have gotten that opinion from my survey of the aggressive policies pursued by industrial folks.

"Your roads are wonderful, and I can readily see why this is called a twelve-month motoring country. This is my first visit to the West, and believe me, it will not be my last.

"The Standard Steel Car Company is now building the car complete in its own factory in Pittsburg. The development of the Standard eight during the past few seasons has been great, and business activity has exceeded our fondest expectations."

MARGIN OF PROFIT CLOSELY FIGURED.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

KOKOMO (Ind.) May 27.—President Seiberling of the Haynes Automobile Company makes the statement that present prices of Haynes cars will not be reduced at the expiration of the price guarantee, July 1.

"The margin of profit is figured so closely that the Haynes company cannot possibly undertake a price reduction without sacrificing quality, and, of course, we will not lessen the value of the car in any respect," said Mr. Seiberling.

Just About All From Missouri at Presedt Time.

"He's from Missouri, and he admits it," says O. R. Fuller of the White Auto Company, local distributor for the Stephens salient six, in analyzing the outstanding characteristics of the 1921 motor buyer.

"This fellow takes in all the statistics about economy runs and the performance of a particular make of motor car, and then blandly and utterly unimpressed, wants to know 'how come?'

"Then he has to be shown all the facts concerning a particular automobile manufacturer's idea of motor construction. He demands a minute explanation of all the details that make for economy in gasoline consumption. In some cases the answers go clear over his head, but he is satisfied.

"What he probably does not understand is the real unselfish idea of service behind that manufacturer's efforts in the direction of motor efficiency.

"The particular 'economy' feature of the Stephens motor is the fuel system originated by Stephens engineers, and found only in the Stephens salient six. These designers were the first to realize the importance of providing a satisfactory method of using low grade fuels.

"In this car a close, high-mounted carburetor feeds the gas directly against the vaporizing wall heated by the exhaust from the two center cylinders. The manifold is built into the cylinder head, forming a smooth chamber that feeds perfectly vaporized, heated gas, evenly to the cylinders. Gas so prepared explodes faster and burns completely, delivering greater mileage to the gallon of gasoline, and enabling the motor to handle low-grade fuels without difficulty. Therein lie the reasons for Stephens economy."

GIVES HIS RUBBER ROUGH TREATMENT.

PROPRIETOR OF LITTLE LAKE HOSTELRY PUTS FAITH IN U. S. ROYAL CORDS.

There is probably no motorist in Southern California or elsewhere, for that matter, who has better reason to know the value of tires, than W. J. ("Bill") Bramlette proprietor of the Little Lake Hotel, that is so well known to those who travel Bishop-way, and who has no mean reputation as a daring pilot of fast cars. Incidentally, he dispenses United States tires in his territory, which is but another tribute to the several well-known makes urned out by the largest tire manufacturing concern in the world.

Because of the location of his home and business, Bramlette depends almost entirely upon the motor car in traveling to and from other communities, while his business is generally dependant upon the class of people who motor, either on pleasure or business bent. "Gasoline and rubber are rather important factors in my existence," he naively puts it.

"I am distributing United States tires because I believe implicitly in them and for the same reason I have used them in some of the hardest tests that ever a motor car was put to, over roads that have a reputation for being bad in every sense of the word," he told J. B. Magee, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the United States Rubber Company. "In every one of the grueling runs, my car was equipped with Royal Cords, and I was not hindered one second by any sort of tire trouble. I can travel at any speed over any kind of wet road or pavement without the least fear of skidding. Their nonskid qualities are too well known among motorists to require any further comment from me."

PUMP LEAKAGE.

When the water pump begins leaking do not assume that necessarily it is because the nut is too loose. Frequently the nut is not to blame at all, but poor packing is the real cause of the trouble. Packing for this part consists of candle wick soaked in tallow, heavy twine similarly treated or special packing material. After the nut has been turned to press the packing down do not turn it further, as excessive squeezing is apt to damage some part of the body of the pump.

LUBRICTION PUTS MILES IN GASOLINE.

AND DON'T CONFINE YOUR ACTIVITIES TO ANY ONE PART OF THE CAR.

Proper carburetion and skillful driving were necessary to make the exceptional records of the recent Yosemite economy run, but still another factor was important, according to D. R. McBryde.

This other factor is lubrication, and by lubrication is meant not only the proper selection and supply of cylinder oil, but chassis and spring lubrication as well.

The reduction of friction in every bearing is essential for maximum economy, and in addition brakes must be free, yet able to act efficiently.

While commenting on the unusual mileage recorded on the run, which was through mud and slush over the greater part of the mountain roads, McBryde stated that had the cars been neglected in regard to chassis and spring lubrication they could not have made such a good showing.

"Many of our customers," he said, "who run their cars on the McBryde oiling racks at our various stations, come back and tell us that they are getting better mileage from the gasoline and want to know if we adjusted their carburetors. We never change the motor adjustments except when requested, but by properly oiling every part of the chassis and draining out the exhausted cylinder oil and putting fresh lubricant in the crankcase it is natural that greater economy will result, even without touching the carburetor or timing apparatus."

HASSLER MODEL FOR DODGE A KNOCKOUT.

CONICAL SPRING IS MAIN FEATURE OF PRACTICAL ABSORBER.

The new Hassler is said to be the most practical shock absorber ever produced for Dodge Brothers cars. The same principle of design and construction that caused more than 1,000,000 car owners to install Hasslers on their cars in the past are embodied in this new Dodge model. They are installed easily, without changing any part of the car—no drilling or altering of the regular spring construction is necessary. Installations are made in just a few minutes. This new shock absorber is inconspicuous and has a very neat appearance—in fact, they add a decided smartness to the car. They are made in several types—for touring cars and sedans, for coupes, roadsters and business wagons.

The principle feature of the new Hassler is a conical spring of chrome-vanadium steel. It is attached in such a manner that the weight of the car compresses the spring so that it gives readily at the slightest jolt. The tendency of the leaf spring to rebound and toss the body is eliminated by a rebound stop incorporated in the lever which holds it stationary. The force of the rebound is thrown into the conical spring and is thus absorbed.

FORD PRICES NOT TO DROP, SAYS MANAGER.

B. L. GRAVES DECLARES REPORTS OF REDUCTION TO BE UNFOUNDED.

On the twenty-second of September, 1920, the Ford Motor Company reduced the price of their cars and trucks from 20 to 32 per cent on the different models.

"Reports are continually coming to us," says B. L. Graves, the local branch manager, "to the effect that there will be still another reduction of Ford products. This I am positive will not come about at this time.

"It should be remembered that the Ford Motor Company was the last to increase the price of their products during the war period and the first to return to pre-war prices. The prices were dropped back to the pre-war basis at one fell swoop, which amounted all the way from 20 to 32 per cent.

"Those who are waiting for another drop will wait in vain, I am thoroughly convinced. No indication has been received from the Ford Motor Company at Detroit that would point to a further reduction; on the other hand we have authentic information that the Ford Motor Company is selling certain models at a very close margin and will continue to lose money on these types until the price of materials has been greatly reduced."

MORROW STUDIES CONDITIONS HERE.

W. A. Morrow, sales manager of the Standard Steel Car Company, was a visitor in the city last week. He is studying business conditions. He made his headquarters with the Standard Steel Automotive Corporation, distributors of the Standard eight. Morrow is pleased with conditions in the West, declaring them to be satisfactory from every standpoint.

"The West is just as important as the East, so far as business is concerned" he declared yesterday in a chat with Glenn R. Keith of the distributing organization. "The people of the Pacific Coast are no different from those on the Atlantic seaboard. I have gotten that opinion from my survey of the aggressive policies pursued by industrial folks.

"Your roads are wonderful, and I can readily see why this is called a twelve-month motoring country. This is my first visit to the West, and believe me, it will not be my last.

"The Standard Steel Car Company is now building the car complete in its own factory in Pittsburg. The development of the Standard eight during the past few seasons has been great, and business activity has exceeded our fondest expectations."

MARGIN OF PROFIT CLOSELY FIGURED.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

KOKOMO (Ind.) May 27.—President Seiberling of the Haynes Automobile Company makes the statement that present prices of Haynes cars will not be reduced at the expiration of the price guarantee, July 1.

"The margin of profit is figured so closely that the Haynes company cannot possibly undertake a price reduction without sacrificing quality, and, of course, we will not lessen the value of the car in any respect," said Mr. Seiberling.

General Motors Trucks

In every section of the country where there is truck work to do GMC trucks are being chosen to do it in steadily increasing number. It is our own profound conviction that any truck purchaser who seriously seeks the best truck investment must of necessity choose the GMC.

Looking down into the hold of a liner being loaded with California oranges at Los Angeles Harbor.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

IN A paper read before the recent avocado convention, E. M. Chace, United States Department of Agriculture chemist, in charge of the Los Angeles laboratory, gave very full records of the contents and general make-up of eight avocado varieties under study for the past two or three years.

The fat content is given as follows:

Fuerte, 29.6 per cent; Lyon, 26.9; Puebla, 26.5; Blakeman, 21.6; Taft, 18.9; Spinks, 18.5; Sharpless, 18.4; Dickinson, 14.4. The amount of edible material is highest in the Fuerte, followed by the Sharpless, and in the order named: Lyon, Blakeman, Taft, Spinks, Sharpless, Taft, Lyon. Dickinson, has the smallest per cent of skin and the others, in order, are: Fuerte, Puebla, Spinks, Sarpless, Taft, Lyon, Dickinson. The per cent of seed is lowest in the Lyon and Fuerte with Sharpless a close third. Then follow Blakeman, Taft, Dickinson, Spinks and Puebla. The protein content of the eight varieties stands as follows: Lyon, Spinks, Blakeman, Puebla, Fuerte, Taft, Sharpless, Dickinson. The Dickinson is sixth in weight, lowest in per cent of pulp, highest in per cent of skin, third heaviest in seed, sixth in amount of protein and far the lowest in fat, having but 14.45 per cent as against 29.93 per cent in the Fuerte, the gem of the list.

In fact, the Dickinson is so generally poor that one marvels how it ever got in the official list. There are at least a dozen varieties of greater value for commercial planting or home use. It seems to thrive best in San Diego county. On the other hand, when the other seven are superseded by new California varieties the Fuerte will still stand. The preferred list of five is not the best guide for commercial planting. By the above figures the Dickinson is condemned; the Puebla is a thin-skin for home use and local market and even the splendid Fuerte cannot be shipped long distances with the same handling the thick-shelled Guatemalans will endure without injury. That leaves three good ones on the eastern shipping list of the future, of which three we will say more in time to come. In five years they all may be banished from the list for preferred planting at that time. New varieties originating in California will finally top the list.

A Rare Acacia.

Though Acacia podalyraefolia has been for some years in the local market, it has not been widely disseminated. Of all the species so far grown in California it is the most beautiful, either in or out of flower. Many are hardier, more robust, and grow faster, and for these reasons it has not grown in popular favor as fast as its beauty of foliage and flower would lead one to expect.

Befriend the Toad.

In this country we have never properly appreciated the garden, and this indifference led the United States Department of Agriculture to issue a bulletin on the subject, urging greater friendliness and protection for our humble, warty companion of the garden. In the old Mother Goose's Melodies one stanza runs:

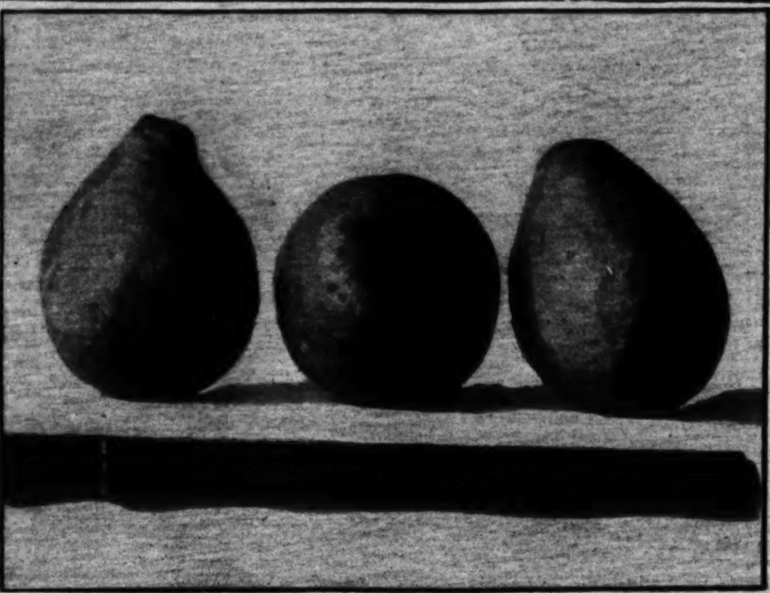
"Croak!" said the toad, "I'm hungry, I think:
Today I've had nothing to eat or to drink.
I'll crawl to a garden and jump through the pales,
And there I'll dine nicely on slugs and on snails."

History of Sweet Peas.

The sweet pea, history records, was first noticed by Cupani, a monk in Sicily, in the year 1699, and a few seeds were sent to England. It was long before variations took place, and about the year 1793 we find that black purple was offered, and thirty-were offered for sale. Seven years later a black purpurple was offered, and thirty-seven years later a striped flower could be [illegible]. In 1860 the first edged variety appeared. Ten years later, Henry Eckford, whose name will always be associated with sweet peas as long as sweet peas are grown, began his great life work. Varieties now came much faster, but at first the stocks were badly mixed.

Gladioli From Seed.

Growing gladioli from seed is not a difficult operation if a few ordinary precautions are taken. One must begin with good seed, and a good plan to make sure one has good seed is to rub off the surrounding wing, or parachute, that nature has provided in order that the seed may be widely disseminated by the wind. A simple way to do this is to take an ordinary gauze cooking strainer and rub the seed over it. The wings will go through in small particles and the good round seed will then be easily separated. It will be found that very often what appears to be good seed is made up of a large proportion of flat, flabby and unfertile particles. In sowing, pick out a spot with rich earth and plenty of sunshine. Sow thickly and cover from one to two inches, pressing down the soil hard; then cover with an old piece of burlap until the little sprouts show thickly above ground. Pin down the burlap so it won't blow away and allow the ground to dry out. Remember, that it seems to be a peculiarity of gladiolus seed and bulblets to like to rub elbows pretty close to each other and they seem to do better with thick sowing. The burlap will certainly cause the seed to germinate, as it keeps the ground moist. After the shoots are well up, remove the burlap and keep the plants well watered. If the weather is dry, wet down once a day and keep the ground well stirred around them.



Fine fruit from an ornamental shrub.

Brazilian pear guavas grown on hillside place in Eagle Rock. Specimens of these guavas run as large as nine inches in circumference.

This three-year-old Queensland nut tree is on the same place that produced the pear guavas pictured above.

The Queensland nut is almost as smooth and round as a marble and has mad an appeal to many growers.

Carnation Propagation.

It often occurs that home owners have plants of fine carnations of which they wish more stock, but do not know the names of the varieties. It looks as though the easiest way out of the difficulty is to propagate at home rather than seek the uncertainties of the market with its attendant loss of time. As but a few plants are wanted, layering is a better and far surer method of increase than by making cuttings. Select strong, vigorous side shoots. With a sharp knife cut half way through stem at a long slanting angle. Dig away a little earth beneath this point. Rush the half-cut portion down in the soil and cover up. Keep well watered for some weeks, and at the end of the period examine the cut portion to see if the half-severed tip has rooted. When rooted freely the remaining part of the stem may be cut through and the young plant set out by itself. A large-sized plant may be surrounded by a score of such "layers," and if the work has been properly done all will readily root and quickly make flowering plants. While early spring is usually selected for this work, any time during the active season will bring success if sufficient care is exercised.

The Glorious Pepper.

The pepper tree is and ever will remain the most popular tree in the southern part of California. No matter how much warfare is waged against it as a host for the black scale, the balance will ever stand in favor of the tree, for inasmuch as such pests must be kept under control on citrus trees why not exercise the same care with the pepper tree. This scale no more contaminates the pepper than it does the orange. If both are equally neglected methinks the pepper tree will harbor the lesser amount of scale. But while we fumigate, spray, fertilize and cultivate the orange tree, it should cause no surprise to find the pepper most heavily infested.

Planting for Color.

In bedding plants use: For white, candytuft, phlox, asters (annual and perennial,) stocks, iris, pyrethrum, gladiolus, dahlias, geraniums, sweet alyssum and zinnias; for pink, use, phlox (annuals and perennials,) asters, stocks, gladiolus and geraniums; for red, poppies, salvias, coxcomb, cannas, geraniums and gladiolus; for yellows, California poppies, coreopsis, calliopsis, calendula, marigolds, sunflowers, day lilies, gaillardias; in blue, iris, Canterbury bells, cornflower, larkspurs, columbines, veronica and stokesia. Some tall plants, as hollyhocks, for background, come in all colors.

Summer Irrigation.

About this time of the year some trees and shrubs long established and of good size, show by drooping leaves and a look of general depression that they need water. It is not well to allow these to remain thirsty until the rains come. Keep a sharp lookout and irrigate heavily all that show signs of distress. From now on to winter they should be watered at least once each month.

Use Proven Plants.

In the desire for something new, do not overdo when purchasing. The old-fashioned plants are the best, for the reason one may rely upon them to produce certain definite results necessary to a satisfactory garden. If you buy novelties, use them as mere incidentals; then if they fail the loss is hardly apparent. Yet try a few new things each year, for they furnish variety, which alone is one of the chief charms of all gardens.

Trial Gardens.

Esetblished of official trial gardens at the University of California at the request of the California Dahlia Society was announced recently by the division of landscape gardening and floriculture. The gardens, when completed, will insure careful study of new seedlings which producers may enter for trial, under impartial judgment according to the rules of the California Dahlia Society.

Breed Types, Standard Ideals and Production.

LIVELY DISCUSSION INEVITABLE. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

NOTHING is apt to precipitate so lively a discussion from now on in national poultry circles as the revision of the standard of perfection with a view to making the "beautiful more useful, and the useful more beautiful." For certain it is that modifications of type in standard-bred fowls with a view to creating a so-called "egg type" is not only difficult to define, but is attended with some hazard. It presupposes that there is a really definable egg type, which may within certain limitations be conceded; but if standard qualifications are to be considered, such as symmetry, color of plumage, head and leg points, the egg type will certainly travel along present lines. To change it, at once removes and negatives breed characteristics, which to our mind is not to be thought of. What is really meant by "breed"? It means, if it means anything at all, that a race of fowl so designated possesses certain characteristics that have become fixed and are transmissible from one generation to another, and which are not found in any other race of fowl. Obviously, some of these characteristics are fundamental and found in all breeds, but not in the same proportions, nor in the same combinations. This is what defines breeds and varieties. When a man buys foundation stock and breeding specimens of Plymouth Rocks or Leghorns, Orpingtons or Black Minorcas, he wants a certain type and color scheme, which is vital, while production in its last analysis is secondary, but essential. If heavy fecundity suggests a divergence from present recognized types of domesticated fowl, there is ever present the hazard of losing distinct breed type. You cannot sell a nondescript type of dairy cow at a long price, even though she yields a bountiful supply of milk and cream, nor any other class of live stock. Breeds must and ought to be maintained.

This, however, does not imply that improvement in economic values with standard breeds is impossible. As a writer in the Feathered World of London well says, "Utility and exhibition breeders alike recognize the value of distinctive names, which are of equal importance to one as to the other. Further, they must represent something that is definite. It is needless to suggest what the result would be if any breeder merely advertised fowls for sale, or eggs from them, but without any name. No matter how he glorified their productivity, his trade would disappear, and his profits would melt like icebergs in the Gulf Stream. When, therefore, he dubs his stock by any one of the breed names there is involved that these are in conformity with what is accepted as the combination making for distinction from all other races." When the criterion is limited only as to number of eggs produced, breed characteristics are quite apt to suffer. It is claimed by the ultra egg farmers that the trapnest is the only standard necessary. If so, then breeds as now understood become a secondary matter. Indeed, why have breeds at all? Why not have a race of super hens that lay eggs and let it go at that? Why not call such a race the superfowls?

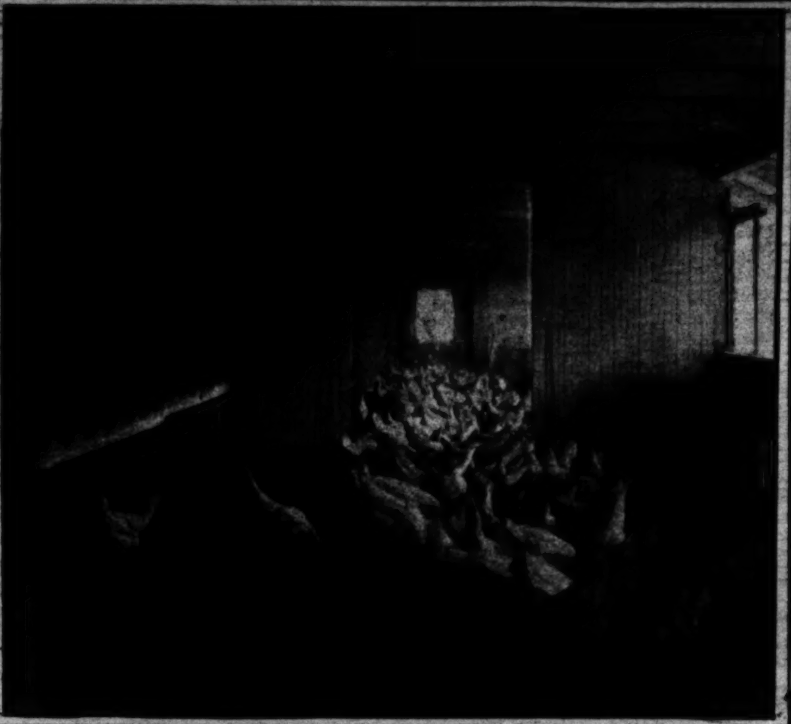
But this is beside the question. We take it that the final result will be a modification of the standard in certain directions, with a view to increasing the productivity of all breeds and varieties, and that the so-called utility type will after all fail of materialization in the pages of the new standard of perfection. The line of cleavage that has marked extreme methods and aims in selection and breeding should be lessened and brought more into harmony. Purity of race should be maintained, and economic values increased without injury to dominant breed characteristics.

The Literature of the Craft.

Oliver P. S. writes from Bloomington as follows:

"As a subscriber of The Times, I wish to ask if you can suggest some good reliable books on chicken, pigeon and guinea hen raising—something that will be helpful to one going into any of these lines as a money-making proposition."

The literature bearing on poultry culture has been greatly increased during the past decade. Not only has there been published large numbers of bulletins bearing on the subject by the Federal Department of Agriculture, but also by the several State agricultural colleges, to which our own State university has been no exception. These are for the most part to be had without cost, and give much information of value. In addition to government publications, there are a number of really good books, copies of which ought to grace the book shelf of every poultry breeder. Without for a moment aiming to give even a partial list, we will venture a few titles that will assist our correspondent in his needs.



Interior of a modern Southern California egg plant.

A skyscraper "greens" garden like this has come in handy in many a small back-yard poultry establishment in the city. Barley and oats sprouted in such a rack are relished by the hens.

Among the leading books treating the subject from a national point of view is John H. Robinson's "Principles and Practices of Poultry Culture." This is a book that presents the subject in a simple, scientific manner, giving the essential facts in logical order. It covers the subject thoroughly and is sound in its deductions. "The Mating and Breeding of Poultry" is a late book from the pens of Harry M. Lamon and Robert R. Slocum, both of whom are in the Federal service, and who have had the poultry industry of the whole country more or less under personal observation. Allowing for this, it is representative of the latest in an enlightened poultry practice. Its principal field of observation is, as its name implies, the mating and breeding of domesticated fowl. Prof. James Dryden's "Poultry Breeding and Management" is an effort with a California appeal, as it [illegible] more specifically of poultry culture in Washington, Oregon and California. It leans toward the commercial and egg-producing side of the industry rather than the fancy and the showroom. Its advice is sound and based on Pacific Coast conditions, which gives it a value to our poultry farmers. We regard it as one of the best. If one is directly interested in the financial side of poultry culture he will find food for thought in Joseph H. Tumbach's "How I Made $10,000 in One Year with 4200 Hens." Now that sounds just a little like Wallingford's millions, but the author explains how it was accomplished, showing his receipts and disbursements in detail. Mr. Tumbach conducts an egg farm on the outskirts of Pasadena, hence is within reach of doubting Thomases who come under the spell of his arguments.

Veering from general books on poultry culture no breeder can afford to be without Duncan Forbes Laurie's "Poultry Foods and Feeding," beyond question the best English book on the subject. In addition to these there are two local books, both written by women, that afford some valuable information bearing on Southern California soil conditions and climate. The first is "Poultry for Profit," by Jean A. Kaethen, and the second is by Susan Swaysgood, and is entitled "California Poultry Practice." There are books treating on special subjects pertaining to poultry culture, such as "Housing and Fixtures," "Incubation and Brooding," "Disease and Cure," etc., but the list here given also touches on these points in a large enough way to meet the demands of beginners and the average poultrymen All of these publications are availa[illegible] supply houses and book stores.

Sixteen Super Hens.

According to H. M. Butterfield, poultry statistician at the agricultural college at Berkeley, there are sixteen super hens in the United States that have produced over 300 individual specimens of hen fruit in one year—thus giving them distinction and the state of their nativity individuality in the realm of web and feather. Of this number Oregon has three top-notchers, one laying 320 eggs in 365 days, and two others showing 323 eggs. Across the continent at Storrs, Ct., a White Wyandotte laid 308 eggs, while a White Plymouth Rock and a White Leghorn were good for over 300 eggs at Vineland, N. J. Now really what does this portend to the poultry industry at large? Are we to understand that the "get" of these super hens will breed a race or strain that will even approximately duplicate their record? Will any breeder of experience contend that such will be the case? Is it not quite reasonable to assume that records like these exhaust the performers and render them undesirable in the breeding pen? And what of a rare specimen capable of producing 300 eggs per annum; that of itself may possess an advertising value, but as an individual performance it has but a slight influence on an egg farmer's receipts and profits. What c[illegible] is a high flock average rather than a single star performer. We take it that a flock average of 150 eggs per hen per year is a good showing; but suppose it was increased twelve to twenty eggs per hen, or say a flock average of 170 per hen. If this was general over California it would certainly add some few dollars to the poultry farmer's income and profits. We know of breeders who will not tolerate a hen in the breeding pen with a record of over 190 eggs per year—that, in their judgment, is the limit at which stamina and virility can be maintained in the offspring. When it comes to increasing flock average from say twelve dozen per annum to fifteen dozen, depend upon it, your egg farmer is really coming under the wire with his trial balance strictly on the right side. This implies wholesome feeding, intelligent management, and a due regard for robust health and superb breeding qualities.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

Is Sewage Waste?

"HUH! What have the farmers to say about the disposition of Los Angeles sewage!"

So, perhaps, said some city folks, as they read the protest of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau against the too hasty expenditure of twelve millions of dollars for a Los Angeles outfall sewer without a thorough investigation of the possibilities of a treatment plant just south of the city.

Just this much, Mr. and Mrs. Angeleno—Los Angeles is in the debt of the farmers of Southern California. The groves and fertile fields surrounding the city have helped greatly to build Los Angeles to its present importance among the cities of the world. The interests of the city are inseparably tied up with the interests of the farmers. When the growers ask for a careful consideration of the agricultural interest involved in the sewage disposal project, therefore, it may be taken for granted that theirs is not a frivolous request and that a pause in the present proceedings may prove mutually advantageous to city and county.

Every additional acre brought under irrigation near the city adds to the wealth of Los Angeles. There are thousands of acres to the south and west of this city which are practically unproductive because of insufficient moisture for crops other than grain and hay. Irrigation supplies are decreasing. As the Farm Bureau points out, from 20,000 to 25,000 acres south and southwest of the city could be irrigated and made to blossom into profitable orchards and intensive crops through the use, after treatment, of the water that is now run to waste through the present outfall sewer into the ocean. And in addition, experts competent to judge say there would be available about 8000 tons of valuable fertilizer if a modern treatment plant were to be built.

The rushing through of this expensive outfall sewer plan without an exhaustive investigation of every possible angle of the suggested alternative plans would be a grave mistake. Los Angeles has no millions to throw away just at this time—that much is certain—and if any plan can be worked out whereby the sewage of the city can be converted from waste into an asset to agriculture, it will be folly equivalent to municipal insanity not to investigate and put it into practice.

Better Organized.

CALIFORNIA and Arizona cotton farmers are this year better organized for marketing their products than they were in 1920. In former years the price they received was largely determined by the buyers' avowed opinion as to the staple length, fineness and general quality. Too often growers who raised long staple cotton have been paid at short staple rates. The Imperial Valley Cotton Growers' Exchange, the Arizona marketing organization and the Kern County Growers' Association will have quite a bit to say as to the price from now, it is asserted by the farmers who still stick by the fleecy crop.

AS TO GINSENG.

Ginseng culture is a long and precarious process, requiring six years from seed to marketable root, with the most particular care during the entire process, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The market, it is pointed out, is limited to such an extent that it is estimated 700 acres would furnish a continuous supply of all that is needed. In the middle of the last century exports to China were eight times what they were in 1919. The price at that time averaged 94 cents a pound. In 1919 it averaged $7.29 per pound.

WATER SHIPMENT OF PERISHABLE PRODUCTS HAVE COME TO STAY.

STRIVING for some remedy for excessive and prohibitive railroad freight rates, growers of citrus fruits in Southern California several months ago sent by steamer, by way of the all-water route through the Panama Canal, a trial shipment of oranges and lemons to the markets of New York and Philadelphia.

This shipment, which was on board the steamship Charles Cramp, arrived in such good condition that steamship officials as well as growers themselves came to a realization of the practicability of water transportation. Scientific tests were taken during the entire voyage of the Cramp and the findings were so favorable as to prompt government officials to issue a statement from Washington to the effect that "water shipments have been found to be entirely practicable as well as economical." The experimental shipment, however, brought out another fact: that to successfully transport large quantities of citrus fruits by water to the eastern seaboard, existing methods of shipping must be revolutionized. Proper refrigeration and careful handling of the boxes at points of loading and unloading were essential if decay and breakage were to be minimized. It is these features that are now being worked out by steamship operators, who are coming to more and more realize the importance of the newly-acquired business.

The old-established method of loading cargoes into the holds of vessels by means of rope sling was found impractical for citrus shipments, as breakage of boxes was heavy. This method has recently been overcome by an improved sling which keeps all ropes and chains from the boxes. Shipping officials are keenly interested in the new sling, which, it is thought, will be adopted at all ports where perishable products are handled.

During the first citrus shipments, boxes were packed on the sides, but it was later determined that packing the boxes on end with slats between served the two-fold purpose of better refrigeration and less breakage. All fruit is now being packed in this manner.

All of the steamships carrying consignments of California fruits have improved to some degree refrigeration facilities. The general method of keeping an even temperature in the holds is by forcing draft of precooled air, creating a continuous ventilation.

SHIPMENTS SUCCESS.

Marking a new era in shipping circles, the steamer Eemdijk of the Holland-American line, sailed from Los Angeles Harbor on February 25 direct for London via the Panama Canal with 4500 boxes of oranges and lemons. This shipment received an enthusiastic welcome at the English seaport and found an immediate sale. The condition of the fruit was entirely satisfactory and the saving to the grower in freight rates prompted another and larger shipment. This cargo was billed to London and Rotterdam and was aboard the Moerdijk, sister ship of the Eemdijk. It contained 7900 boxes of oranges.

According to announcement from the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, from the time water shipments were inaugurated to the sailing of the Moerdijk, 76,619 boxes of fruit were sent to eastern and European markets via the all-water route. Of these, 17,510 boxes were oranges and 59,109 were lemons. Figuring 400 boxes to the car, this quantity of fruit represents approximately 192 carloads.

It was also stated that the railroads have lost during this same period of time approximately $85,000 in revenues by water competition.

The record shipment of fruit to the Atlantic seaboard arrived in New York on May 20 aboard the steamer Yalza, containing approximately 20,000 boxes, or fifty carloads of fruit. It is expected that this total on a single boat will be reached consistently in the future.

VEGETABLES BY WATER.

That the movement to ship perishable farm products by water is spreading to other than citrus crops is evidenced by the fact that the California Vegetable Union recently sent aboard the steamer Julia Luckenbach, a trial shipment of Coachella Valley onions to eastern markets. This cargo will be carefully watched en route and if it arrives in good condition, the possibility is great that practically the entire onion crop will be shipped by water this season.

According to Thomas O'Neill, president of the union, vegetable growers will test in the near future the possibility of water shipments of celery, lettuce, cauliflower, and other varieties of truck commodities. He states that unless some relief from present stifling rail rates can be found, many of the growers will be bankrupt and the vegetable acreage of the State will be reduced 50 per cent.

A meeting of much interest to the Pacific Coast has been called for June 1, when the first gathering of the All-Western Committee on Water Transportation will be held in Seattle.

The purpose of this meeting will be to establish on a firm and permanent basis water transportation from the Pacific Coast to eastern ports.

The committee was formed as a result of a recent trip throughout the Northwest made by C. S. Whitcomb, vice-president of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange. Mr. Whitcomb secured pledges from growers of 4000 carloads of apples, which, combined with a pledge of a like number of citrus growers, will probably guarantee steamship lines sufficiently to enable them to offer adequate facilities for transporting the products.

While the first step toward securing intercoastal ocean shipments for perishable farm products was inaugurated by apple and citrus growers, it is planned to include later co-operation of all other producers of perishable products.

In discussing the subject of water transportation, G. Harold Powell, general manager of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, stated recently.

"Shipment of citrus fruits is not a temporary move. Excessive railroad freight rates forced growers to look into the possibilities of water transportation. This method, through various tests, proved entirely practicable as well as economical.

"The enthusiastic support of the apple growers in the north and their pledge to co-operate with us in guaranteeing a tonnage which will interest steamship lines to establish adequate facilities for carrying our commodities, is gratifying and proves that water shipping will be permanent and that a good percentage of western perishable crops, in the future, will move to eastern markets by all-water routes."

On the front lines—forest ranger beating out fire.

Every week should be "Forest Protection Week" in this country, although last week was the one officially designated under that name by President Harding for the purpose of calling public attention to the necessity of preserving the nation's timber resources, conserving mountain watersheds and protecting floods through elimination of forest fires.

NEW VARIETY OF COTTON YIELDS TWO BALES PER ACRE AT INDIO.

SHORT staple and Egyptian cotton, careful observers say, may be discarded entirely by cotton growers of California and Arizona, following the publication of amazing results of growing Acala cotton at Indio, Coachella Valley, by the United States Department of Agriculture. The costs of growing this cotton is less than that of growing American Egyptian, and the yield per acre is shown to be over twice that of any other cotton heretofore produced in California or Arizona.

Though yields of Acala cotton at the rate of 2.07 and 2.83 bales per acre were obtained last year on experimental plats at the government date farm at Indio, Cal., however, Federal specialists caution farmers against crediting reports which place the yield at four, five and even six bales.

The variety was acclimatized only a few years ago. It was named for the place in Southern Mexico where the original seed was secured. The yields generally are good, and the fiber is of superior quality, being, under favorable conditions, 1 3-16 inches long in comparison with 1 4-16 for Triumph or Mebane, 1 1-8 for Lone Star, and 1 1-4 for Durango. This causes it to sell usually at a premium of several cents a pound more than ordinary cotton.

The variety has become popular in Oklahoma and Northern Texas, and as a result of the experiments last year, a movement is afoot to produce large quantities of pure seed of this variety in the Coachella Valley, where conditions are favorable for the production of pure, high-class seed, not only for local use, but for shipment to other cotton regions that do not have good planting seed. The co-operation of the State Department of Agriculture is being sought by the Acala Cotton Growers' Association, for inspecting the fields and certifying the quality of seed, with such assistance as can be given by the Bureau of Plant Industry, in roguing and selection work.

Although the results secured at Indio must be considered exceptional, and are not to be expected in regular farm practice, the Acala cotton usually is prolific, and usually stands near the head of the list when compared with other well-known varieties, including Mebane, Lone Star, Trice and Durango. Such comparisons, in adjoining rows or blocks, have not been limited to the eastern cotton belt, but have been repeated for several years in the irrigated valleys of Arizona and California, and in different localities, including the Yuma Experiment Farm at Bard, Cal., and the Plant Introduction Garden at Chico.

DEVELOPING PURE SEED.

The Indio planting last year was not made as a yield test, but for the purpose of developing a local stock of seed, so that the general behavior and commercial possibilities of the variety under Coachella Valley conditions might be determined. Two small fields, a few rods apart, were planted March 27, 1920, on the government date garden at Indio. In one field, the cotton followed alfalfa, while the other field was raw

CELEBRATE "CHICKEN DAY."

GLENDALE (Ariz.)—Possibilities of poultry husbandry were interestingly set forth in a parade and speeches by distinguished men and women of Arizona last week, when Chicken Day was celebrated. In a large tent feathered stock were well displayed, prize birds being exhibited from all parts of the Salt River Valley, and in the parade beautiful "chickens" of another type on floats were admired. Thousands of visitors were entertained and shown the chicken ranches of this district. A deed was presented to the United States Department of Agriculture to ten acres of land on which a poultry experiment station is to be erected.

APHIDS ON PRUNES.

PORTERVILLE.—D. T. Rewey, local horticultural inspector, reports the finding of small, green, mealy bug lice on prune trees in this district. According to Mr. Rewey this is the first appearance of this "bug" in any quantity, and the pests do not appear to have injured the trees as yet. For control of this insect Mr. Rewey advises immediate use of a spray of black leaf forty, one pint, to four pounds of fish oil soap and 100 gallons of water. This spray is recommended by the State Department of Agrriculture. It should be used before the pest is covered with the white, wax-like substance from which they derive their name. It is the opinion of Mr. Rewey that the mealy bug louse, having wintered in the grasses and weeds of infested orchards, have spread to the leaves and twigs of young growth. He anticipates quite a little damage from the pest in this district during the coming season, unless orchardists take immediate precaution.

HOLDING VALENCIAS.

RIALTO.—Valencias of the Rialto district are of finest quality this season, but few shipments have been made to date, as most of the growers are of opinion that it is better to hold for several months after sending out the last of the navel crop. Shipments sent out in May have been mostly bloods, St. Michaels, seedlings and sweets, although some navels have been shipped. The best demand for lemons and grapefruit in eastern markets comes with warmer weather. Possibly a dozen cars of grapefruit have been sold this season in small lots in California markets.

ORCHARDS REPLACE GARDENS.

LOMA LINDA.—The garden spots of the San Bernardino Valley are giving way to the peach, the apple, the apricot and the walnut. At least three of the spots that were for years given over to truck gardens are now largely in orchards. The first to go was Yucaipa Valley, where for years the Chinese had extensive gardens on the old Dunlap ranch site. There were close to a hundred Chinese there at one time, but for many years they gradually slipped away until a year or so ago the last one left. Now apples, peaches and other fruits are planted there and the little gardening carried on is being done between the rows of the trees. Next went the Grand Terrace, which is west of Loma Linda. The gardens there gave way to peach trees and now the farmers are planting walnut trees between the rows of the peach trees. The farmers believe that peach trees. The farmers believe that only about five or six years after they produce first. They are planning to have the walnut trees ready to bear by the time the peaches begin to fall off. Onions and melons were grown there in large quantities at one time Now the gardens on Base Line are giving way to fruit trees.

WORK ON HIGHWAYS.

RANNELS.—The Rannels Farm Bureau Center turned out in a body one day last week and worked on the highways leading from the Palo Verde Valley to Los Angeles. About fifty men and women of the center put their efforts into play and work. While the men worked on the approach to the mesa on the Butterfield Trail, fixing up the chuck holes and sandy spots, the ladies prepared a picnic lunch, which was spread out under shade trees and greatly enjoyed by all. "Better highways" is the slogan the Rannels center has adopted and it will do everything possible to live up to it.

DATE GROWERS WANT AID.

INDIO.—A committee from the California Date Growers' Association, consisting of Paul Popenoe and Andrew Russell, has returned from Washington, where they received promises of Federal aid in developing the date industry. The men had interviews with President Harding, the Secretary of Agriculture and members of Congress, all of whom were greatly interested in the efforts of Americans to place date growing on a solid commercial basis. The Bureau of Plant Industry, they were reminded, has already spent more than $150,000 in their behalf, investigating varieties and cultural methods.

RABBIT SHOW HELD.

ONTARIO.—Members of the Ontario-Upland Rabbit Association staged a successful rabbit show in a building on South Euclid avenue, this city, on May 21. More than 100 rabbits and cavies were entered. The show was free to the public, and pupils of the grammer schools flocked to the exhibition while it was open. L. H. Salisbury of Pasadena was judge.

PACKING-HOUSE OPENS.

BEAUMONT.—A few boxes of the early "Chapma" cherries were picked and marketed two weeks ago in the Beaumont district. The Highland Home ranch shipped several boxes to Imperial Valley points and to Arizona. The Fruit Growers' Association packing-house has been opened and is ready to handle the crop, which Manager Cross thinks will be good. Heretofore a good part of the cherry crop has been sold direct to the consumer, who, coming up on holiday outing, would buy and pick the cherries in the orchard. The cold snap in April hurt a few late blooming apples, but still there will be a bumper crop this year. Thinning out of the fruit has started, and it is going to be a big job and require much help.

SHIP EARLY APRICOTS.

BAKERSFIELD.—The first carload of apricots shipped from that part of California above the Tehachepi, grown by Herbert Rogers of Kern Mesa, went out from here May 12. This is a week earlier than the first movement of last season's crop, according to Harold L. Pomeroy, Horticultural Commissioner. The second carload went from the ranch of Mrs. Rebecca Clevenger, south of Edison.

HOGS MOVE WELL.

CORCORAN.—At sales of hogs in four valley cities last week the sum of $15,452.55 was realized by 103 hog raisers. The one held here netted $1189.17 to nine consignors. Prices ranged from $5 to $8.50 per hundred pounds.

You can't make a No. 1 hog out of a No. 2 merely by selling it through co-operative marketing. Quality and all-round honesty will continue to be the most compelling virtue of all right-thinking men and women.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

CALEXICO.—Contracts have been closed by Victor Caruso for the feeding of 1500 head of beef cattle on El Progresso ranch, formerly known as the Mt. Signal ranch, about fifteen miles southwest of this city in Lower California, and next fall Mr. Caruso is preparing to increase the feeder herds to 5000 cattle. The ranch now has an abundance of feed available for the first herd, which is expected to arrive about June 1, and by the end of the summer more than 3000 additional acres of alfalfa will be available. The plowing of the big acreage for alfalfa is nearly completed and the planting will be done at the most opportune time in the near future. The 12,000-acre property has heretofore been devoted to cotton growing, but this season Mr. Caruso states not a stalk of cotton will be grown, the entire acreage being devoted to other agricultural lines, and to stock raising as soon as it can be made ready.

Some big lemons.

They weigh a pound each and were grown on the Lyans ranch in La Canada.

The "Torreon plan" of farming, which has been so successful in the Torreon district of Mexico, will be adopted on El Progresso ranch. The entire hacienda will be under Mr. Caruso's personal direction, but it will be divided into smaller units, probably of 500 or 1000 acres each and worked by other tenants. Under this plan each unit will have its own house and other essential buildings, canal system and other appurtenances necessary to insure a good home for the tenants and successful cultivation of the lands. Raising of beef and dairy cattle is now being considered by the new head of the big ranch as the best line in which to engage when the ranch is rejuvenated and ready for the application of the new system.

WATERMELON ACREAGE.

EL CENTRO.—According to a survey made by shippers, the area planted to watermelons in the Imperial district this year is 2000 acres, which is about 15 per cent greater than the acreage last year. The first express shipments will begin about June 1 and carloads will be moving ten days later.

POISON GRAIN DRIVE.

SANTA BARBARA.—Early activity in the county-wide poison grain drive against ground squirrels is being urged by County Horticultural Commissioner Eugene S. Kellogg. The county has been divided into five districts, each in charge of an inspector, who will call on land owners and advise as to the best methods of procedure against the rodent pests. The grain drive is to be a [illegible] months ago, and will, it is believed, clean up the county almost completely. The districts and inspectors are: Santa Barbara, Fred McClosky; Lompoc, G. S. De la Cuesta; Los Olivos, F. B. Thompson; Los Alamos, J. M. Cox, and Santa Maria, R. C. Wylie. Where land owners fail to co-operate the county will clean the land and make the charge a lien against the property.

RESULTS PLEASE GROWER.

LINDSAY.—Results exceeding expectations have been achieved in the experiments conducted for the past year by Dr. P. A. Boncquet in the forty-acre orange grove of Dr. Root of Lindsay. By continuous plowing and free use of sulphuric acid, this dry bog soil has been rendered friable and loose. The crop of navels doubled that of the previous year, while the crop of Valencias now being harvested is record breaking. New growth on the trees is so dense the fruit cannot be seen. T. E. Anderson, display man for the American Fruit Growers, secured much of the prize fruit at San Bernardino from the Root grove. He also expects to make a display of the Root Valencias at Anaheim. Dr. Boncquet also states that careful observation of citrus crops, methods and conditions during the last twelve months confirms his opinion of last spring, that the winter cover crop was not desirable in the grove.

COTTON ACREAGE LESS.

IMPERIAL.—It is believed that not more than 25,000 bales of cotton will be grown in that part of the Imperial Valley that is in California, as against approximately 48,000 bales last year. Below the line, it is believed that at least 50,000 acres have been planted to cotton. This will reduce the output of the entire valley from 105,000 bales last season to about 70,000 bales, mostly of short staple.

ARIZONA RANGES DRY.

TUCSON (Ariz.)—Telegraphic reports to the Weather Bureau indicate that the supply of stock water is diminishing in all parts of Arizona. A small amount of snow fell in Coconino county recently, but aside from refreshing vegetation to a small degee was of little benefit. Sprinkles of rain fell at Pinedale, Fort Apache and Fort Bayard, New Mexico. Lack of drinking water and impoverishment of the range from absence of moisture constitute a most serious condition. Stock are reported dying in a number of sections and immediate relief is not apparent. High winds affected the range injuriously, and were decidedly disagreeable to man and beast. Stock are being fed in southwestern New Mexico, and some are being shipped from the Douglas section. From persons who [illegible] ascertained that there [illegible] there, but there is an abundance of old grass of good quality.

GRAY SCALE FOUND.

TERRA BELLA.—Gray scale has invaded the citrus orchards of Terra Bella, according to the report of H. E. Segress, local horticulutral inspector, who recently returned from a trip of inspection in company with Frank Braun, Deputy Horticultural Commissioner for Tulare county. The horticultural department will make a thorough investigation of groves in the district, and if affected groves are not cleaned up, abatement notices will be posted, and the county fumigation crews set at work. According to Mr. Braun, gray scale increases very rapidly. One gray scale will hatch 800 in a season, with a death rate of 60 per cent, leaving 400 live scale. At this rate, a single tree would have millions of scale in a few seasons. The Terra Bella district has been quite free of the gray scale until recently.

GROWERS' MARKETING PLAN.

OWENSMOUTH.—The Van Nuys and Owensmouth Lima Bean Growers' associations have merged, with the offices of the new association at Marian. One of the large chain store grocery concerns of Los Angeles has agreed to help the growers market their crops by offering special low introductory prices on baby limas. Other means will be taken to advertise the delicious baby bean.

SPRAYERS WIN BATTLE.

YUCAIPA.—The coddling moth is being fought tooth and nail by the apple growers, and reports from R. L. Brooks, horticultural inspector, indicate that the growers are winning the battle. The growers started the spray the first week in May, although work was held back somewhat by heavy rains. The early varieties were sprayed first and the Delicious came next. Winesaps and Arkansas Blacks had to be sprayed by the middle of the month, and Rome Beauties three or four days later. Because of the large crop, the spray machines in the valley have been working almost day and night.

LARGE APRICOT CROP.

BRYN MAWR.—Local prune and apricot growers are to market through the California Prune and Apricot Association. For a time there was grave doubt as to whether the association would be able to control the local crop. L. O. Yount, the largest grower of apricots in the section, has not entered the association, because he has a large drier which will take care of probably 1600 tons of fruit. He dries practically all of his apricots, and, as he has been doing this for about twenty years, he has an established market for his fruit. The apricot crop is going to be a large one, and the local growers believe that they will be able to dispose of their crop to better advantage through the association. A large part of the crop of this section is to be dried this year, although the canneries will take care of a certain percentage of it.

WHITTIER CITRUS INSTITUTE.

WHITTIER.—Preparation is being made to entertain several hundred orange and lemon growers and others interested in the citrus industry at the coming citrus institute, which is to be held in Whittier June 24 and 25. The institute is under the direction of the Farm Bureau centers of Whittier and Rivera, and many eminent orchardists and specialists in the citrus industry are expected to attend. President Pinkerton of the local Chamber of Commerce is to appoint a committee to cooperate with the bureau in securing entertainment for the guests. The institute will close with a banquet.

FINE AVOCADO EXHIBIT.

LA HABRA.—The Yorba Linda avocado exhibit at the Valencia orange show at Anaheim created a great deal of enthusiasm among avocado growers through the State. The exhibit was in charge of Dr. Keller and Mrs. Christofferson of this place. Exhibits from the E. E. Knight, J. F. Wheedon and L. D. Oliver ranches showed remarkable fruit. Three avocados from the Knight and Oliver ranches weighed nine pounds and are valued at $2 apiece. Two boxes of very fine fruit from the Wheedon ranch were shown.

HEAVY VALENCIA YIELD.

WOODLAKE.—Dan Bachmann of this district has just finished picking 800 boxes of fruit from four acres of Valencias, young trees. The yield is considered exceptional. Bachmann's ranch is located in the Woodlake Citrus Developing Company's tract, just north of town.

A NEW APPLICATOR.

LA HABRA.—A new type of fumigating applicator for use with cyanide gas has been perfected by R. M. Jackson of La Habra, who has an entirely different type of machine than those now on the market. It was built at the beginning of last season and tested out and found practical, being

MILK HAS A PLACE IN POULTRY RATION.

Poultrymen who have, or can obtain at a reasonable price, plenty of milk, are in a position to raise their flocks at less expense and with a far greater amount of success than those who are unable to include this valuable food in the flock's diet. Milk is especially desirable for young chickens, and for the fattening of poultry, where it is done on a large scale, and the poultry is closely confined.

Buttermilk and skim milk are the two forms of milk which are most commonly used in feeding chicks and laying hens, and these products are also used to some extent in commercial fattening. Semisolid and condensed buttermilk are now being fed quite extensively in the commercial fattening of poultry and to some extent to chicks and laying hens.

Milk products are readily digestible by chickens, and have a marked beneficial effect in addition to their actual food value. They especially help keep small chickens free from bowel trouble. Many poultrymen like to dip the newly-hatched chick's bill into milk for their first feed, as it helps to clean out the chick's digestive system. Milk products may be fed to chickens and to older stock either in a sweet or sour condition. The more common practice is to feed these products continuously, either sweet or sour, and not to alternate the use of sour and sweet milk.

In feeding milk products to hens, the milk is usually kept before them as a drink, and is also used to some extent in mixing the mash wherever a moist mash is used. Poultry will not get sufficient animal protein from milk supplied in this way to take the place of meat scrap commonly used in the poultry mash. In order to furnish sufficient protein in the ration to take the place of meat scrap, the milk must be fed in a thickened form such a clabbered milk or cottage cheese. When fed in this condition, enough can be readily supplied to give high egg production and good results without any other animal protein feed. Where milk is supplied fairly regularly to the laying hens, it is not essential to furnish any green feed, as the milk will take the place of the green feed to good advantage.

In the commercial fattening of poultry, where the chickens or hens are very closely confined and fed a forced ration for a limited period, usually from seven to seventeen days, milk is considered essential. Practically no commercial fattening of poultry is conducted on a large scale in [illegible] A ration with a consistency of porridge, which contains about [illegible] per cent milk, is commonly fed in this work. The milk serves not only as a source of feed, but keeps the digestive organs of these fattening chickens in good condition, and also gives the chickens a bleach characteristic of well-fattened poultry. From this method of feeding the name of "milk-fed" chickens is taken and it is applied to nearly all of the commercial fattened chickens.

Many of these fattening stations are located in small country towns and cities where buttermilk is available from creameries at a very low price, but as the supply of this buttermilk is becoming more limited, especially in the larger towns and cities, the various concentrated forms of buttermilk are being used very extensively in fattening poultry. Semisolid and condensed buttermilk are the two other forms most commonly used. In feeding both of these products to chickens for fattening, milk is usually supplied in a more highly concentrated form than ordinary buttermilk.

THE HONEY BEE AS A FRUIT POLLENIZER.

BY G. W. BERCAW.

A preliminary experiment, undertaken by the University of California, at the instance of the prune growers of California, to locate the cause, if possible, of so great a variation in the prune crop from year to year, revealed that the honey bee was the principal agent in the transfusion of the pollen between the blossoms. Trees were selected, as nearly as possible, so that the conditions would be similar as to age, size, variety, etc. These trees were inclosed, or covered, with netting to exclude all insects, and to also retain the bees during the blossom period. A hive of bees was placed within the inclosure of one of the trees, and the other left without, and to itself. Conclusive results indicated approximately a 20 per cent increase in the mature fruit as between the two trees in favor of the tree with the bees. The university has taken up further tests along this line, of which we will hear more later. It seems reasonable that tests made with the prune tree would apply to other fruits, citrus and deciduous.

It is authoritively said that the cucumber is a plant that will not self-pollenate and few ever set without the aid of the bees in pollenating the blossom. Clover, red and white, will produce more and better seed when conditions are favorable for pollenization of the bloom. In California the clover is rare as a honey-producing plant, but in Eastern States the clover belt is very wide and extensive.

It may be true that other insects besides the bees perform the same functions of pollenization of the blossoms, but a close observation discloses the fact that more bees than other insects similarly engaged are found among the blossoms.

The writer is inclined to believe, from close general observation and study of the conditions, that the successful orchardist of today is beginning to wake up to the fact that the honey bee is one, and the principal one, of the agents of pollenization of the fruit blooms. Many citrus and deciduous growers are eagerly supporting the movement to bring more bees into a more direct contact with the open blossoms during their period of blossoming. It is not practical to locate large numbers of colonies of bees among the groves, but as a rule a few can be placed in close proximitely and in many instances large numbers can be permanently located conveniently within range of the groves.

RAIN DAMAGES LARGE QUANTITY OF ALAFALFA.

The rainfall during May, which constituted record precipitation in many sections of Southern California, caused great damage to alfalfa hay lying cut in the field. Officials of the Alfalfa Growers' Association state that the damage amounted to more than $50,000 to alfalfa alone. The rains came at a time when there was a large quantity of barley hay cut and in stock, but the damage to barley, oat and wheat hay will not be as great as that of alfalfa, as much of this dried out in the sun following the rain. Much of the spoiled alfalfa hay is being sold to citrus growers as fertilizer. The damage to hay was offset by the benefit to trees and field crops of the generous precipitation in some parts of Southern California.

DATE GROWER GIVES POLLENATION POINTERS

Burdette K. Marvin, an experienced date grower of the Indio district, advises growers of dates to cut costs in the date orchard by bottling pollen from the male palm, carefully drying it, saving it for pollenation from year to year. Mr. Marvin also advises pollenation of the spathes with pipe cleaners.

Bruce Drummond, in charge of the Indio Date Garden and experiment station, reports pollen collected a dozen years ago still fertile. It requires some time to tie into the spathes male blooms in the usual way, and Mr. Marvin collects his pollen, places his pipe cleaners, cut in two, in the receptacle, and goes about on the even tenor of his way about the orchard pollenating his dates. He finds that this saves 50 per cent of the cost of pollenization.

This grower is convinced that the cost of bagging his clusters is fully justified, and will "bet bags against birds" this season as usual, while many growers will allow their clusters to become prey of the winged pests. Mr. Marvin always perforates his bags in various places, and uses both paper and cloth bags, finding no difference in effectiveness.

Mr. Marvin's trees are now grown to such a point that he is using ladders for harvesting and pollenation. His pick, he finds, averages nine pounds per hour of harvesting, crating and hauling.

The Executive Committee consists of the following: Carl Raab, D. T. Boardman, John Mynes, Walter Saunders and W. E. Mulkey. The center will do everything in its power to encourage the diversification of crops and the raising of dairy and live stock, as well as the growing of early maturing table grapes and other fruits. VITICULTURIST GIVES RESULT OF. SURVEY OF SOUTHERN VALLEYS.

F. T. BIOLETTI, head of the Division of Viticulture, University of California, during late April made a survey of grape-growing conditions in the San Fernando, Antelope and Victor valleys, following numerous inquiries by farmers on this subject. Mr. Bioletti's findings have been incorporated in a report to the Farm Adviser of Los Angeles county.

Prof. Bioletti finds that the soil and climatic conditions of the San Fernando Valley are well adapted to the culture of certain varieties of grapes and that conditions in portions of the Antelope and Victor valleys, where irrigation water is available, appear to be favorable to grape growing.

The university expert prefaces his report with the caution to intending grape growers that large profits realized by growers during the past two seasons should not be allowed to stampede farmers and orchardists of the regions visited away from other paying crops to grapes, as the future of the grape-growing business, except that of the raisin grape, is, in his opinion, problematical. Great quantities of fresh grapes were sold for home wine making last year, and whether this trade will endure is a question. However, the legitimate market for grapes seems to have been stimulated recently, and there seems to be some reason for extensive plantings of vineyards this spring.

Grapes in the low-lying lands of the San Fernando Valley and those in some parts of the Antelope and Victor valleys were hurt by spring frosts, Prof. Bioletti finds, but he points out that frosts also hit grapes in various portions of the San Joaquin Valley. Therefore, the intending vineyardist need not hesitate over vine planting because of these unusually late frosts. Lack of evidence of grape culture and gross neglect of some vines in these valleys made it difficult for Prof. Bioletti to form accurate opinion as to grape culture possibilities there.

IN SAN FERNANDO VALLEY.

Prof. Bioletti's general impression is that the San Fernando Valley is well suited to grape growing. He found many varieties of grapes in vigorous growth in several parts of the valley. In some lower parts of the valley, in wash lands, there were many weak and dead vines.

In the lower middle portion of the San Fernando Valley, Prof. Bioletti found, spring frosts may be too frequent and mildew may be prevalent. But, he points out, there are few grape-growing districts in the State where spring frosts do not occasionally occur. Mildew can be controlled by sulphuring. The annual sum of heat is undoubtedly favorable, but the very early varieties would be later here than in the hottest districts, and the very late varieties might be caught by frosts. The soils, on the whole, are favorable.

There is probably not sufficient rain in the valley for the best crops, but irrigation is available. Raisin grapes are not likely to be successful, owing to difficulties in drying and to competition with districts more suited to this branch of grape growing. Table grapes are most likely to be profitable. Emperor, Hunisa, Cornichon, Malaga and Black Monukka, a new grape, are varieties that are most liable to prove successful.

NORTH OF SIERRA MADRES.

Prof. Bioletti summed up his findings on conditions in the Antelope, Victor and Apple Valley, and the Hesperia, Baldy Mesa, Dagget and Barstow regions in one report, conditions being similar practically all over the former Mojave Desert.

A rainfall of at least sixteen inches per year is needed for successful grape growing, the expert points out, and the clear air, heavy spring winds and warm summer temperatures exert a drying influence on the soils in these regions. Hence irrigation is necessary for grape growing north of the Sierra Madre range.

Prof. Bioletti found few vineyards on which to base his findings, but there were enough vines here and there on which to form general conclusions. In many cases the cultivation and pruning were very imperfect and the vines had suffered, but in many localities vines which had been taken care of had shown a growth greater for the age than the same varieties in the San Joaquin Valley.

Elevations were, in general, greater than in the commercial vineyard region of the San Joaquin Valley, and this condition, Prof. Bioletti says, will have its effect on the probable recurrence of frosts in autumn, but this danger could be minimized by withholding irrigation during the latter part of the summer, thus allowing the vines to become dormant before frosts appear.

In the center of this great basin the soil contains too much alkali for successful grape culture, Prof. Bioletti found, but the alkali area is comparatively small. A supply of at least twenty-four acre inches of water, he declares, should be assured for vines before they are planted. The frequent strong winds are undoubtedly unfavorable, he says, making it difficult to train the vines and lowering the quality of table grapes. The growing of cover crops for the first three years would be advisable to protect the young vines from these winds, he believes.

In conclusion, as far as the Antelope Valley and Mojave Desert region is concerned, Prof. Bioletti states that grape planters should proceed with great caution, being assured that their land will produce grapes that will at least come up to the average throughout the State, selecting good soil, quite free from alkali, in a sheltered location if possible, planting cover crops for three years to protect the young vines. The Muscat grape offers the best chances for success in this region, he says, but even this hardy grape will not be a commercial success except in the most favored spots. Conditions for sun-drying Muscats are excellent.

EXPECT RECORD CROP OF VOLUNTEER COTTON.

CALEXICO.—It is believed that fully 40 per cent of the 1921 cotton crop of the Imperial Valley will be "volunteer" cotton: that, is, it will be grown from the roots of last year's plants. Last winter was an unusually mild one in the valley, and plants are coming out in good shape. One used to cotton culture in the Southern States has come to regard the cotton plant as an annual, but in the almost frostless Imperial Valley the annual continues growth in the spring after the tender foliage has been nipped. Cutting the stalks close to the ground helps the operation of sprouting. The "volunteer" stand is not usually as good as the seeded stand of cotton, but the former is much earlier, and there is more of an opportunty for all bolls to develop before frost sets in. Consequently, the acre yield is usually as good as the seeded stand, and the growing cost is much less.

More cotton was raised in the Lower California portion of the Imperial Valley than in California last year, according to a report made by the American Consul in Mexicali. The total for the rich river delta region "below the line" was 85,000 bales. The State of California produced 74,686 bales. The exportation of cotton from the port of Mexicali of the 1920-21 crop to date amounts to 84,765 bales, valued at $6,907,259.

MILKING MACHINE PAYS IN A TEN-COW DAIRY.

There has been an impression among dairymen that, where there are a dozen cows or less, the saving effected by the machine does not offset the interest on the investment. An authority on dairying says that this is a mistake, and there have been cases where milking machines are a paying investment where there are but eight cows.

In fact, one milking machine enthusiast [illegible] milking machine with but four cows, and as he keeps books on his upkeep costs, he presents the following figures from his ledger:

Milking four cows by hand (actual milking,) thirty-six minutes.

Milking them by machine, including stripping by hand, sixteen minutes.

Saving at one milking, twenty minutes.

Saving for two milkings a day at 36 cents per hour, 24 cents.

Saving of labor in a year, $87.60.

Annual cost of operating machine, $58.80.

Net saving in favor of machine, one year, $28.80.

LIVE-STOCK RAISERS HOLD BIG MEETING.

ONTARIO.—More than 100 live-stock men from the west end of San Bernardino county recently attended a stock-judging demonstration and all-day meeting at the dairy ranch of W. W. Coke on Riverside Drive. The event was staged under the direction of the San Bernardino County Farm Bureau. The morning was given over to hog judging by Prof. E. H. Hughes of the University of California, and a dairy-cattle judging demonstration by Prof W. E. Tomson of the university farm at Davis.

A fine group of hogs from the show herds of the Italian Vineyard Company at Guasti was brought to the Coke ranch for the occation, and several neighboring ranchers also loaned the use of their swine.

Following a picnic lunch at the noon hour, Dr. B. R. Crandall of San Bernardino gave a talk on the importance of boys' and girls' stock clubs as an aid to fostering interest in the farm and in the back-to-the-land movement

Prof. Hughes gave an instructive talk on hog feeding and care, and was followed by Manager Wilson, the Italian Vineyard Company swine department, who declared that he was able to raise pork at better profits at present than some months ago, when everything was high. Prof. Tomson gave an address on dairy cattle and feeding, and was followed by W. W. Coke, who told of the development of his fine dairy herd.

LIVE-STOCK INCREASE ON ARIZONA FARMS.

PHOENIX.—Figures just made public by the director of census show progress in live-stock raising in Arizona in the decade between 1910 and 1920. The number of live stock of all classes shows increases of from 15 to 90 per cent.

There were 770,000 beef cattle in Arizona in 1920, 53,721 dairy cattle, 136,167 horses, 11,992 mules, 881,914 sheep, 161,124 goats, 49,600 swine, 495,065 chickens and 28-174 hives of bees. The live-stock products for last year were 14,370,833 gallons of milk, 3,130,795 pounds of wool, 2,524,832 dozen eggs and 569,325 chickens raised for market.

Although the number of farms in Arizona increased but 750 in the ten-year period, the total land in farms increased from 1,246,613 acres to 5,803,126 acres in 1920, the average acreage in farms increasing from 135 acres to 581 acres.

MEATS NOT INSPECTED. IN VARIOUS CITIES.

Stating that meat consumers in Pasadena, Long Beach, Glendale, Whittier, Santa Monica and, in fact, practically every city in Los Angeles county outside of Los Angeles are not adequately protected by meat and milk inspection, Jonathan Kirkpatrick, food inspector of the Los Angeles County Health Department, is prosecuting a campaign for meat and milk inspection in these cities. His plan is to have fifth and sixth-class cities in the same general locality combine to pay the salary of a good inspector, the "overhead" to be paid by the county.

Gamboge's Majesty's Falcon.
Nine-month-old Jersey bull calf sired by Gamboge's Royal Majesty. He was recently purchased by Ferdinand R. Bain of Los Angeles from Inderkill Farm in New York.

"Los Angeles city is the only municipality in the county, and probably in Southern California, which protects its meat consumers with real inspection," said Mr. Kirkpatrick. "It is to be feared that meats rejected in Los Angeles are sold in the cities surrounding it. Pasadena and one or two other cities have meat inspection laws, but these are not rigorously enforced. The people of the cities affected should wake up and compel their officials to provide safeguards against diseased meat. Of the fifty-six slaughterhouses in the county Federal inspectors are able to serve but two or three, those handling interstate meats."

MARKETING CONDITIONS FAVORING CATTLEMEN.

In recent weeks the number of cattle received at Los Angeles is on the increase, and cattle receipts at San Francisco are decreasing, according to a report made by the marketing committee of the California Cattlemen's Association, Fred H. Bixby, chairman. For the week ending May 7 4525 cattle were slaughtered in the Bay City and 2525 in Los Angeles; for the week ending May 14 3125 cattle were killed in San Francisco and 2770 in Los Angeles.

Cattlemen are advised to hold their animals, if possible, the attitude of the committee being that there is an actual shortage of cattle in the State. The Chicago price was 10 cents per hundred higher than that a week ago, and prices in eastern and northern markets have advanced steadily since April 28.

SEEKING MEMBERS.

At a recent meeting of the State directors of the Alfalfa Growers of California, Inc., held at the general offices, 787-790 Pacific Electric Building, Los Angeles, plans were formulated for an intensive membership campaign throughout the State. Reports to date showed that the territory south to the Tehachepi was being well covered. The Riverside district is about 80 per cent strong; the Antelope Valley 85 per cent; the Mojave River district 100 per cent. The Chino district, just being formed, reported about 70 growers lined up, representing about 1500 acres with considerable more territory yet to be covered. The San Fernando Valley expects to put its membership up to at least 75 per cent. North of Tehachepi, General Manager G. W. Felts is personally superintending the campaign and he says indications are there will be no trouble in lining up at least 75 to 80 per cent.

Not Worrying About Cotton.

milking, around $600 per month, is also "home-made."

An interesting feeding experiment was made on the ranch last fall by Albert S. Greenleaf, ranch manager and partner in the live-stock ownership, in which he succeeded in showing a gain of two and one-half pounds per day with 100 hogs over a period of thirty-one days. In two pens of fifty each, the hogs were fed three times a day, with a wet mash of 25 per cent alfalfa hay, ground with barley. A portion of five pounds of salt and two pounds of charcoal was added to each feed, with about fifty pounds of fish meal for each day. Barley fed amounted to 20,792 pounds, and the net gain in pork was 6750 pounds. Milo in the head was before these hogs at all times.

This variety of sorghum may be said to be a hobby with Mr. Greenleaf, who recently, at the request of the local farm bureau, gave a talk on the subject at one of the university extension course meetings in the valley. He is raising 350 acres of it this year on the Wight-Grondenberg ranch. Almost 100 acres was planted in April, following pasture of various kinds, plowed up at that time or earlier. This early "corn" will be cut late in June, and will mature a second crop this season. About 250 acres of "corn" will be planted in June, following barley, which is to be cut for grain.

Barley also is planted by discing it into alfalfa in the fall, to be used for pasturage and for hay. About 200 acres of this double crop will be cut this season. for hay. The alfalfa is replanted every four years, in theory, though good stands are often allowed to remain several years longer. This season fifty acres of new alfalfa, seeded with barley, were planted. After a satisfactory experiment with Rhodes grass, which hogs have pastured even below the surface, throughout the past winter, twenty acres of alfalfa will be put in this year for hay and pasture. With the exception of experimental plots, these crops make up all the plantings on the place.

CLEANING UP THE FORAGE.

And these crops will disappear, to the last stalk, right on the place. In the admirably systematic plan of pasture rotation, the mules bring up the rear of the procession, neatly eating up the gleanings of harvesters and the more favored stock. The hogs have forty acres devoted exclusively to their pasturage, fenced off in plots which are carefully rotated. About 300 hogs are usually in the field, in addition to those fattening in the pens, where the sows with their young pigs are also kept. The pigs on pasture are fed corn once each day.

Most of the corn and barley is threshed and sacked for feeding dairy cows, calves and hogs. Calves from one year until freshening—in case of the heifers to be retained as milk cows—are kept on pasture exclusively. Steers are hardened with grain in the fields. The chickens, with a few turkeys, are accorded the role of "clean-up squad" about the corrals and barns. For, not only does an ideal diversified farm furnish everything it uses, but it must use everything it produces, according to Mr. Wight's theory. Even the fence posts, by the way are "grown" on the place, being a by-product of the ten-acre eucalyptus grove which affords welcome shade and shelter to the stock in the summer months.

In the plan for future expansion to full farm capacity, silos are to be called into conservation service. With this added aid in getting the utmost benefit from the crops, Mr. Wight expects to get his dairy herd (also being grown on the ranch) up to approximately 300 cows. Roughly estimated, this will give a cream check of $3000 a month, besides the skim milk for the hogs. If the hogs are kept at near the present number—sixty sows, raising almost 600 pigs yearly, which are sold twice a year—a fair average of $1000 per month from this source will be maintained.

The total makes a goodly sum, and certainly one to compel respect. It is an estimate fully justified, moreover, by past and present accomplishment, on this Holtville ranch, which has, in the past decade or so, as one might say, "pulled itself up by its own boot straps" from the lowest level of absolute nonproduction. The moral for those who view it with envy, obviously is, as Mr. Wight reiterates:

"Go get you a self-raising ranch!"

QUAYLE ON PEST CONTROL.

WHITTIER.—Much interest was manifested in the field demonstration for the control of the codlin moth at the recent meeting of walnut growers of the Whittier, Rivera and Los Nietos districts and much valuable information was given by Prof. H. J. Quayle of the State Experimental Station at Riverside. Prof. Quayle was for a number of years a resident of Whittier, when the experimental station and laboratory were located here, and he is familiar with the Whittier district and its problems in walnut growing. He demonstrated the dusting method of pest control, which is generally successfully employed, and also the liquid spray method.

BETTER CULTIVATION OF COTTON URGED.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)— Pima cotton again is in demand in the East, at a price for the better grades that would net about 31 cents in Phoenix. Only forced sales are being made, as there is confidence that much better prices will be known very soon.

Local farming authorities are urging better cotton cultivation methods and abandonment of the carelessness that has run the average Salt River Valley yield down to 250 pounds of lint to the acre. Figures compiled by County Agricultural Agent H. C. Heard show that, under the season's conditions, a yield of 250 pounds will mean a cost of 40 cents a pound for the baled lint. If the yield be raised to 300 pounds, the cost will be reduced to 34 3-4 cents and with 335 pounds yield the cost will be only 33 cents. In past seasons a few choice fields have produced even a bale to the acre, or 500 pounds. Last season, on the 250-pound basis, there was a cost approximating 60 cents a pound. The mere picking of the seed cotton was a charge of 16 cents a pound on the lint value.

Though much more was planted, the acreage of long-staple cotton under only the Salt River Valley irrigation project for the past season was 142,322 This year the estimate is 66.502. About 30 per cent of this is volunter, generally doing very well and so advanced that bolls already are being brought into the city. The alfalfa crop, last year from only 25,234 acres (a drop from a maximum of 81,000 acres) this year will be raised to 42,350 acres. Wheat, barley and oats, last year grown on about 16,000 acres, this year are being harvested from 46,000 acres.

These figures are from only the Salt River irrigation project and do not include much land irrigated from pumps or from canals outside the project. Within the association are 208,000 acres. Of this there now is under cultivation 194,000 acres, showing that only 14,000 acres of land is idle within the valley.

The new alfalfa already is furnishing pasturage for thousands of cattle from the drought-stricken ranges, the cattlemen being favored also by a relatively low opening price for alfalfa and grain hay. Cottonseed cake from the last crop is being shipped to all parts of the State, fed to range cattle in small quantities to keep them alive.

There is a strong movement locally toward seedless grapes, about 1,000,000 cuttings having been set out this spring in the eastern end of the valley. The Thompson's Seedless variety ripens very early in this valley and uniformly has returned much profit on shipment East. There is argument that it is a safe crop, as it can be turned into raisins in the lack of a market for the fresh fruit, while it ripens in the early summer, before the coming of rains. Grape growers have formed a temporary organization in Phoenix, with J. J. Gould at its head. Representatives will be sent to California to study the grape and raisin industry.

desert soil, with only a volunteer wheat stubble turned under. Water was applied when the need was indicated by wilting of the leaves. The irrigation dates show intervals of about ten days during July and August. The July temperatures ranged unusually high, with a mean maximum of 109.4 deg. F., instead of the usual 102 or 103 deg. F.

In spite of poor stand over most of the alfalfa block of 0.42 acre, 1360 pounds of seed cotton were picked, while the crop on the new land of 0.66 acre was 2919 pounds —yields that are equivalent to 3238 pounds and 4423 pounds per acre, respectively. The ginned cotton weighed 1377 pounds, or at the rate of 2.07 bales for the alfalfa land and 2.83 bales for the new land. That the seed cotton, when taken to the gin Feb. 16, 1921, weighed 4310 pounds, although about twenty-five pounds of samples had been withdrawn, is to be ascribed to absorption of moisture during the winter. The picking weights and the measuring of the land were handled carefully by Bruce Drummond, superintendent, and he says there is no basis for rumors of larger yields.

Nevertheless, the production of cotton at the rate of more than two bales per acre is sufficiently rare to attract attention. Hundreds of visitors came to the date garden, saw the Acala fields, and spread their reports of the wonderful showing.

Though cotton has been grown in the Coachella Valley for several years, the early efforts were not very successful, and no very favorable results have been secured from repeated attempts with Egyptian cotton, which often fails to set many bolls until late in the season. Excessive abortion of buds and young bolls of the Egyptian cotton, and even of many of the lower fruiting branches, has been ascribed to high temperatures and dry winds, but in recent years the Durango variety of upland cotton, which is somewhat like the Acala, has yielded well.

The more compact habit of upland cotton may afford more protection against the dry winds. Also, careful levelling and irrigation are now practiced in the valley in raising the Bermuda onions and other truck crops that often are followed by cotton. Several late plantings of Durango cotton, after the onion harvest in May, and in some cases as late as the middle of June, have yielded a bale per acre, with the precaution of restricting the size of the plants by the single-stalk method of deferred thinning and spacing, six to eight inches in the rows.

That the Acala plantings gave heavy yields in a season that was unusually hot may indicate a special tolerance of extreme conditions. In other districts, the variety has appeared distinctly more resistant to drought as well as being earlier than Durango. The bolls are larger and open better, with the cotton holding well together, so that picking is easy. The percentage of five-locked bolls is somewhat higher, as well as the lint percentage, or "out-turn" at the gin. The prospect of a large outside demand for the seed is a further reason for specializing on the Acala cotton in the Coachella Valley.

In addition to the Acala seed produced at the date garden, the local organization secured several tons of seed of the same stock from an isolated planting near Bakersfield. Precautions are to be taken against mixing of seed or crossing with other varieties, and as much of the seed as possible is to be planted on isolated fields, away from any other variety, or from fields that have grown cotton recently. Arrangements have been made to have one gin reserved exclusively for Acala cotton, to guard against any mixture with seed of other varieties until these have been replaced by a pure Acala stock.

MUST PREVENT MIXING.

On the basis of such precautions, it is expected that seed raised in the Coachella Valley may have special value for planting purposes, not only for local use, but for shipment to other cotton regions that do not have good planting seed. For such an undertaking it is essential, first of all, experts say, that the Coachella Valley become, in fact, a single-variety-cotton-growing community; that is to say, every effort must be directed to complete elimination of other varieties. Only after this is accomplished will there be an adequate assurance of maintaining a pure seed supply through a period of years.

On account of the isolation of the valley, complete protection against mixing and crossing is possible, if the other varieties and mongrels are thoroughly weeded out. With the entire valley firmly established as a single-variety community, growing only Acala cotton, it would constitute an ideal source of seed for export to other regions.

DAM COMPLETED.

The Lyman dam that is to provide water for the St. Johns section in Arizona is reported complete, the project now needing only construction of a few miles of canal. The State of Arizona is interested in the enterprise to the extent of $675,000 advanced from land funds, with security of a first mortgage on the lands benefited, the loan to be repaid before 1940, in payments of a tenth each year.

VALLEY FAIR PROMISES TO BE GREAT EVENT.

Plans for the San Fernando Valley Fair and Market, September 13 to 18, are taking shape and the men who are behind the event have received assurance of a large number of entries in all departments. The fair is to be held on a tract of 700 acres, one mile north of San Fernando, on the highway, and will be under the auspices of the San Fernando Fair and Market Incorporated, of which Dr. W. M. Gundrum is president. M. G. Dial is chairman of the Fair Committee and E. R. Elkins is general director of the fair. E. I. Hammond of Riverside will be in charge of the poultry exhibit, and R. M. O'Neill will manage the power farming exhibit, which will be extensive. The tractor demonstration will be an active one each afternoon, when, between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m., the machines will plow, cultivate and go through other operations.

There will be 125,000 feet of exhibit space under canvass for the live stock, poultry, horticultural and general agricultural exhibits. The cities of Burbank, Lankershim, Van Nuys, Owensmouth, Zelzah, Marian and Chatsworth are co-operating in the project.

HEAVY PLANTING IN KINGS.

HANFORD.—County Horticultural Commissioner L. O. Haupt of Kings county, in a recent report, says: "The planting season has closed, showing a heavy planting of trees and vines, especially the latter. Shortage and high price of vines curtailed the planting somewhat. The following were inspected and planted besides stock grown by the growers themselves, which was not inspected: Apricots, 25,956; peaches, 33,141; prunes, 22,777; miscellaneous (trees,) 5286; grapevines (rooted,) 189, 652. The Tilton was the principal variety of apricot planted; Lovells lead in the peach varieties, while prunes were limited to the French variety almost entirely. About half of the vines were Thompson seedless, as this variety was the only one that could be secured at reasonable prices."

THE PROPER FEEDING OF THE DAIRY CALF.

No part of dairy farming is more essential than the proper feeding of young calves. Likewise nothing is more important for the best development of calves than a good supply of milk and skim milk in the ration. In the past few years the surplus of these products has been utilized as human food in the form of condensed and powdered milk and skim milk. Reports recently received by the United States Department of Agriculture, however, point to a temporary surplus of these products during the flush season, due to decreased export outlet. Until this situation is adjusted, it would seem advisable to utilize the surplus milk and skim milk as feed for live stock.

In raising dairy calves most dairymen prefer that the calf remain with the cow for the first forty-eight hours. If it is taken away then, the cow will be less nervous when she begins to be milked again for commercial purposes than if they are allowed to run together for a long period.

It is desirable that the calf be in a thrifty, vigorous condition when it is taught to drink. It may be left without food for about twelve hours, at the end of which time it will be hungry, and with a little teaching will usually drink milk from the pail. Warm, fresh milk from the mother should be put in a clean pail and held near the floor in front of the calf, which will generally begin to nose about the pail. Once it gets a taste of milk, it will usually drink without further trouble. Sometimes, however, more vigorous measures must be taken.

It's a Good Idea to Keep 'Em Apart.

When two or more calves are raised together they should be tied separately or fastened in stanchions when fed milk.

The quantity of milk fed to a calf depends upon its size and age, and to some extent on the kind and condition of the feed, but experiments by the Department of Agriculture indicate that about one pound a day should be fed for every ten pounds weight of the calf at birth. Many beginners make the mistake of letting the calf have as much milk as it wants. This would be all right if the calf were fed every two or three hours as when it runs with the cow, but as it is impracticable ordinarily to feed more than two or three times a day, it is best to keep the quantity well below the capacity of the calf and not risk overfeeding.

For the first four days milk from the dam should be fed. After this the milk may be from any cow or cows in the herd, but preferably not from any that are nearly dry. Whole milk is preferable for the first two weeks, after which skim milk may be substituted, commencing with one pound a day and increasing to two or four pounds, depending on the vigor of the calf. No more skim milk should be fed than the calf will drink readily. In most cases at the end of the third week the ration should be approximately one-half whole and one-half separated milk.

At the beginning of the fourth week from one-half to three-fourths of the ration should be separated milk. During the week the change should be continued until by the beginning of the fifth week only separated milk is fed. In specially vigorous calves the change may be made a week earlier. After this time separated milk may be fed entirely unless the calf is very delicate. The quantity fed can be gradually increased until eighteen to twenty pounds a day are given. If milk is very plentiful, more may be fed, but otherwise it will not be found economical.

The time that milk should be discontinued depends upon its cost in relation to the value of the calf, its breed, size, vigor, etc. The season in which it reaches the age of six months, and the other feeds available at that time, must also be taken into consideration. Six months is probably a good average age at which to wean calves from milk. Where there is plenty of skim milk available this time may be lengthened. When the best of hay and silage and a good variety of grains are valuable, the calf my be weaned earlier than when such feeds are lacking. The season of good, succulent pasturage presents the best possible condition for weaning the calf. The stronger and more vigorous the calf the earlier it may be weaned with safety. On the other hand, the more valuable the calf the more expense the owner is warranted in incurring to develop it, and the later it will probably be weaned. If skim or separated milk is plentiful, calves may be fed profitably until eight or ten months old. When the calf is two months old, if it is carefully watched, sour milk, whether whole skim or buttermilk, may be fed without harmful results, provided the change from sweet milk is made gradually; but it is well, however, not to alternate between sweet and sour. The same rules hold good in overfeeding with skim milk as with whole milk. Care should be taken to see that any milk fed the young calves is of uniform temperature of about 90 deg. Fahrenheit. Many feeders attempt to overcome poor quality in the feed by increasing the quantity. This is radically wrong. When on account of age, souring, dirt, etc., the quality of the milk is poor, the quantity should be reduced rather than increased.

Usually a vigorous calf begins during the second week to pick at bedding or other material within reach, and at that time both grain and roughage of best possible quality should be provided. Silage may be given after the calf is one month old, if carefully used. When the calf is in the second week it should begin to receive grain and when one month old should be fed about one-half pound a day. After this time the quantity of grain may be gradually increased to three pounds a day about the third month.

Record auction prices for live stock in Tulare county this year were recorded at the H. J. Stokes sale, recently held at Goshen. Grade cows sold as high as $220, with the milking string averaging $193. The high cow, a registered animal, brought $500, while the sale totaled over $9000. The sale included horses, cows and hogs and attracted a large crowd, 350 being present at lunch. The sale was called by Col. George Bell of this city.

The highest price received for hogs at the last sale conducted by the California Farm Bureau Marketing Association in Visalia was $8.60, or 20 cents lower than was paid the previous day at Tulare, and the lowest top price in the past thirty months. Three carloads, containing 267 hogs, were sold for $4127.90. They were entered by eighteen consignors.

WALNUT GROWERS ELECT.

PUENTE.—At a business session held last week the members of the Puente Walnut Growers' Association elected the following directors: S. L. Watts, B. F. Maxson, E. G. Hotchkiss, J. E. Wanrig, B. F. Rowland, Rev. G. F. Chamberlain and W. D. Townsend. The total acreage represented in the association was found to be 6600. A packing plant costing $162,400 was recently completed at Puente.

EXPECTS GOOD CROP.

VISALIA.—Tulare county's orange crop this fall should be of better quality than for several years and extra heavy, according to P. A. Boncquet, county plant pathologist, who has just completed a study of conditions throughout the 60,000 orange-bearing acres in this county. He states that he found the trees in a more healthy condition than for some years, and that the blossoms are light but healthy.

DAIRYMEN TO MEET AND EAT AT BURBANK.

The next meeting of the dairymen's department of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau will be held Saturday, June 14, at Burbank, at the ranch of Charles Anderson, beginning at 10:30 a.m. Following a short meeting, a barbecue will be served in a grove a short distance from the An- [illegible] ranch at Lankershim and the [illegible]well ranch on the Ventura Boulevard, will be visited, and judging classes will be held. The value of cow-testing work will also be emphasized, and announcement will be made at this time of the plans for the coming year's cow-testing work, which begins July 1. The classes for the dairy cow competition will also be announced at this time. All dairymen and their families are welcome.

WALNUT APHIS AND CODLIN MOTH CONTROL.

BY V. F. BLANCHARD.

A series of five field demonstrations of the control of walnut aphis and codlin moth were recently conducted throughout important walnut sections of Los Angeles county under the auspices of the Farm Bureau. These were held at El Monte, West Covina, Whittier, Pomona and Rivera. Farm Adviser Hodgson of the Agricultural Extension Service and representatives of the California Walnut Growers Spray Manufacturing Company co-operated in conducting these demonstrations, being assisted by Prof. H. J. Quayle at the Rivera meeting.

The control method, which has been worked out by Prof. Ralph Smith of the College of Agriculture, is to apply a dust prepared by the California Walnut Growers' Spray Manufacturing Company, which contains nicotine, the killing agent. This is applied with a power duster during the spring of the year, when the aphis become active. This material, which is called "Nicodust," is applied two to five pounds per tree, depending upon its size. Nicodust costs approximately 9¾ cents per pound. The cost of application is not great, for a power duster will average six acres throughout a season. With favorable weatuer twenty-five to forty acres are sometimes dusted.

The demonstration at Rivera was interfered with by rain, but Prof. H. J. Quayle spoke to an interested group of walnut growers on "Codlin Moth Control in Walnut Orchards." His remarks, in brief, were as follows:

"Codlin moth in walnuts were first observed five or six years ago, an dinfestation spread rapidly. The originally infested areas are Santa Ana, Carpenteria and San Juan Capistrano. This last year the moth was observed at Los Nietos, a heavy infestation occurring in some orchards there.

"Erperiments for control have for some time been under way, both a dust and a liquid spray containing lead arsenate being used. The standard acid arsenate is not safe to use with walnuts, on account of the danger of burning. The results so far indicate that spraying for codlin moth control is more efficient than dusting, for a much greater percentage of nuts are saved by the former. The average costs are as follows: It takes twenty to twenty-five gallons of spray material per average tree, which contains six-tenths of a pound of lead arsenate. The cost of application is approximately 1¼ cents per gallon. The total cost is approximately 43 cents per tree. For control by dusting, about five pounds of dust per tree are required. At a cost of 7½ cents per pound for material and 8 cents per tree for applying, the total cost for the dusting is 45½ cents. If it is desired to control the aphis at the same time, one pound of black leaf forty per 200 gallons should be added. One high-power sprayer can spray six acres per day, which is equal to the average for a duster, because a duster can only operate during favorable weather conditions, while the sprayer can work at almost any time.

"Actual records have shown that the difference in efficiency amounts to 2.6 per cent in favor of the spraying for codlin moth control. If the saving is only two pounds per tree, more than half the cost of application is saved.

"If the infestation is only 2 or 3 per cent, it does not pay to spray, but if the infestation amounts to 4 or 5 per cent or more, the trees should be treated. There were as high as 25 per cent of infestations in some orchards last year.

"The time to treat is the last week of May and the first two weeks of June, depending on the season. It is necessary to have a thorough application to get satisfactory results. One application does efficient control work. The codlin moth which is now attacking walnuts is the same one which attacks apples and pears."

ORANGE COUNTY FARM BUREAU PICNIC HELD.

The annual meeting of the Orange County Farm Bureau, held on Saturday, May 14, at Orange County Park, was a huge success. For some time small placards had made known the fact to farmers and others that the annual meeting was to be in the form of a big picnic, and so well was this announcement carried to the people of the county that there were about two thousand persons out on that occasion.

The morning was spent in various games, participated in by younger representatives of the rural communities, which was followed by a very sumptuous picnic dinner, enjoyed by old and young alike.

A speaking program was held in the pavilion. This part of the program was presided over by President W. M. Belding of the Orange County Farm Bureau. An orchestra provided music for those assembled, and the El Toro Center presented a special stunt, a number of boys and girls from 12 to 15 years of age giving an Indian dance. The youngsters were in costume and were loaded with war paint.

R. B. Peters of San Bernardino county, who is vice-president of the California Farm Bureau Federation, and Dr. W. H. Walker of Glenn county, president of the California Farm Bureau Federation, were the principal speakers of the day. They told of the work of the State and National Farm Bureau Federations in a very interesting way.

FRENCH VINEYARDISTS CAST EYES THIS WAY.

California wine grape growers should prepare this fall to meet stiff competition from European vineyardists, according to E. M. Sheehan, president of the California Grape Growers' Exchange, who has recent advices from his New York agents, which say that representatives of French, Italian, Spanish and Argentine vineyardists are now investigating market conditions in the eastern seaboard cities with a view to selling a large wine grape tonnage there this year.

Dusting for walnut aphis.

Photographed at Colvin Ranch, Pomona, during recent Farm Bureau dusting demonstrations.

According to Mr. Sheehan's information, these foreign wine grape growers have been attracted to the markets of this country because of the high prices which prevailed in New York last year. They have arranged with the steamship companies having ships in service between New York and European ports to install extra refrigerating facilities, so as to transport large quantities of fresh wine grapes.

"Last year," explains Mr. Sheehan, "while the New York market was paying as high as $200 a ton for California wine grapes, the grape growers of Europe were looking on, but now they are apparently preparing to get into our markets. My information is that the New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Boston markets are today being investigated by representatives of European vineyardists who would be mighty glad to realize $50, American money, per ton for their fresh wine-grape crop. There is nothing, of course, to prevent their shipping grapes into our markets. The trip across could easily be made in ten or twelve days, which is quicker than we can transport our grapes across the continent by rail."

SUBJECTS THE POTATO GROWERS WILL DISCUSS.

VAN NUYS.—Standardization, pest control and marketing will be the chief topics under discussion at the spring meeting of potato growers of Southern California here June 7. Arrangements have been made to receive 250 growers.

At the morning session, at the Stahl ranch, Zelzah, E. D. McSweeny of El Monte will discuss the spring potato situation, and the growers will inspect several interesting experimental plots. The growers will then come to Van Nuys for lunch in the High School.

The afternoon program will include talks by G. H. Hecke, State Director of Agriculture; Mr. Reynard of the California Vegetable Union, Mr. Beaton of the Platt Produce Company, Mr. Wyle of the Wyle-Zuckerman Company, Mark Grimes of Van Nuys, and J. C. Craig of Owensmouth. A better potato for a better price will be the general topic of speeches There will be a general discussion following the speeches.

During the calendar year 1920, the United States imported 119,513,435 pounds of peanuts, and 97,813,124 pounds of peanut oil practically all of which came either directly from China and Japan or indirectly from those countries through such points as Hongkong the Kwantung Leased Province, and Vancouver British Columbia.

The combination sale of registered Holsteins consigned by Burr Farm of Los Angeles and Agee Bros. of Rivera at Burr Farm on June 9 will give to the breeders an opportunity to select high-class stock to place in their herds. From these two good herds there have been selected individuals which will reflect credit on the owners. The offering will consist of twenty cows and four young bulls from the Agee Bros. Paragon herd, and from the Burr Farm herd a selection consisting largely of young cows, with a large percentage of fresh cows in the list, together with a few choice bred heifers and a limited number of young bulls. Especial care has been exercised by both owners in selecting animals of good type and breeding, for it is planned to make this the first of regular public sale offerings from the Burr Farm herd. The California Breeders' Sales and Pedigree Company will manage the sale, while Rhoades & Rhoades will do the selling. Many of the females are bred to one or the other of these splendid herd sires: King Korndyke Pontiac 20th, $12,000 son of Miss Valley Mead De Kol Walker, who sired the $41,000 bull King Korndyke Pontiac Acme; Sir Veeman Korndyke Pontiac, thirty-pound proven son of Sir Veeman Hengerveld, whose daughters are making wonderful records both in short-time and long-time tests; Sir Manuel Hengerveld, son of the 1039-pound yearly record cow, Iowana Witte; Burr Walker Sadie Vale, by a thirty-one-pound son of King Korndyke Sadie Vale, out of a dam that made 618.04 pounds of butter in one year as a junior 2-year-old; King Pontiac Tola Ormsby, son of K. P. Tola, the noted thirty-six-pound daughter of King of the Pontiacs.

From Tucson, Ariz., come reports that range conditions are very bad all over Southern Arizona. Agent McCormick of the Papago reservation states that at least 1000 head of Indian cattle already have died for lack of food and that in some parts of the great tract there has been loss of every horse left on the range. To the southward there is even no browse, the desert vegetation having dried, and thousands of range cattle are being kept alive by feeding hay or cotton meal. Thousands of head have beenshipped, but along the Southern Pacific there is report from some sections that the stock is too weak to stand railroad transportation. From Nogales and Oracle have come very discouraging reports, and losses are expected to continue till at least the time of the summer rains, in July. Thereafter also will come the valuable crop of mesquite beans.

Maxwell farms, in the San Fernando Valley, has recently received a carload of choice Holsteins from Wisconsin. The shipment consts of 25 head of young cows and heifers in milk, and in their new quarters under the capable management of Mack McBride, this string of well-bred individuals have great promise of becoming heavy milkers.

The spring meeting of the California Poland-Phina Breeders' Association, held at the Hughes Hotel, Fresno, last Saturday, was a success from many points of view. Twenty-three breeders gathered around the banquet table and enjoyed a fine dinner arranged by Alfred Buckland, president of the Fresno county association, which acted as hosts to the State visitors. Preceding the business of the evening, different hog growers from various sections of the State reported hog and feed conditions in their localities and outlined the material which they expected to show at this fall's fairs. The Fresno association announced that it had secured a $200 pig promotion show for the breed at the Fresno District Fair, and that the local county association was adding $80 in prize money to the barrow classes ordinarily listed at the same show.

Mr. Ball, reporting for the Tulare association, stated that Tulare is giving a special prize of $10 for the best boys' club exhibit; a cup trophy for the best under-year sow pig, and also a $200 pig promotion prize. There was much discussion along the line of a definite program of publicity and educational work for next fall and winter. A committee is being selected to outline this work and different members present expressed the idea that if a little effort was put forward by individual members and county associations, there would soon be a greatly increased number of Polands in California. Plans were made for a big State meeting next fall and indications are that the Poland-China men will conduct one of the best shows of the year at the 1921 Cali-

CLUB WORK ATTRACTS WIDE ATTENTION.

HOLTVILLE.—Agricultural club work has been brought to such a high standard of perfection in the Holtville Union High School that it is attracting attention from other schools in various sections of the State where such work is still in its infancy. The objects back of the club work are to interest the students in the farm home, to give them preliminary training in farm work which will be of benefit to them in taking advantage of the opportunities offered by the farm; to develop a sense of responsibility and ownership; to create added interest in and love of animals and to teach the economy of good selection breeding and care of farm animals; to teach the value of operating the farm on a solid business basis. No effort has been spared in the school to make this phase of the work of permanent benefit to the students, and co-operation of the farm centers of this section and the Holtville Commercial Club have been a big factor in making the work a success. The work has been carried on in the high school for a number of years.

The pig-feeding contest recently conducted by the schools of this district is one of the many demonstrations of the success of the club work. Sixteen animals were entered and in 140 days the average inclose of the contest the pigs were sold to a cost of feeding each pig was $12.43, or approximately 5½ cents per pound. At the close of the contest the pigs were sold to a Los Angeles packing-house for 11 cents per pound, or 1½ cents above the prevailing market price, the premium being paid because of the excellent condition of the animals.

Because of the success of the pig contest and other affairs of a lar nature, a large number of students have signed up as members of the club and to participate next year in another contest. The pig contest attracted wide attention throughout this section and scores of interested farmers attended the exhibit.

Tentative plans for the contests nex year include exhibits of all kinds of farm animals to be held in connection with the annual district fair and field day. Many thoroughbred farm animals are owned on the farms of the Holtville district and it is the intention to have many of these in the show to demonstrate the extent of the pure-bred live-stock movement among the farmers.

CALIFORNIA LETTUCE.

It is reported by the Federal Bureau of Markets that the shipment of lettuce from California to April 12 was 6099 cars, of which Imperial Valley furnished 3120 cars. Shipments from all other States, including Florida and the Gulf Coast districts, amounted to 3663 cars to the same date.

FEATURES TO BE CONSIDERED IN THE SELECTION OF A TRACTOR.

BY E. J. STIRNIMAN.

[This is the introductory article of a series being prepared for The Times Farm and Tractor Section by Mr. Stirniman, whose practical knowledge of the subject discussed qualifies him to give valuable advice to intending tractor buyers as well as power machine users.—Ed.]

YOU are intending to purchase a tractor this year, but you are unable to decide what make and size will best meet your requirements. Sit down just a moment and we will discuss a few essential features to be considered in the selection of a tractor.

THE MOTOR.

The motor should be of the tractor type, [illegible] inspection or side plates so that the interior of the crankcase is very accessible and can be inspected easily. It should have oil sumps that can be drained. Valve stem guides should be replaceable, and valve adjustment accessible. A cylinder having removable sleeves is also a desirable feature.

AIR CLEANER.

It should have an air cleaner as standard equipment, in the air line to the carburetor. This insures clean air being mixed with fuel to burn in the motor and not a combination of air, dust and fuel, better known as a "grinding compound."

FUEL SYETEM.

The tractor should have a fuel tank with a capacity of one gallon per horse power to avoid refilling through the day. Between the tank and carburetor there should be a sediment and water trap which can be easily drained and cleaned.

The gas line should be as direct as possible, having a cutoff at the tank and being free from vertical circles and sharp bends. connecting rod individual splash well is an Vertical bends often are at places in the line that become air locked, thus holding back or preventing free fuel passage. A carburetor with a dash adjustment is very desirable, allowing the operator to make adjustment from the seat while operating under load.

STARTING DEVICES.

If a magneto is used for ignition, the high tension with an impulse starter is preferred. The impulse starter may be of the full automatic which trips and locks up without the operator's attention, or the semi-automatic type, which must be tripped by the operator, but automatically locks out. Advantages of the impulse starter are, good spark without spinning motor and protection against being kicked.

A timing coupling should be provided in the magneto shaft drive. Priming cups and relief cocks are important on the large-size motors.

COOLING SYSTEM.

The cooling system should be of sufficient size to insure result at maximum loads, also easily drained and filled. Thermostatic control and inclosed gear driver fan with spring clutch release are very desirable.

A governor, which is a speed control to avoid racing of the motor without constant attention of the operator, is very important. When operating the so-called one-man outfit, where the operator not only drives, but at the same time makes settings of the machine pulled, the governor, which can be adjusted for all speeds directly from the driver's seat is preferred.

LUBRICATION SYSTEM.

Lubricating systems, such as the splash circulating and force feeds, are desirable. The pump should have a screen which prevents foreign material from recirculating through the motor and one that is easily cleaned. A pump indicator is desirable if placed within the operator's view., Complete drainage of the oil from the sump and

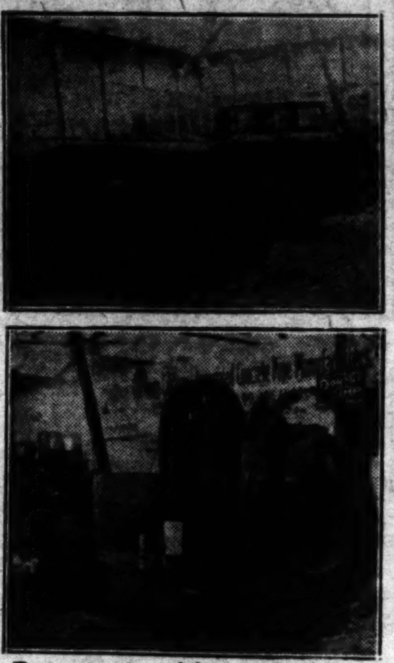
VALENCIA SHOW TO BE ANNUAL EVENT.

ANAHEIM.—The Valencia orange, which ripens in summer and affords many a cooling drink to sweltering easterners after the navel season is past, furnished the principal motif and reason for the California Valencia Orange Show held from May 17 to 22 at Anaheim, and so successful was the exposition that a permanent organization will be formed for making this Valencia show one of the annual big events of Southen California.



Farm power exhibit at Anaheim.

Above, corner of tractor and automobile exhibit at Valencia Orange Show, and below, pumping and concrete pipe exhibit shown in the industrial section.

Auspiciously opened by President Harding over 3900 miles of telephone wire, the Valencia show drew many thousands of visitors and in the news dispatches published throughout the nation the Valencia made its official bow most fittingly.

Orange county sent out more than six thousand carloads of Valencia oranges last season, and in the heart of this great district Anaheim furnished a most beautiful and gorgeous setting for this event, in which the Valencia was heralded to all the world as one of the big golden crops of California.

Agriculturists from all the Southwest were at the show and found many things to interest them, including feature displays of the best Valencia oranges obtainable, and the extensive rack exhibits of Valencias, grapefruit and lemons. The complete avocado display, put on by the California Avocado Association with E. E. Knight of Yorba Linda in charge, also attracted much attention, and the three "whoppers" weighing three pounds each d[illegible] admiring glances.

In the industrial de[illegible] were found many exhibits of intere[illegible] ers, including tractors, trucks, farm and tractor implements, irrigating pumps, fertilizers, feeds, sprayers, cement pipe, etc., etc. A. S. Wysong's fruit branding machine and the Stebler and Parker orange packing-house in operation at the show attracted a great deal of attention and were constantly surrounded by interested spectators.

The prizes awarded at the show follow:

INSIST ON GENUINE FORDSON PARTS

CAFETERIA METHODS IN THE ORCHARD.

BY W. L. SALVAGE.

BEAUMONT.—In so far as soil climatic conditions go, the Beaumont fruit growers claim to have one of the finest cherry growing districts in California. With an altitude of 3000 feet, they are not as early on the market with their fruit as are some other districts in lower altitudes, but they do grow large, sweet cherries.

Most of the Beaumont land is planted to apples and it was a peculiar idea that led the growers, when planting trees, to set out cherry trees around the orchard border. Usually this was done along the roads and highways, lending a rather pleasing and attractive effect to the place, especially when the trees are blooming. Loaded with big, black luscious berries, such borders are very tempting to the auto parties passing along the roads.

The Black Tartarian seems to be the favorite for the home and near-by markets; the Royal Ann for canning, and the Bing and Lambert for shipping to distant markets. The two last named grow quite large and firm, ship and sell well. The writer has seen these cherries that measured a little over three inches in circumference, eleven of them laid side by side measuring a foot and weighing four ounces.

I recently found a Tartarian tree with a small limb in two branches bending over to the ground, loaded with cherries nearly full size, which I took the time and trouble to count, then photograph. There were 456 cherries on the limbs, the greater part of which matured and ripened, but it was small fruit.

Heretofore a good part of the cherry crop has been sold direct to the consumer, who, coming up on an outing, would buy and pick the cherries, with a big saving to both himself a the orchardist. It is the one and only fruit crop the consumers will come after and pay the market price for in the orchard.

As in everything else, there is quite a knack in picking cherries. The trick is to get them off with the stems and without pulling off the fruit spurs. Where the spur is pulled off with the fruit, the tree has to grow another to take its place and this requires time; hence the grower is not overanxious to have careless and indifferent pickers in his orchard.

Picking from 100 to 200 pounds is a good day's work for the average picker, but there are experts who pick from 300 to 400 pounds a day. Two cents a pound has been the usual price paid cherry pickers.

HAY PRICES FIXED.

HEMET.—The price of alfalfa hay in this district was established by the passage of the following motion at a meeting of the local unit of the Alfalfa Growers' Association: "That the price of hay from this district be set at $20 per ton for No. 1 grade. That the price per ton for loose hay in the field be set at $5 a ton less than the prevailing price for baled hay of the same grade at the time of delivery." The association now represents fully 80 per cent of the alfalfa acreage in the Hemet Valley, and the passage of a resolution looking to the enforcement of penalties for violation of contracts now carries more weight than a mere protest.

Selecting the Tractor.

incentive to frequent cleaning of the crankcase and changing of oil.

THE CLUTCH.

A clutch brake is very essential, especially for ease and speed in gear shifting. It is a cheap insurance on transmission gears.

STATIONARY ATTACHMENT.

The stationary attachment should have an independent clutch or be easily removed to eliminate excess running while doing draw bar work. A side location is preferable and it should be placed so it may be belted up from either front or rear and so the operator can line up for belt work quickly. The pulley should have belt clearance so there is no rubbing of the belt sides and also be in a position to allow placing of the belt without unlacing.

THE BRAKE.

A brake should be provided on the rear wheels of the tractor (if a wheel type) that can be set on mechanically. This eliminates possible troubles in shifting gears or leaving the tractor on hillsides.

CONTROL ESSENTIAL.

Although the tractor is not a pleasure vehicle, the driver is entitled to ease of operation. A comfortable seat should be placed to give the driver unobstructed view ahead and also in a position enabling him to watch the implement's operation. All levers and controls should be within the operator's reach. A differential lock and brake is convenient at times.

THE TRANSMISSION.

Good transmission bearings are essential. Roller and ball bearings have less friction than the plain types. The transmission should be accessible for inspecting, cleaning and adjusting. All wearing parts should be replaceable, especially exposed gears and bearings.

GENERAL ACCESSIBILITY.

It is feasible to have as many of the movable parts as possible inclosed. Grease cups and oil holes, if necessary, should be placed so as to receive attention. Parts which require greatest attention and care in adjusting, for best results, as the magneto and carburetor, should not be surrounded by other accessories causing inconvenience to the operator. Avoid special tools whenever possible—spark plugs may require little attention, but a special spark plug wrench lost aggravates the operator in a time of need.

REPAIRS INEVITABLE.

Buy borrow or lend no machine with the idea that repairs will never be needed. See that a complete stock of repairs are near, reasonable in price and certain of their maintenance.

FACTORY.

Avoid freaks, "one idea" and experimental machines. Let factories conduct their own experiments. Companies that have been in business for a number of years with a fairly stable product and which have the confidence of the public through the service rendered should be preferred to those of less responsibility.

A detailed discussion of the features enumerated will follow.

American honey exports to the Netherlands during March were 103,160 pounds.

ALFALFA MEN OF SAN FERNANDO ORGANIZE.

About 150 alfalfa growers of the San Fernando Valley, meeting recently at Van Nuys, decided to form a local association, to be affiliated with the Alfalfa Growers, Incorporated, of California.

The meeting was called to order by L. T. Guild of Van Nuys, who was made permanent chairman, and Fred S Owen was appointed secretary. Earle Roberts, president of the Antelope Valley Bank of Lancaster, representing the growers from that district, gave a very convincing talk on co-operation and organization, showing what had been accomplished in the Antelope Valley in a very short time. Ninety per cent of the growers are lined up with the Antelope Valley Alfalfa Growers' Association, he said. A. Gregory of Redlands, vice-president of the Alfalfa Growers, explained fully the manner and form of organization, and presented the standard marketing agreement used in all the local associations. H. M. Maddaford, general sales manager for the association, explained the plan and methods proposed to be followed in marketing the crops of the various associations.

A number of growers from various parts of the valley took part in the meeting. Following this, an expression was taken of the growers present, and they decided practically unanimously to go on with the organization, with the result that they appointed the following men to act as incorporators, representing the different localities: E. L. White, Burbank; B. Maxwell, Lankershim; T. M. Edmondson, Van Nuys; E. D. Grant, Van Nuys; Ben Kenney, Owensmouth; L. T. Guild, Jr., San Fernando; J. R. Anderson, Zelzah; A. J. Gibson, San Fernando; Fred S. Owen, San Fernando.

Announcement is made by the J. I. Case Plow Works Company of Racine, Wis., that Clem W. Michael, chief designer of J. I. Case implements for the past eighteen years, is making an exhaustive study of California conditions as regards power farming and horse-drawn implements, in order that the company may be able to more intelligently cope with the variable conditions confronting the California rancher.

An Imperial Farmer Who Isn't Worrying About Cotton.

BY H. C. DAVIS.

When Imperial Valley went "cotton mad," the owners of the Wight-Grondenberg ranch, Imperial Valley, refused to be stampeded, but continued to raise stock feed. This tractor hauled two carloads of alfalfa per trip steadily for nearly three months, from ranch to valley market.

THAT the future of Imperial Valley lies in diversified farming, is the firm belief of one of the valley's oldest ranchers—in point of local experience. J. T. Wight, one of the owners of the 640-acre Wight-Grondenberg ranch, southeast of Holtville, secured 320 acres, as did his partner, C. R. Grondenberg of San Diego, in 1901. He believes that they have the only property of its size purchased directly from the government at that early date, and operated continuously until the present time by the original owners.

At any rate, the highly prosperous state of this Holtville ranch, where sixty-eight dairy cows, 300 head of stock cattle, seventy horses and mules and 500 hogs, besides 100 laying hens with several hundred young chickens, are bringing in sizable checks earned entirely from the soil on which they feed, lends weight to Mr. Wight's experience and belief. He states that this farm, where hogs sold for pork have alone brought in over $10,000 during the past eight months, has been entirely self-supporting since it was water-stocked and leveled back in 1903.

The cream check on this ranch seldom falls below $600 per month.

Mr. Wight is an optimist. He raised cotton last year, at that. But, though the outlook was bright at the time of planting, he could only spare 175 acres that season to even so promising a crop, which nobody could have known was foredoomed. That is one of the advantages of diversified farming, he claims; you don't put all your eggs in one basket.

Though he by no means minimizes the grave problems to be encountered by farmers of this wonderfully fertile, though still comparativaly new section, Mr. Wight feels fully justified in his exceedingly cheerful forecasts for the future of the valley. He says that problems of poor prices, of transportation, of drainage and alkali encroachment, are really mild compared to the handicaps fought and conquered during the years of his own experience there, not so long ago. The flowering of the barren desert into the proverbial rose is too recent and vivid in his memory to allow of bemoanings because of mere temporary depressions.

FIRST VIEW OF DESERT

Moreover, Mr. Wight is also an advocate of the "anybody can do it" theory. He looks contentedly out over his green and growing acreage, and repeats emphatically that anybody can—given the place, of course. In his mind it goes without saying that Imperial Valley is the place. He picked it when, as a very young man, freshly graduated from the agricultural college of the University of Michigan, he came West, and drove hopefully over the mountains on the almost indiscernible wagon trail from San Diego.

He likes to recall his first significant view of the desert. From the crest of the mountain ridge to the west he saw a remarkable mirage hung in the sky far out over the expanse of yellow sands. Inverted in the heavens, the spire of the newly-built church in the tiny town of Imperial pointed dramatically down at the spot destined to be the scene of his many years of achievement. Many hot, parched miles intervened and many years of struggle lay between him and his fertile, well-stocked pastures of today. But he made it; and he says others can. The whole answer, in his opinion, is, "Work to the point," the point being diversified farming.

The dairy looms largest, perhaps, in his proven plan of an all-around farm. Hogs might be said to vie with dairy cows, for first place, however, in Mr. Wight's esteem. Otherwise his articles of faith may be summed up in his practice of using only carefully bred stock, with pure-bred sires; in the maintaining of fertile soil, enriched by an intelligent rotation of pastures as well as of crops; in a canny mixture of progressiveness and conservatism, which permits of much experimentation with new crops, forage grasses and methods, on a miniature scale, while the bulk of his acreage is devoted to the tried and true income-producers; and lastly, but most emphatically, he believes in the kind of farm life, for employer and employee alike, that makes life worth living, even in an admittedly warmish climate.

In fact, conveniences are considered efficiency accelerators on this ranch. It presents a reassuring example of farm life as it may be lived. Sheltered in a five-acre eucalyptus grove, the six or eight homes of owners, ranch manager, milkers and irrigators, and bunk house for the unmarried men, cluster near the ranch kitchen and boarding-house. This is rightly considered the magnetic nucleus of the entire establishment. Here reigns "Uncle" Lister, a man of culture and discernment, who relinquished his former grandeur as the British ruler of the Island of Pemba, off the African coast, to chose the exalted station of cook and autocrat of the dining table at the Wight-Grondenberg ranch. His success as chef and host recently won a commendation from a State labor camp inspector, which is highly prized by Mr. Lister.

"REFRIGERATOR BEDS" HELP.

The well-thought-out domestic arrangements on this ranch are even to include, it is planned, several of the "refrigerator" beds now being placed on the market. A principle of evaporation is employed to reduce the temperature of these beds, even in the hottest weather, it is said. Mr. Wight was quick to see the advantages of comfortable day-time sleep for milkers, irrigators and other ranch employees who can do their work during the night hours in the heat of mid-summer. Showers for the men are also on the near-future budget for this ranch.

Farm machinery carries out the same idea of convenience for efficiency. A modern electric system is busily employed, while a three-horse-power engine runs the double-unit milking machine. The separator is run by a gas engine. A light tractor is used in many ways, including disc plowing and running the grinder, which converts barley and corn and alfalfa hay raised on the place into feed for pigs grown on the farm. A combined buck and stacker is another improvement on old methods through mechanical assistance. It is interesting to note in passing, however, that this ranch still uses as any as twenty work horses in the busy season.

Conveniences which are considered frills are not admitted to the Wight-Grondenberg ranch. Under this tabulation comes "fancy" stock. Utility first and all the time is one of the fundamental principles of diversified farming as Mr. Wight sees it. He neither provides individual shower baths in concrete-floored private apartments, nor the fastidious variety of hog to which such elegancies may seem vital.

Good individuals of standard breeds, careful culling, pure-bred sires, and good care and management are the considerations which make stock pay, Mr. Wight believes. On this ranch a fine, registered Holstein bull heads the dairy herd, with an eight-month registered Holstein bull calf giving splendid promise. There are three pure-bred Duroc Jersey boars, and nine registered sows of the same breed. The other fifty-one sows with pigs this spring are all good grades. And there is Galba, the French Coach stallion, who in his early youth brought the tidy sum of $4500, and who still proudly heads the little band of work mares, some of which, however, are producing mule colts. The stock cattle herd is made up of young stock raised from the dairy cows, or bought as feeders. The ninety-six head of steers sold this spring at between two and three years, averaged close to 1000 pounds each.

H. Lister, the ranch chef, and his pet, a pure-bred bull calf. Mr. Lister was once British governor of the Island of Pemba.

FEED RAISED ON THE RANCH.

These steers, as well as the 500 pigs sold within the past few months, have been hardened and fattened as well as raised on feed grown on the ranch. With the exception of four tons of cottonseed, bought during the past year because of circumstances not expected to arise during the present season, no grain was bought. A certain amount of fish meal, charcoal, salt, etc., was purchased for mixing with the otherwise home-grown mash for fattening the hogs, but this was the full extent of outside aid required in feeding stock on this self-sufficient farm. The cream check, which averages, with between sixty and seventy cows

No. 2C Autographic KODAK Junior

$25.00

High Quality at Medium Price

The pictures made by this Kodak are of ideal proportions. Their width—(2⅞ inches) and their length (4⅛) inches) give them the same correct shape as the smaller 1A and the larger 3A sizes. This shape so fits the usual view—whether it is a portrait, when used vertically, a group or a broad expanse of landscape, when used horizontally, that trimming of the print is rarely necessary.

The Kodak Anastigmat f7.7 lens produces negatives having that crispness and sharpness that are characteristic of the true anastigmat. The automatic shutter is fast enough to record the usual moving objects without blur, and the autographic feature tells who and what and when of every picture.

Let us show you the big value this Kodak offers.

Builded on Quality-

Over twenty-five years ago when California was much less populous than now, the first Globe Mill was established. The mill was small but the quality of the products, then as now, was high. Gradually Californians came to realize that the Globe "A 1" mark symbolized the finest in food products.

The one mill has grown to many and the number of products have grown. As newer methods came into being quality has improved. The aim always has been to produce the very finest foods possible. It has never changed, it will never change.

Let the Globe "A 1" mark guide you in your food purchases.

TWO LITTLE MAIDS OF MEMORIAL DAY.

BY JENNIE VAN ALLEN.

SOME day there will be a new shrine in the Far West and pilgrims will reverently lay their blossoms on the resting place of Ella May—the little girl who was the first to cover the soldiers graves with flowers.

The beautiful story of Ella May is told by the lifelong friend of the little maid, whose father was chaplain of a Michigan regiment stationed at Arlington.

Capt. May constantly ministered to the wounded and dying in the hospital at Washington and morning, noon and in the evening his little 8-year-old daughter followed him through the wards.

No child ever saw so many anguished tortured with pain or listened to so many piteous: "Tell my loved ones I died like a soldier."

No child ever saw so many languished spirits comforted by the "Word of God" or watched with brimming eyes, so many soldiers go to the Quiet City and lie down to everlasting rest.

It was the somber side of war but pain, and sorrow and death were powerless to quench her dauntless spirit or check her joyous laugh. Her wonderful courage never failed, even when, dying men laid their hands on her bonny head and looking into her face with fast glazing eyes, whispered softly:

"I have a little girl like you! But her eyes are not so black nor do they shine like yours. And her hair is not so soft nor has it the sheen of a wild bird's wing! But she's very precious to me! Oh God, will I ever see my little girl again!

And Ella May would whisper derly touched the wan face of the dying soldier:

"Some day I'll find your little girl and tell her how you loved her!"

And so it came to pass that the horrors of war and the stories of pestilential prisons told by men mutilated by shells and tormented by gunshot wounds, had no more power to make her morbid than the pitiful sights and sounds touched the heart of a bird flying in at the open window to sing a song of rejoicing.

One fair day when the violets hid their lovely heads under the big green leaves and the trailing arbutus and delicate anemones came into bloom, Ella May went into the woodland for the treasures of spring. Her arms ached with the burden of blossoms but there were enough for the graves of men who had murmured with their dying breath,

"I have a little girl like you!"

The years brought a crown of sorrow for the shining hair that had in it the sheen of a wild bird's wing. And the sparkling eyes were often wet with tears. But her courage had been kindled into an everlasting flame as she stood by soldiers who were fighting their last fight and promised to find the "little girl who looked like her."

Ella May's life flowed into a broad, beautiful channel whose bedrock was fortitude in meeting the inevitable in life. Many daughters cherish mementoes of honored fathers and the precious memories of the last hours on earth because a little girl "promised" and to Ella May a promise was a sacred vow.

Thousands of soldiers honored Ella May for she was like a flaming torch in the terrible days when they lay sick unto death in the hospital at Washington. And men loved the child because she was the first to lay flowers on the graves of their comrades in the Civil War. All her life men praised her for the gracious deed that was the beginning of a day of remembrance for the beloved dead of a nation. Her active hands are now folded forever but her memory is embalmed in the hearts of all who knew her.

The day is coming, yea is even here, when every man, woman and child coming to her resting place shall carry a stone from the Rocky Mountains and lay it reverently upon her grave until a mighty monument shall rise above the precious dust of Ella May.

Somewhere there is an unmarked grave of a little maid whose spoken word brought 10,000 people together to decorate the graves of the Union soldiers.

A little negro girl, born in slavery but rejoicing in her emancipation, was listening to James Redpath as he extolled the soldiers who had given their lives to make them free. Her place of burial is unknown but her words are immortal and were like the song of a bugle:

"Let's all of us go and get a'mfuls and a'mfuls of posies and just hide the soldiers' graves, till we can't see 'em again, never, no more!"

Mr. Redpath caught the suggestion as fire follows oil:

"We'll decorate the soldiers' graves on May Day. We'll invite all our friends to the cemetery and ask them to bring all the flowers in the city of Charleston. And all you children go into the woods and pick every wild blossom and bring vines and branches to lay on the graves of the soldiers who died to free your people!"

And the group of eager colored children went to every home in Charleston and passionately entreated the people to honor the heroic dead. Undaunted by rebuffs and recriminations, unafraid and unabashed by their color, they swept through the city like a swarm of locusts.

Mr. Redpath, the famous American historian and war correspondent, used his pen and exerted his powerful influence in both the North and South to make the day memorable in history.

On May Day, 1865, there was gathered together a great army of 10,000 men, women and children led by a full battalion of soldiers marching to the cemetery. The battle stained flags on their splintered staffs, the muffled beating of drums and the long call of the bugle and fife again sounded in the devastated city of Charleston, where the seeds of secession were first sown and where the Civil War was begun with "a shot that was heard around the world"—the great city that had been bombarded for 565 days and had been cruelly scourged with disease and pillaged by fire.

The beautiful city of Charleston that had watched Maj. Anderson salute the Stars and Stripes and march out of Fort Sumter with his flag flying and the garrison keeping step to the fife and drum—the city that saw Old Glory, lowered April 14, 1861, and on rising from its ruins April 14, 1865, saw their old flag that had been baptized with blood and torn by shot and shell, again raised with imposing ceremonies.

And the people knew that "God Almighty had nailed that flag to the mast of the great Ship of State and that the hand of man could not prevail against the beloved Stars and Stripes."

And when peace came, the wonderful city of Charleston, which was the first to secede from the Union, had the honor of being the first to reverence the dust of the Boys in Blue.

Ten thousand men, women and children carrying garlands for the soldiers' graves. And soldiers said to each other:

"Isn't it marvelous that a little white girl should be the first to decorate a soldier's grave when we were in the flood tide of the great rebellion. And that a little negro girl should be the first to carry the message of scattering flowers on the graves of our brave boys as soon as peace was declared."

That night the stars looked down on the city of peace. The cool wind swept softly over the low mound with their burden of bloom. The dew freshened the flowers and the mist enfolded the sleeping soldiers, even as the veil of the temple was round and about the Holy of Holies.

The solemn ceremonial was finally incorporated into the life of the nation by the act of Gen. John A. Logan, Commander-in-Chief of the American Army and the date was officially changed to the 30th of May. it gradually grew in favor until finally the Blue and the Gray, the soldier and the citizen, the old and the young were remembered on Decoration Day.

And then a new name was born and the Grand Army of the Republic gave it a hallowed name for they called it "Memorial Day"—a day of remembrance for the dead who died for liberty.

It is the soldiers' day—a dry holy in the eyes of the people for it was bought with blood and is worthy to be called the "National Sabbath" of the American people.

Whether our defenders sleep on land or are at rest in the sea, the earth and the water will bloom with fragrant flowers in memory of the men whose gallant deeds made us the mightiest nation on earth—the precious dead who made us the United People of the United States.

Just Getting His Bearings.

"I beg your pardon, but are you girls going east?" inquired the nice-looking man as he leaned over the wheel of his Packillas in front of a Green-street sorority house.

"Oh, yes," gurgled one of the two co-eds, as she reached a daintily-booted foot for the running board.

"Thank you so much. I never can keep my direction straight in Champaign."

And the car glided away.—[Siren.

BOOKWORMS—THE HUMAN AND INSECT.

BY J. M. SCANLAND.

IN WEBSTER'S Dictionary the "bookworm" is classified under two headings, or rather, there are two classes: "Moths or beetles that feed on the binding; one unusually devoted to reading or studying." The insect likes the paper and binding for the nourishment afforded. It is a bookworm in order that it may live. The human bookworm does not follow the vocation for a living, but a pastime. And this species is more destructive of books than the insect, for they do not know the proper way of taking a book from the shelf; how to open or close it; and, furthermore, most of them arrogate to themselves the office of censor, scholiast or annotator. They run a pencil across passages that their narrow minds do not indorse; and mark on the margin of the pages what they think the author should have written. The insect only eats away part of the book, which is easily doctored at the library "hospital." The pencil marks of the human bookworm disfigure the volume almost beyond a cure, and it makes decent readers nervous to see such vandalism. It is not possible to stop this desecration unless a book is minutely examined when given out and when returned. Perhaps it is better to do this and thus preserve the books, and besides, there is a law prescribing a fine for such contemptible acts, and a conviction would exclude the law-defying vandal from the library.

There are two classes of readers in a public library: Those who know what they want to read, and those who do not. The patron who seeks information or knowledge goes direct to the catalogues of authors or subjects, and gets the desired volume. The one who does not know what he wants to read, browses among the shelves like one lost in a wilderness, and finally selects a book that attracts his eye. He is not interested in any particular subject, but reads any and everything. Often his selection is due to the fancy or ornamental binding of the book. He seizes the book at the top pulling it out of the case and thus loosens the binding. This is a greater damage than is done by his partner, the insect bookworm. The browser at large considers that he has a right to spend his aimless hours among the shelves. He does not consider it a privilege granted. He has as much right to satisfy his curiosity, though it may not benefit him, as the actual reader who seeks information for his own benefit and perhaps that of others. True, without a free range, the skimmer would be at sea—he would not know what to ask for. But, he could look at the catalogues of books, and ask for what he thinks he would like to read. This would save floor space among the shelves, and make the pathways less crowded for those who go there to get the books they know they want. Some librarians argue that it is better to close the shelves to all, and issue books only on request slips. This, they claim, would prevent mutilation of books in some cases, for much of the penciling is done by the bookworms who take them from the shelves.

Buckle and other profound writers held that the growth of mentality, or the lack of it, is largely due to climate and the surrounding objects of nature! They might have gone further, or deeper, and explained, if possible, what produces the peculiar type known as the "bookworm"—not the insect. The human bookworm is a distinct type that flourishes in all climates, in mountainous countries and in the valleys, and is uninfluenced by them, and has no influence upon them, it may be added. The worm is known by its peculiar features which, it would seem, are fashioned by the continual reading habit. The smoothest forehead, in time, becomes contracted from a serious effort at thinking, which the worm considers necessary. Also, he assumes a serious or comic face, according to the book he is skimming over. Finally, these wrinkles and grimaces remain and become fixtures, just as any other habit. But this is not all. There are other physical peculiarities that stamp the bookworm—those of the immovable kind, particularly the head. It is perhaps a provision of nature that a peculiar mind can exist only in a peculiar shaped body, or head. This theory seems to hold in the bookworm, for his mentality coincides haps on intimation from the authorities at Washington.

During Walker's seven months' campaign, Santa Anna, President of the Mexican Republic, was plotting to get him out, and encouraging the French in San Francisco to make another effort. He wrote to Luis Del Valle, Mexican Consul at that city, to have a conference with the French Consul and, if possible, secure the enlistment of at least 3000 men for one year, to be sent to Guaymas to protect the country against the invading Americans. For this service the Mexican President agreed to give any amount of land. The Consuls agreed, and about 800 Frenchmen were enlisted and armed, at the expense of the Mexican government. The French Consul then asked Raousset to take command, assuring him that the two governments would support him. The count, being without funds, and still ambitious of empire and glory, accepted the offer. The vessel on which they were to embark was seized, but later was released. In a few days about 300 left on another vessel, the remaining volunteers refusing to go.

The Consuls were indicted on the charge of violating the neutrality laws. They closed their consulates, remonstrated against the "outrage," and appealed to their governments. Del Valle was convicted, but the jury disagreed in the case of the French Consul. Finally the cases were dismissed, perhaps on intimation from the Washington authorities, the government not desiring a quarrel with the other governments.

The consuls were indicted on the charge Guaymas, in July, 1854. His forces were disorderly and defied his authority. Consequently, he abandoned the plan of attacking Guaymas and sent a message to Gen. Yanez, commanding the Mexican forces, asking him to throw off his allegiance to his government, join the French forces, and establish a republic. The Mexican asked for a conference. But during the time he was secretly preparing to attack the French. Seeing that he had been deceived, the count ordered an attack. The Mexican force was about 1800 men, and four batteries of cannon. The French lost thirty-three killed and sixty wounded—about one-third of their force. The Mexicans lost thirty killed and 120 wounded. Some of the French retreated to the steamer which had brought them, and the vessel immediately steamed away. Others sought refuge in the French Consulate. The French flag was torn down and the men dragged out. They were taken, with the wounded, to the suburbs and after being made to dig their own graves were all shot. The count had been placed in a cell lighted with tapers, which reflected in their dim light a coffin and an altar. Next morning he was shot to death by a squad, the men standing so close that his clothing caught on fire.

Notwithstanding these failures the filibuster spirit still lived, and about three years later Henry A. Crabb led an expedition against Sonora. Crabb was a native of Tennessee, and had edited a newspaper and practiced law in Vicksburg, Miss. He was of a commanding figure, well read, a fluent speaker, and had a restless disposition. He arrived in San Francisco in the summer of 1850, and then went to Stockton, where he practiced law. He was elected city attorney, and later to the State Senate. In this body he introduced a joint resolution calling a State Constitutional Convention for the purpose of dividing California and making a slave State out of the southern half. He was a Whig, a strong advocate for slavery, and southern rights, and became a candidate for the United States Senate, and perhaps would have been elected only for these ultra doctrines. In the meantime he had married Senorita Filomena Ainsa, a native of Sonora. Her father had been driven from the province by Gov. Pesqueria and his valuable mines confiscated, on the charge of being a Revolutionist. Having failed in his political ambition, Crabb decided to try the other field—which leads to glory or a grave. He reasoned thatthe failure of others was no evidence that a thing cannot be accomplished. In addition, by taking Sonora and making himself President of the republic, he would also recover the valuable mines of his father-in-law, and, incidentally, have Gov. Pesqueria shot. Accordingly, with about 100 men, armed with rifles, revolvers and daggers, he arrived at San Pedro in January, 1857. The expedition came to Los Angeles, where about fifty men joined. At this place, horses, wagons, provisions and additional arms were bought, and the filibusters marched across the desert to Yuma. At Sonita Crabb issued a proclamation stating that the xepedition came as "colonists," and not as enemies to the Mexicans. He then marched with about 100 men on Caborca, a town near Hermosillo, the scene of Raoussett's victory. Here the filibusters were attacked, losing five killed and seven wounded, Crabb receiving a slight wound. The filibusters sought safety in an adobe house, where they were besieged for six days, when Crabb offered to surrender, provided they were treated as prisoners of war. This was agreed to, with the stipulation that they would be sent to Altar and given a fair trial. The filibusters grounded arms, and marched out. They were seized, and the hands of each man were tied behind his back, and they were marched to the barracks. About midnight they were told that they would be shot at sunrise. At that hour they were taken to the suburbs, ranged in squads of five and shot to death. The bodies were stripped of clothing and remained on the ground as food for vultures, coyotes and swine. Only one person was spared—a half-breed, Charles E. Evans, aged 17 years. He was sent across the American line, and at San Diego and at Los Angeles gave the details of the massacre. The boy also said that the head of Crabb was severed from the body and placed in a jar of mescal to be preserved as a relic of the execution of the filibusters.

THE DARK SECRET.

"Look here," he said. "What do you make as a professor?"

T. Gannett told him.

"Hell!" said Smith. "If you'll stick here I'll take you into partnership with me. I need a man like you for a partner. You'll make $5000 the first year or I'll give you the shop."

T. Gannett shook his head.

"I'll see you next summer," he said.

"Listen," Smith urged. "You and I know there's money in used cars. People get tired of a car in a couple of seasons. Then they begin to notice little things—a rattle here and a dent there. Most any car two years old can be made good as new with a few dollars' worth of new parts and a few days' work. You made a good thing out o' this Fortner. Why stop? Why not do it every week? One swallow doesn't make a summer."

T. Gannett was interested; but he wanted to get home; he tore himself away.

Prof. Trumbull Gannett dropped off the train at Monroe at 8 o'clock in the evening of September 19th. He was wearing the suit he had worn three months before, but he had exchanged the gain sack for a proper suit case and he had a new hat. He looked presentable, but he didn't particularly care whether he did or not. He could feel that fat, oiled-silk belt around his waist. He took a taxicab to the house.

The front door opened. Dorothy stood there. He called to her. He ran up the walk and threw his arms around her and hugged her. He kissed her. Dorothy kissed him. And then she drew back. She spoke. She spoke words that most husbands have heard from their wives but that Prof. Trumbull Gannett had never heard from his wife until now. She said:

"Where have you been?"

But Dorothy had, after all, only one serious reproach when he had told her. It was that he hadn't taken her along.

"I will take you next summer," he said.

Dorothy knitted her brows.

"You can't do a thing like that again. Tom. Really, it wouldn't be good for you."

"Did you ever see me look better in my life?"

Dorothy smiled at his tanned face.

"No," she admitted. And then she saw his hands.

"Oh!" she cried. "Your poor hands!"

"Poor hands nothing. They're tough as sole leather. They'll soften up again in a week and I'll get the grease out of them.",

"But your finger nails!"

"They'll grow again."

"But Tom," Dorothy protested. "you can't spend your summers like that. You need a vacation. You need—"

"I got what I needed—exactly what I needed," he told her. He lifted the money-belt. "Think what it means—we won't owe a nickle and we're starting in the year $400 to the good. Why, it means I can go on being a professor."

And Dorothy being a sensible person and open to logic, eventually agreed with him. He borrowed $3000 last winter and during the Christmas holidays he and Dorothy went out to Pawnee, Kan., and made a deal with Mort Smith, and invested the money in used cars which are a good deal cheaper in December than they are a few months later, and ordered new parts so they'd be on hand in the spring. They went back to Pawnee city in June, and Smith and Gannett are now turning those used cars into cash as fast as T. Gannett can put them into first-class running condition. They ought to clean up several thousand dollars on the summer's work.

T. Gannett had already bought the car which little Richard Gannett, or little Philip Gannett, whichever it was, prophesied to Mrs. Stewart's small daughter. It is a Durbrow of the year 1915, which is a long time ago, even for a Durbrow, but just the same the old boat has sporting lines and rides like a Pullman sleeper, and when at thirty-five miles an hour, the professor steps on her tail, the motor doesn't try to jump out of the hood; it just calmly turns up the desired R. P. M.'s.

T. Gannett and Dorothy Gannett and the twins will start from Pawnee in this car about the twentieth of September and drive the 800 miles in about four days, so as to arrive in time for the opening of the first semester.

If Mrs. Stewart survives her first glimpse of the Gannetts in their car, she may be confirmed in her theory that they have inherited money. She will certainly be confirmed in her suspicion that is isn't Dorothy's cleverness. Even Mrs. Bender, staunch protagonist that she is, will be forced to admit that it can't be management.

Mrs. Bender will learn the truth. But it is extremely doubtful if Mrs. Stewart will ever discover the dark secret of how the Gannetts do it.

Monroe is a long way from Pawnee City, Kan.

BOOKWORMS—

with his physical peculiarities. He is a distinct type, or rather species, for they differ in particulars, but are similar as a body. Like a sponge, they absorb a great deal, and again like a sponge they retain nothing. They know so much that they know nothing, and what they have read appears like a rain-washed blotted picture on a dead wall.

The strangest looking character I ever saw in a public library (and I have visited several during many years) was, strangely, not a bookworm, nor even a reader. He seemed to be an interested spectator. He had a thick, round head, crowned with a shock of black hair, which stood upright; his face was covered with coarse whiskers, or rather bristles, leaving a clear space around his mouth, which was partly open, and his cheeks were drawn back, thus forming a grin verging on imbecility. His chair leaned against the table, and he faced the people as they entered the library. He looked at each straight in the eye, and occasionally varied the extent of his grin. Except for his whiskers he would be a second edition of Victor Hugo's "Man Who Laughs."

Another character was a man whose forehead sloped back to the top of his thick head. His nose was flat at the base, and his large, round, grayish eyes rested upon one page of a book, while he held down the other with a large, thick hand. Occasionally, he moved his ears backward, like a freak in a circus. This climax was no doubt occasioned by the effect of the novel on his nerves. He was reading a wild western story written by a nature faker who had probably been as far west as Chicago.

At the opposite table sat, or rather sprawled, the usual library nuisance—a large, fat man firmly planted in a chair and facing lengthwise of the desk, with another chair wheeled around upon which he had hoisted his number ten feet. His bull neck swelled in a roll above his collar, his blinking eyes were firmly centered upon the page, and there was not a trace of expression upon his waxen-like face.

It is estimated that about one-third of the patrons of a public library are what may be termed "voracious" readers of fiction, and that they do two-thirds of the reading. That is, this one-third with the fiction habit read more than the other two-thirds. As the books of fiction are in more continual circulation the inroads of the bookworm insect are less frequent. The volume that is the least read is the more subject to the insect. And, perhaps, the continual handling of a volume by the human bookworm kills his mate, the insect?

The fiction reader rarely reads anything else. In fact, he does not read, but "skims." Within a week, generally, he has forgotten even the title of the books he read. He does not see why any other kind of book should be kept in a public library, and he is also ready to argue why the city is not as much obligated to furnish him with [illegible] free books.

The most comic, and yet tragical sight, is a bobbed-hair young thing trying to trace a plot for a movie picture from a diagram shown in a book explaining the plan of writing scripts. She cannot see either the "beginning, the middle or the ending" of the scheme plot or diagram, and is equally at sea in the "explanations." She closes the book with a bang, and rushes out of the room—a real picture of despair.

The fussy old woman throws her satchel down on the table, her parasol comes next; she draws up a chair with a screech, and furiously turns the well-worn pages of a flimsy fashion journal. This makes it uncomfortable for the low-browed man with the pale complexion who is reading a "shock absorber" giving the details of life on the border. It is also discomforting to the sweet young things who have dropped in to exchange confidences and read love letters while noisily turning the leaves of a French novel.

One of the most harrowing scenes is the would-be author looking for plots for short stories. Most of these misguided plagiarists are women—from the lisping girl with an affected deep-thinking impression to the ancient-looking, sour-visaged dame to whom romance has ever been a stranger. There are pale-faced, sentimental young fellows who, perhaps, would become real men if they went to work on a farm or at some other useful occupation. And there are men beyond middle age, who should know better, and certainly could do better if they went to work. Poole's Index is in continual service by these searchers for plots. The demand is for the older issues of the magazines, especially the English publications, the supposition being that the editors have forgotten these old stories, and thus the plagiarisms are less likely to be discovered. Opposite me one day sat a highly rouged blonde, with a broad stub nose, expressionless face, and fat, coarse hands. She had one hand on a printed page, and a pad of paper was spread upon the other. She was copying out something from the magazine. She was also chewing gum, and her industry at times in this habit I construed as evidence that the plot was thickening. She wrote in pencil on both sides of the sheet.

At a table opposite, in contrast, sat a man with a broad face, sharp nose, heavy whiskers, and what may be termed a "double" forehead. The forehead, proper, was about the average height, and at the top there was a level strip, or demarcation, and from thence arose another forehead extending to the top of his bald crown. He evidently had the advantage of all the other bookworms in the matter of storage room. And, as nature delights in contrasts, there sat opposite to him a fat woman with a double chin, a bushy head of hair, and a long, thin nose flattened at the end, and which point moved as her face showed increased interest in the story she was skimming over.

A long, bony, old man, bald-headed excepting a thin ledge of hair from the ears downward, and who had a graveyard cough, threw himself into a chair, and began to read audibly—or, rather, his voice was a whisper with a grating sound. I moved again.

There was a tall man, or rather he was long, who was in a great hurry to get his mind on something lest it settle down and refuse to work. He had brought out two large books, illustrated, and seemed to care only for the pictures. When seated he seemed to be standing, and his shoulders extended higher than ordinarily, thus setting his head in a kind of frame. His face was sharp, and his skin the color of parchment.

The fussy, broad-faced and broad-bodied woman, who owes one day's dues on a four-days' magazine, and tries to argue that the figures are not correct, is a familiar type. Some women have three books and owe one day (2 cents) on each. They block the line in arguing and explaining, and finally fish out a $5 bill, and carefully count the change while the line grows.

SUNDAY, MAY 30.

Beersheba.

OUR sometime neighbor, Socrates, is back again in the Verdugo Hills on one of his periodical visits. And when he arrived in his big juggernaut car with the "shofer" in the maroon livery, Socrates was considerably fussed up.

Gee, whiz, he said when he got himself stretched on the ground in front of his tent, gee, whiz, it is good to be here where a man can stick his legs out without having a lawsuit over it.

And it was just as he was saying that that some of the neighbors happened along.

Greetings and welcome to you, O Socrates of the Roaring Town, said the man who has the phonograph. Greetings and welcome, but why these ironical remarks, and why are you all fussed up like this, said the man who has the phonograph.

And Socrates said wait till I light my pipe and get a good draw of it and then I will tell you. And so, the neighbors sat down and waited. Time was made for slaves, anyway, as the old saying has it. So, what did it matter that there was a little spell of waiting for Socrates to light his pipe?

Well, the way of it is this, said Socrates after he had got his pipe to going good. I have been spending the last six weeks in the Courthouse, down there in the roaring town. And I had three lawyers working for me, and the man who was against me had four lawyers, and there was the jury and the judge and the bailiff and the court clerks and a small army of other attaches or whatever it is they are called. And the lawsuit was over a strip of ground five inches wide and 150 feet long. And you couldn't bring up a jack rabbit on a strip of land like that, he said. But the question was who owned it—the other man or me. And we will not know for several years who owns it, because when this lawsuit is over the lawyers on one side or the other will appeal the case to the Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court has enough work ahead of it already to keep it busy, day and night, for years to come.

Well, sir, the neighbors were clean astonished to know that such a thing could be—that there could be all that fuss and trouble and expense over a five-inch strip of land.

But, the man who used to be a statistician spoke up then and said that there have been thousands of such cases and that there will be thousands more of them as time goes on and roaring towns multiply and increase and folks continue more and more to jamb themselves together.

And the man who used to be a statistician said that the whole thing started thousands of years ago when the world was new and Abraham traded seven ewe lambs for a well and a place to plant a grove with a party named Abimelech, who was a Philistine, and the two swore an oath between them that Abraham should have the well and the land for the grove as his own against all comers. And because they swore the oath to clinch the deal, the place was called Beersheba.

Well, sir, Socrates was so interested that his eyes were popping when the man who used to be a statistician finished his story. And where do you get that stuff, asked Socrates. And the man who used to be a statistician said it is in the greatest book of history ever written, and you ought to get a copy and read it.

And Socrates said he would get a copy and read it, and he said this old gentleman, Abraham, certainly started something when he traded the lambs for the well and the ground to plant a grove on.

Wanted—A Backer.

ONE night, not long ago, after we had spent a few hours in the Professor's house, and were wending our ways homeward, as the saying is, the man who plays the flute said that for the first time in his life he wished he had a million dollars.

Well, sir, this was a strange thing for the man who plays the flute to say—the man who plays the flute above all other men—and there's no denying that it surprised us. And we all stopped in our tracks, as the saying is, and we sat down on the ground in the fragrance of the chaparral, and with one voice we asked the man who plays the flute to explain himself.

And the man who plays the flute was in no way slow to reply. I wish I had a million dollars, he said, so that I could back the Professor up in his theory of the five vowel points in the Hebrew language.

Now, by gollies, we all agreed that it would be a fine thing if somebody would back the Professor, just to try the danged thing out. And we sat a long time there in the chaparral under the stars talking about it.

The way of it is this, that the Professor has a theory that in the five vowel points of the Hebrew language is hidden the secret of all human happiness. We say it is a theory, but with the Professor it is a greater thing than any theory could possibly be. With him it is a conviction—a deep and profound conviction that amounts to nothing less than a religion.

Of course you all know that Hebrew was the language spoken by the chosen people. It was the tongue in which Moses and the prophets conversed with the Lord God of the Ages, when they were on mountain tops together and God hid Himself in a cloud. And the Professor says that in that language God put the secret of all human happiness and prosperity, but that the chosen people got bull-headed and hard to manage and took to speaking Yiddish and things, which made a lot of trouble and put all of us in the fix we are in today.

I don't know the first thing about it, said the man who plays the flute, and none of the rest of you know a thing about it, he said, because we are not learned and educated as the Professor is. But, the Professor is dead set on the conviction that he has got the troubles of the world solved through this vowel point business, and I would like to see him get a chance to put it to work, said the man who plays the flute.

But, said the man who lives in the little gray house in the hollow, why doesn't the Professor go to it, as the saying is. What does he need money for?

He needs money for charts and blackboards and chalk and books and a college to enlighten an ignorant and stiff-necked world, said the man who plays the flute. And if I had a million dollars, he said, I would go down to the Professor's house, right now, and dump it in his lap and tell him to cut loose.

But, alas, the man who plays the flute hasn't got a million dollars, nor is he likely to ever have it.

And that's the way it is in this world; those who would give haven't got it to give, and those who have it won't give. And the Professor is growing old.

And what if his great secret were to die with him?

An Old Garden.

There is an old, old garden,
A wilderness of weed,
Where thorns and thistles flourish,
And queer things run to seed.

No touch of human sorrow,
No breath of sin can kill
The sacred mem'ries ling'ring
In that old garden still.

The holy angels weeping,
Fold their white wings in prayer.
For it was once called Eden,
And God, Himself, walked there.

And in that old, old garden,
His hands and feet nail-torn,
Christ waits. A lonely Monarch,
Crowned with a Crown of Thorn!

Genius.

JUST now Paris is celebrating the centenary of Rachel, the greatest actress of the nineteenth century. And we might say of the twentieth century, also, although that would not be saying much.

So, we have been reading about Rachel and her genius, and what impresses us most is the fact that genius depends on neither looks, nor heredity, nor on anything but upon itself. If you are looking to find a child that may become a genius, you must no more overlook the gutters than the schools.

For instance, there is a girl in England now who is creating a sensation by playing the harp. And they say she hasn't even pretty arms. We say this by way of recalling that most women who take the trouble to play upon the harp in these times appear to do so solely with an aim to showing off their arms and hands. But this girl in England, whose name is Nancy Morgan—and that's a plain enough name to suit the most exacting of plebein tastes in names—plays the harp in a manner to stir the human soul to its deepest depths.

And, as for Rachel. Well, she was the daughter of a Jewish peddler, to begin with. No silver spoon was in her mouth when she was born. She is described as having had "unimpressive features and a poor figure." But, when she read the lines of the classic tragedies she seemed to lift the world that heard her out of itself and to arouse in the human heart an indescribable exaltation.

The age in which we live now is unhappily impoverished as far as Rachels are concerned. Instead of Rachels we have the movie actresses.

The Anti I Society.

WE HAVE heard, lately, of the organization of a new society that we would gladly join if the chance came. It is called the "Anti I Society."

Now, any man and a few women who might be asked to join this new society would be likely to say, "I don't need to. I am not one of those persons to need the discipline that this society exercises so rigidly over its members."

But, you are saying, what the dickens kind of a society is it, anyway? Well, we shall proceed to tell you forthwith, right here and now, as the saying is.

If you join the Anti I Society you must pledge your sacred honor that you will quit talking so much about yourself. You must promise that when you are in the company of others, or even if you are with only one other person, you will refrain from using the personal pronoun "I" to the best of your ability.

By gollies, we think there will be a lot of backsliders in that society when it gets to going good.

For, don't you see, it is the most difficult thing in the world for any of us to refrain from talking about ourselves when we are in company. A social gathering composed of any of the many strata of society from the elite down to the hoi polloi is simply a contest in which each person present strives to monopolize the conversation on the subject of himself. It seems that there is no individual who does not consider himself the most interesting of all topics.

Well, there's no harm in it. And yet, if we would only know it and practice it, there is no end of pleasure in the diversion of listening, once in awhile, to a conversation upon which we do not intrude our own egoism.

The Lost Hill.

LAST summer when we were away on the wander trails, we came to a place where there was once a hill—a hill that we admired and which we had a longing to see again.

But, when we reached the place the hill had disappeared, and we went about to ask what had happened to it. And we were told that the hill had been dug away to make cement.

Poor, unhappy hill. Butchered to make a Roman holiday. To find that hill now you must go to the roaring town and you will find it there molded into stone skyscrapers—a hill that, like Joyce Kilmer's tree, looked at God all day and lifted its green head to pray.

It was a hill that, if its lot had been cast on a Kansas or a Nebraska prairie, no money could buy it; no steam shovel would dare to desecrate it. But, unfortunately, its lot was cast in California, where there are countless hills. And where, it seems, folks think that one hill, more or less, does not matter.

And, of course, the roaring town must have its cement. Still, it seemed to us as we thought of it and felt a sense of loss in our hearts, that something must be wrong in the scheme of things that robs the world of a hill, wherever it be. A hill that the golden arrows of the dawn will strike no more; nor will any sunset linger lovingly upon it again.

And, in the paraphrase of Joyce Kilmer once more, any fool can build a skyscraper, but only God can make a hill.

The King.

WE WERE at a place not long ago where there was a little soiree, as they say in French. And, among the guests was a distinguished officer of the Italian army—one of the men whose immortal valor drove the Austrians back in the great war and paved the way for victory.

And, into the soiree came a little blue-eyed, yellow-haired boy. And when he saw the officer in his uniform and decorations he went up to him wonderingly and said: "Say, mister, are you a king?"

There was a lot of laughter among the guests when the little boy said that. And the little boy might have ended in mild disgrace had not the object of his wonder come to the rescue.

The officer lifted the boy in his arms, set him on his broad shoulder and said:

"No, little boy, I am not a king. I am just a rough old soldier of Italy. But you are a king. Every American is a king."

It was a fine speech; not long, but its simple eloquence put a hush upon that gay company. And it was the truth that the soldier of Italy spoke. Every American is a sovereign in his own right. And some day this same little yellow-haired boy may sit in the chair of Washington, in the chief seat of all, and thus become a king of kings.

Who knows? The way to that place, the chief seat among the seats of the mighty in this great, free land, is open to any American boy. It was open to Lincoln, the rail splitter; to Garfield, the canal boy, and to Jackson.

It is the greatest and the best land that the Lord God of the Ages has yet flung from the hollow of His hand.

Good-by France.

IF it be true that the people of the little nation of France are flocking to live in the cities and deserting the country and the farms, then the world may as well prepare to bid France a long farewell. Its finish is in sight.

In order to live man must eat. And food consists of corn and wheat and rye and other things that grow in the ground. And the ground in cities is covered with concrete and paving stones and stuff through which a plow or a spade can't make way.

In other words, badly off as France is now—and God knows it is badly enough off—it will be a million times worse if its people desert their farms.

It will mean that France is doomed to die the death of Babylon.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren.

Helen is Trapped Into a Degrading Situation by Her Covetous Sister-in-law

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"YES, I like them," admitted Helen, "but Warren doesn't. He never wants me to wear anything that isn't real."

"That's absurd. Everybody wears imitation pearls nowadays—and these are the best I've seen." Carrie was examining them critically.

"They say, only an expert can tell them from the real. They've the same luster and weight. I'm glad they're small—they look more genuine."

"How much were they?" holding the necklace under the silk-shaded light on the dresser. "You didn't say."

Helen hesitated. Carrie always asked the price of everything. It was part of her sister-in-law's insatiable curiosity which she always resented.

"It's rather unusual the way I got them." evasively. "Mr. Merwin, one of Warren's clients, is an importer of real pearls. These were just a sample lot sent him from Paris—and he let us have them at cost. The strands were short—only fifteen inches—so he advised taking three to make two."

"Oh, you have another string? You must have got a bargain. But you haven't told me what you paid!"

"You know you're not allowed up here," shooing Pussy Purr-Mew from her dresser. "My clean scarf!" She brushed off the marks of tiny paws, ignoring Carrie's insistent question.

"I don't know yet what you paid for them." Then with an exasperating shrug, "Perhaps you don't want to tell?"

Helen flushed. There was no escaping Carrie's inquisitiveness.

"I said we got them cheap," aimlessly rearranging her toilet silver. "Only—only $15 a string."

They had not cost $15—only ten. But she never asked Carrie what anything cost—what right had Carrie always to catechise her? She felt no obligation to tell her the truth, though her face grew hot at the falsehood.

"Fifteen! That's absurdly cheap. Mrs. Eldridge paid eighty for hers—and they don't look nearly so real." Then shrewdly, "Has he any more?"

"No, those were the last three strands. They were just a special lot. He said they'd retail at about seventy-five."

"But you've another strand," pointedly. "What're you doing with that?"

"I thought I'd let Mrs. Stevens have them. She's been wanting some."

"Have you told her about them?"

"Not yet, but—"

"Then I'll take them—and pay for them right now. Oh," bristling at Helen's evident reluctance, "you'd rather let her have them, would you?"

"Why, no, of course not," reddening. "But I thought you had a string."

"Just ordinary beads—but these are exquisite. They have that satiny sheen of real pearls. They're so beautifully graduated—and this platinum clasp!"

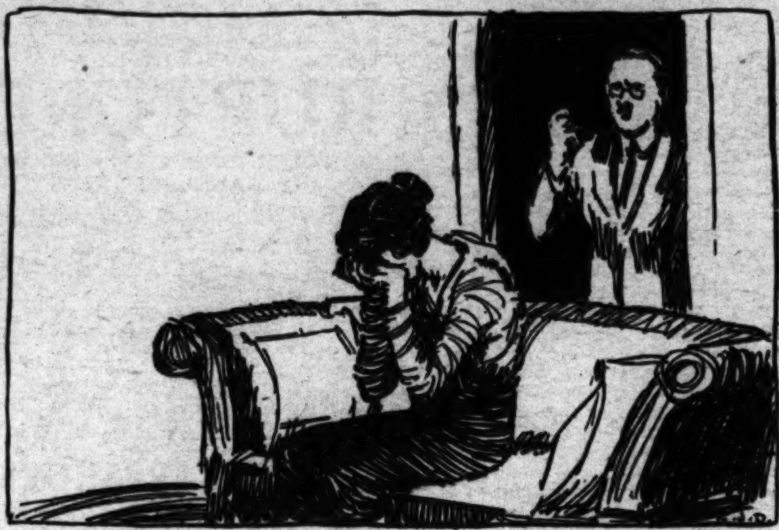
"That's only gold—platinum plated," Helen hastened to explain.

"But for $15? I never heard of anything so cheap," crossing to the bed where her purse lay beside her coat.

What could she do? Helen, nervously bending a flexible nail file, felt that a trap was closing about her. She could not admit now that she had lied about the price. She was furious at Carrie and furious at herself.

"But you haven't seen the others yet," groping for some means of escape.

"You said they were just the same," counting out the money. "Helen, what is the matter? Don't you want me to have them?"



"Why, of course," taking a small jeweler's box from the second drawer.

"Oh!" Carrie snatched greedily at the duplicate strand. "Even the clasp is the same! And they're just the right length," fastening them about her neck. Then abruptly. "What are those loose ones in the box?"

"He said twenty-one inches was the best length—so there were a few left over from the three strands."

"Then half of those belong to me?" covetously.

"Why, yes—if you really want the necklace." Then counting them out, "There's thirty-nine here—we'll have to sort them by sizes."

As they apportioned the loose pearls, Helen tried to justify to herself her acceptance of the extra $5.

After all, it would no more than pay for their share of the dinner at Shirley's the other night. It was to have been a Dutch treat, but Carrie and Lawrence had hurried off to catch their train, leaving Warren to pay the bill.

And the theater tickets for "The Lurid Trail" that Warren had bought in advance. They had not even offered to pay for those—yet it was Carrie who had suggested the party.

"There, these are my twenty," Carrie wrapped them in tissue paper, calmly appropriating the odd pearl.

"It's half-past 9," came Lawrence's warning call from the library.

"Yes, we'll be right in." Then taking up her wrap from the bed, "We must get that 10:15—the 11 makes us so late."

Pausing to apply some powder, Carrie complacently adjusted her pearls.

"Look at my purchase!" as they entered the library. "I found Helen had two strands—and I just made her let me have one. Aren't they wonderful?"

"They're all right for the money," conceded Warren. "But I'm not keen on imitation pearls."

"Everybody wears them now. Even Mrs. Crofts keeps hers in the safe and wears the imitations she got in Paris."

"Those are good looking." Lawrence put down his cigar to examine the pearls as Carrie stooped over his chair.

"Merwin said only an expert could tell 'em from the real thing. They were a sample lot he got from Paris," confirmed Warren.

"Yes, Helen told me she had to get three strands to make two. They're just the right length now. And I never heard of such a bargain."

"Well, I don't take much stock in imitation pearls. I never wanted Helen to wear them—but I guess they're worth $10 just to play with."

"Ten?" shrilled Carrie.

"Twenty for the two strands—ten apiece. Of course Merwin turned them over at cost."

"Ten!" with scornful emphasis. "Well, Helen, that's an easy way to make $5—but I wouldn't think even you'd have the nerve to—"

"I didn't want you to take them," flared Helen, her face aflame. "But you insisted—you made me—"

"What's this about making $5?" demanded Warren sternly.

"She charged me fifteen! And you just said—"

"I didn't dream she'd want them—she had a string! I never ask the price of her things—why must she always ask me?" defied Helen tumultuously. "If she does—I—don't intend to tell her the truth."

"So that's your excuse for making money out of your family," sneered Carrie.

"I told you not to take them—I wanted them for Mrs. Stevens."

"Yes, you'd probably have made more out of her," derisively.

"You know that's not true!" quivering with indignation.

Then darting into her bedroom, she flew back with Carrie's money.

"There!" flinging the bills at her. "Never again ask me what anything costs—for I'll never tell you the truth."

"Don't worry," with a hateful laugh. "If it's anything I want to buy—I'll get the price from Warren—not from you," coolly taking the $5 bill and leaving the ten on the table.

"We'll have to hurry to make that train. You two can settle this some other time," interrupted Lawrence with an embarrassed laugh. "I'll go on down and flag a taxi," glad of an excuse to escape.

Warren, who had been ominously silent, now turned to his sister with an explosive:

"You're dead right, Carrie. I'm thoroughly ashamed of Helen, and I think she's ashamed of herself."

"I'm not!" goaded to a reckless revolt. "She's no right to be always quizzing me about what I pay for things. And as for that $5—she owes it to us many times over!"

"Just how do you make that out?" Carrie's voice was acid.

"How about that Dutch treat dinner we paid for—and the tickets for 'The Lurid Trail?' And that time we went to the Follies—it's always Warren who pays. You never keep up your end. Lawrence would—but you won't let him!"

"That's about enough from you." Warren stepped menacingly forward. Then to Carrie, who was livid. "Don't listen to her—she doesn't mean it."

"I mean every word of it!" in flaming defiance. "And more, too!"

Then, her courage suddenly deserting her, Helen dropped on the couch, her scorching face in the pillows.

She heard Warren's muttered apology as he followed his sister to the door.

An excruciating silence. Then his returning footsteps—heavy, wrathful. Nearer and nearer they came to the couch.

"That was a fine deal you tried to pull off! I should think you'd feel pretty cheap."

Helen could have screamed with helpless rage and mortification.

"I told you how it happened," confronting him. "She forced me into it—I didn't want her to have them! Every word I said about her is true—she's always sponging on you."

"What's that got to do with it? How the devil does that excuse—"

"I'm not trying to excuse anything," hysterically. "Every time she comes here—you both manage to put me in the wrong! You always—"

"Put you in the wrong?" he snorted. "You balled things up for yourself trying to put over a crooked deal—now you set up a whine because you got caught."

Then, with savage contempt, as he strode from the room:

"Next time you need any money—ask me for it. Don't try to make it off the family or your friends!"

Some Big Taxes.

James Stillman left $40,338,121. His heirs get $24,287,639. In between went $12,354,238 for inheritance taxes—State and national—and $3,746,242 for administration and accounting, income tax and New York State real estate tax. When more than 40 per cent of an estate disappears en route from the decedent to his heirs, it must be concluded that the crossing of the Styx is an expensive journey.

The Stillman estate may be the most conspicuous example of inheritance tax burden, but it is by no means the only one. The Woolworth estate was obliged to mortgage the Woolworth building to pay its inheritance taxes. The estate of a large California landed proprietor is unable to mortgage his possessions for enough cash to meet the inheritance taxes, and the estate is in danger of complete forfeiture. Now comes the disclosure of difficulties encountered by the executors of the will of the late Frank A. Sayles of Pawtucket, who at the time of his death on March 9, 1920, was the wealthiest citizen of Rhode Island.

Mr. Sayles is popularly supposed to have left about $70,000,000. This is probably a generous exaggeration. In Providence and Pawtucket banking circles his estate is estimated to have had a value of $38,000,000 to $40,000,000 at the time of his death, or enough to saddle his executors with a $10,000,000 Federal estate tax liability. Already the estate has paid an inheritance tax of $1,050,000 to the State of Rhode Island. The Sayles fortune was invested in the great finishing plants at Saylesville and Phillipsdale, R. I., the largest organization of its kind in the world, and in other textile and chemical plants, public utilities and banks. As usual in estates of such magnitude, cash represented only a very modest percentage of the total value. Nevertheless, it is incumbent upon the executors to raise $11,000,000 cash for taxes in a year.—[Boston News Bureau.

Fond Memories.

The director, who has a reputation for being rather harsh and overbearing in his methods, was giving his leading man a tongue lashing that fairly turned the atmosphere blue. Through it all, however, the victim leaned gracefully against the wall and smiled happily.

"What the deuce are you grinning about?" barked the director. "Do you like to be cursed?"

"Why, yes, I rather enjoy it," chuckled the actor. "It recalls the good old days, you know, when I played Uncle Tom and was beaten to death every night by Simon Legree."—[Film Fun.

Mixed Metaphors.

Among the humors of the campaign for woman's suffrage is the following "bull" which we may remark is about as good as anything in this line ever perpetrated by one of the opposing sex. Indignant over something, we forgot exactly what, a suffragist once exclaimed: "This action is almost as if the Senate had hurled its glove into the teeth of the advancing wave that is sounding the clarion of equal rights."—Boston Transcript.

The Dark Secret

BY LUCIAN CARY.

MANY people would see nothing queer in the way the Gannetts live. But faculty people know precisely what an assistant professor's salary comes to, and what it will buy and all. The faculty wives agree that Mrs. Gannett is too well dressed. Mrs. Bender told Mrs. Stewart that she knew for a fact that Dorothy Gannett made all her own clothes.

"They don't look it," Mrs. Stewart said.

"I have seen her making them," Mrs. Bender said firmly.

Mrs. Bender likes the Gannetts, and always defends them. She knows that Dorothy Gannett has a half-time maid, a middle-aged woman who comes in at 8 o'clock every morning except Sunday and does the dishes and makes the beds and gets luncheon, a woman who charges 30 cents an hour, and even Mrs. Bender admits that this person's wages must come to nearly $8 a week.

"Besides," Mrs. Stewart continued, "do you know what one of the Gannett twins told my little girl just before they went away for the summer? I heard him say to Alicia: 'My father is going to buy a second-hand car this summer. An' not any flivver either.' That's what he said."

"Children do talk," Mrs. Bender countered.

"Yes," Mrs. Stewart admitted, "and sometimes they say things."

Mrs. Bender sighed. "Dorothy Gannett is very clever," she said.

"I don't believe she's so clever. And any way I'm tired of hearing it." Mrs. Stewart spoke with the acidity of one to whom Dorothy Gannett had been held up as a model once too often.

"I think," she continued, "that there's some simple explanation. I think somebody died and left them money. You can't deny that they didn't use to seem so prosperous. It can't be that she's such a clever manager. If it was that, why they'd have lived the way they do now all the time. But I remember a year ago this commencement, when Dorothy Gannett came to the president's reception in the very same dress she'd worn to every president's reception she ever went to. And this year!"

Mrs. Stewart raised her eyebrows and shook her head by way of describing the dress Dorothy had worn.

"It's come since a year ago this last commencement. I can remember."

Mrs. Stewart's faith in her memory is entirely justified. Dorothy Gannett did wear the same dress to six annual president's receptions, a dress of pale-green crepe de chine that was part of her trousseau. But the seventh year she appeared in a daringly simple frock of midnight-blue velvet trimmed with silver, a dress that she had made herself, but nevertheless a dress that amply justified Mrs. Stewart's suspicion that she hadn't a dress that was distinctly handsomer than any other dress there.

For six years Dorothy Gannett did all her housekeeping with her own hands, except for a woman, who came in one day a week to do the washing and scrub the kitchen floor, and not always that. This last year Dorothy has paid quite $8 a week for the part-time maid who does them out, they say in Chelsea. And there have been other extravagances that nobody knows about. Nobody except the Gannetts knows, for instance, that Trumbell Gannett has recently subscribed to three expensive technical journals.

Obviously Mrs. Stewart's suspicions are not without reason. Clever as Dorothy Gannett is, she is not clever enough to achieve all this on the salary of an assistant professor in the State University of Monroe.

Not with the price of twins what it is today.

Which brings us to the $500.

The idea of the $500 began to occupy Trumbull Gannett's mind on a Saturday afternoon in June, the very Saturday of the president's reception at which Dorothy Gannett wore the crepe de chine dress for the sixth time.

The Gannetts lived in a small, old-fashioned, one-story house. When the twins came, the spare bedroom that Trumbull Gannett had used for a study became a nursery. He made the loft his own with bookshelves, a kitchen chair, a pine table, and an old student's lamp. Twins really ought not to happen in a professor's family unless his wife has money of her own and statistics show that they seldom do.

But the twins did happen to the Gannetts.

Trumbull Gannett is in the engineering school, hardly 30 years old, and his specialty is gasoline-engine practice. It is a useful specialty, judging by the number of students who wish nowadays to study the subject. But it would be wrong to suppose that Trumbull Gannett is any less a professor for professing a subject that is popularly supposed to be useful. He isn't.

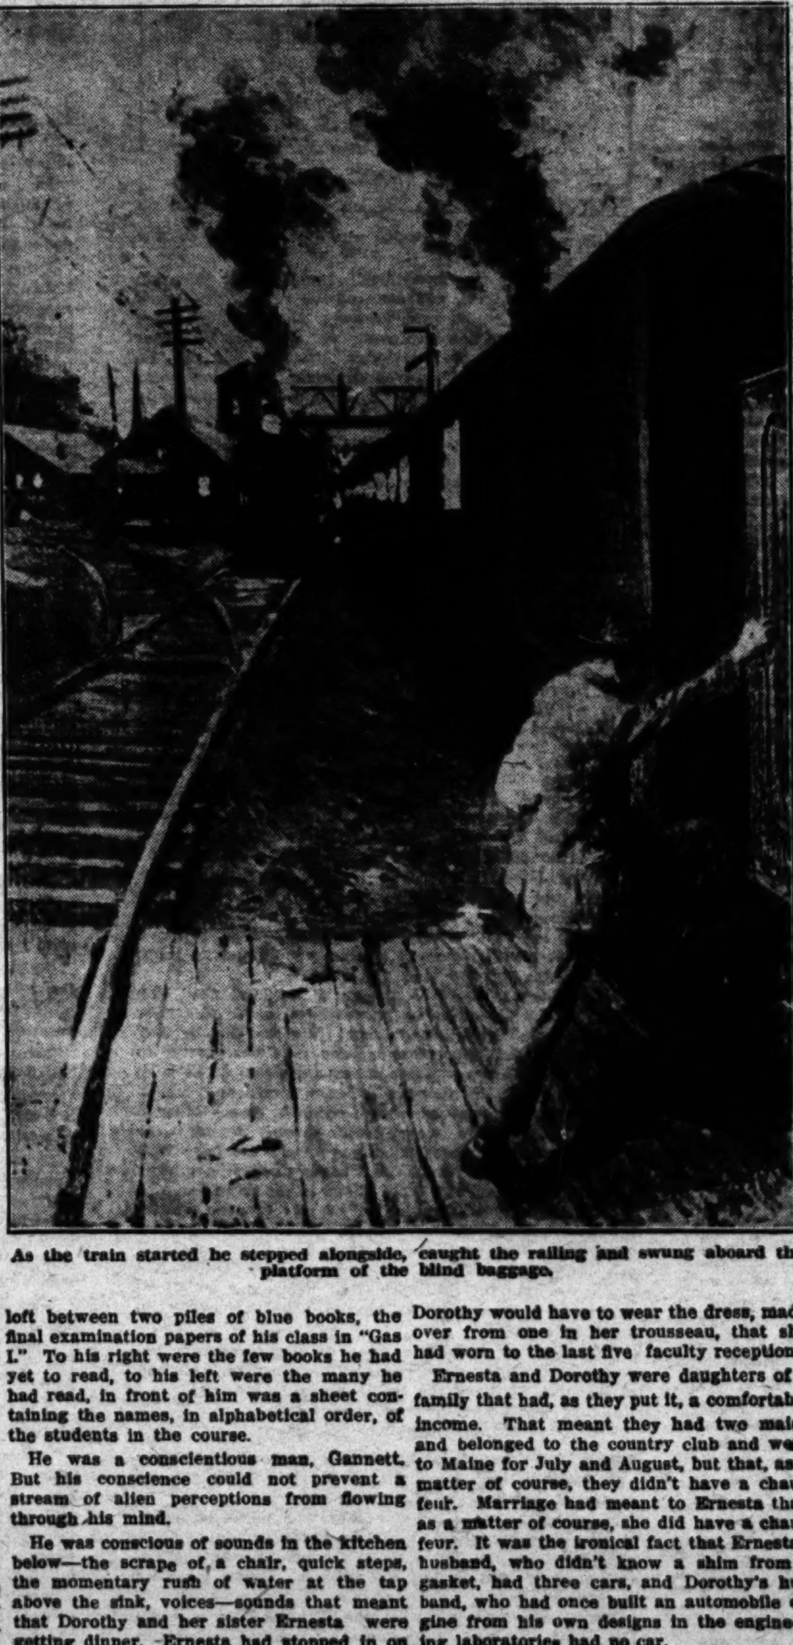
The popularity of his courses means that he has more papers to correct, that's all. Thus on this Saturday afternoon in June when the plot began to take shape in Trumbull Gannett's mind, professors of Latin and professors of comparative literature and professors of medieval history were playing tennis on the faculty courts while Trumbull Gannett sat at his work-table in the loft between two piles of blue books, the final examination papers of his class in "Gas I." To his right were the few books he had yet to read, to his left were the many he had read, in front of him was a sheet containing the names, in alphabetical order, of the students in the course.

He was a conscientious man, Gannett. But his conscience could not prevent a stream of alien perceptions from flowing through his mind.

He was conscious of sounds in the kitchen below—the scrape of a chair, quick steps, the momentary rush of water at the tap above the sink, voices—sounds that meant that Dorothy and her sister Ernesta were getting dinner. Ernesta had stopped in on her way from California two days earlier and had invited Dorothy and the twins to go to Cape Cod with her for the summer. (Summer is a period when professors get no salary.)

He was pleasantly aware that when he finished marking the examination books he could take half an hour in which to reread the reports on Jorgenson's heavy-oil engine. Jorgenson was believed to have solved the problem of designing a light-weight, high-speed engine that would drive a car as far on 6 cents' worth of crude oil as the present models will go on 30 cents' worth of gasoline. (Jorgenson would undoubtedly be a millionaire.)

He was unpleasantly aware that after dinner he would have to get into the dress clothes he had worn for the last eight years and go to the annual reception at the president's house, and he wasn't at all sure that he had a clean white tie and if he didn't Dorothy would have to wash and iron one for him and he was absolutely sure that Dorothy would have to wear the dress, made over from one in her trousseau, that she had worn to the last five faculty receptions.



As the train started he stepped alongside, caught the railing and swung aboard the platform of the blind baggage.

Ernesta and Dorothy were daughters of a family that had, as they put it, a comfortable income. That meant they had two maids and belonged to the country club and went to Maine for July and August, but that, as a matter of course, they didn't have a chauffeur. Marriage had meant to Ernesta that, as a matter of course, she did have a chauffeur. It was the ironical fact that Ernesta's husband, who didn't know a shim from a gasket, had three cars, and Dorothy's husband, who had once built an automobile engine from his own designs in the engineering laboratories had no car.

Prof. Gannett did not perceive that all these memories and associations had a common starting point—that, indeed, they all revolved around one question, the question of how to pay one's bills though a college professor. It was a complete surprise to him when his hand, having laid down the last of the blue books, reached for a slip of paper, and that, instead of opening the report on Jorgenson's engine, he began to do simple sums in arithmetic.

He did sums for fifteen minutes, and being an engineer he could do a sum in a jiffy. It took him about three minutes of adding and subtracting to discover that when he had collected his last salary check of the year and bought Dorothy's ticket and berth to Cape Cod he would be $500 behind. By the merest chance, he had that day received an invitation to teach in the six weeks' summer session. If he accepted, he would be paid $300. But he would be very lucky and very economical indeed, if the $300 left anything over after he had paid his summer expenses and three months' house rent at $40 a month and sent Dorothy enough money to come back on. Within four minutes Prof. Gannett had discovered that he would be just about $500 behind if he taught in the summer session. The fact is, he had known it all the time.

Where could he cut down?

Professors are quite generally understood to know nothing of money. Prof. Gannett went over and over the details of his expenditure without arriving at any solution of the problem. His mind was perfectly competent to deal with such a problem as how to secure high torque at low speed in a gasoline motor, but it was incapable of the decisive stroke with which any business man would have settled so glaring a discrepancy between income and outgo. He was no nearer a solution when the dinner bell tinkled. He was apparently no nearer when he was adjusting the white tie that Dorothy had laundered for him at the last moment. And he was certainly no nearer when he shook hands with the president of the university for the sixth time in six years. His mind continued to consider the sum of $500. The idea of $500 kept popping into his mind as if regularly forced there by a mechanical device, as a camshaft opens an intake valve, irresistibly, regularly, rhythmically.

When he and Dorothy were going to bed afterward, he was preoccupied with the $500. Dorothy tentatively introduced the subject of money. "Oh, Tom," she said suddenly—she had a habit of calling him Tom because the name Trumbull sounded so formal—"Oh, Tom," she said, apropos of nothing at all, "aren't we terribly behind?"

Trumbull shook his head.

"No," he said. "No, not terribly. We're close to the edge, of course. We always are, But I'm going to teach in the summer session—we'll pull out all right. We always do."

It was a lie. It was a revealing lie. It revealed to Trumbull Gannett that he was not going to teach in the summer session. The moment Dorothy was out of town he was going to do something else, something that would actually bring him $500. He didn't know what it would be. But it would be something. He would get that $500 if he had to use a blackjack. He clenched his large, strong hands. He would wring that $500 from however reluctant a world.

With an effort he unclenched his hands. He didn't want Dorothy to see that gesture. He must not let her know how serious the situation was.

He stroked her hair gently. She looked tragically worn. She lived the life of a charwoman, really. She was a servant, doing the hard physical labor of the household. He put his arm around her shoulders and kissed her. She turned and rested her head on his shoulder, leaned on him.

"Don't think about money," he said. "Don't think about money all summer. Forget it, won't you?"

"I wish you were going too," she said wistfully. "I hate to be away from you all summer—I never have been."

"We won't ever do it again," Trumbull Gannett assured her.

Trumbull Gannett walked slowly back from the railway station after putting Dorothy and Ernesta and the twins aboard the train for the East. He felt very much alone. He was very tired. He wished more than anything else that he could have gone to Cape Cod with Dorothy and the children. He would like to laze away a summer on a sunny beach, and take the twins clamming, and sail a boat. The long summer vacation was one of the special privileges of the college professor. It was expected partly to make up for his small income. But actually he couldn't afford to take a vacation. He had always taught in the summer session for six weeks and spent the remaining six weeks in the engineering laboratories at work on his heavy-oil engine. But you couldn't work out a heavy-oil engine in six weeks of the year. A job like that needed all your time—you needed to work on it con-doctor, who had not been sent for. He began to tell me that it would be absolutely necessary to have an operation, to save my life, that I might improve a little temporarily, but that it would be worse than ever later on. He then proposed "that he show me how to use the catheter—this he had never done before, and now that I could use it myself without his showing I looked upon him almost as an intruder, but reluctantly consented. His performance, which I now watched with skepticism, tried to show me that I was full of pus, and that an operation was absolutely necessary. It is too long to relate, but I am absolutely sure it was a make-believe. I would not consent to an operation.

"I continued to improve, and was happy to think I was at last rid of him. But on the following day he called again, repeated what he had said the day before, and added that the prostate gland was becoming cancerous, and the longer I delayed the more dangerous it would be, and talked so frightfully that I, half dazed, reluctantly consented to go to the hospital. However, just before he came around to take me to the hospital I had a passage of urine without the use of the catheter, so when he came I told him that I had concluded not to go. After more warnings and admonitions he left without me.

"After two or three days more I threw the catheter away, and by nature's process my improvement was almost miraculous. The prostate gland didn't bother me any more at all.

"In about a month the doctor sent me a bill for $16 for that examination—I had paid him for his numerous calls. I sent him $5 more, leaving a bill of $11. He has hounded me around month after month with letters. Finally he placed it in the hands of a collector, who wrote me two threatening letters."

If this man had been given a hot bath, and hot fomentations over the bladder, he would have been all right in a few hours.

Honorable physicians will join with me in denouncing such medical scoundrels, who disgrace what should be a noble profession. Such men harm the profession, by confirming people in the belief that safety lies in keeping away from physicians, hospitals, trained nurses and "specialists."

WHEN the revolting Kronstadt garrison arrived at the Finnish border station they were half starved, but healthy. Ten days of American diet, with a surplus of fats and white flour, put many of them on the sick list, and their diet had to be changed.

They fell out of the fire into the frying pan.

"Public Welfare."

THE new public welfare bill was introduced in Congress by Senator Kenyon of Iowa and Representative Fess of Ohio.

The bill establishes a department of public welfare, to be headed by a Cabinet officer, to be known as the Secretary of Public Welfare.

The divisions in the department are to be:

"Education: Under this are grouped all the different functions now exercised by many of the departments of the government with respect to education.

"Public welfare: Likewise are grouped here the different activities of the government with respect to public health.

"Social service: Has general charge of all matters pertaining to social welfare, such as the children's bureau.

"Veterans' service: Under this are coordinated all the different activities of the government dealing in any way with the war veterans. Under this department will be the war risk insurance and vocational training.

"Officers abolished under the bill and their functions absorbed in the new department are: Director of war risk insurance; Surgeon-General of Public Health Service; Commissioner of Education; chief of Children's Bureau! Federal board for vocational education; board of managers of the national home for disabled volunteer soldiers."

This is the long-looked-for "health department" bill, for which the Medical Trust has been working for years.

It is camouflaged under the new name of "welfare." "Health" does not sound good to the people, since they have learned, by bitter experience, of the workings of "health departments."

The new bill would place the health and [illegible]

Figs.

I RECEIVED a sample package of dried black figs from Miss B. M. Aaron of 839 North Commerce street, Stockton, Cal. They are sun dried, from a home garden, scalded, rinsed and passed through a hot oven. They are so sweet that some think they must have been dipped in sugar, which is not so. The skins are very thin and tender. California figs usually have thick skins.

Figs are a unique fruit, in that they contain no acid, therefore may be eaten in combinations that are not permissible for other fruits. They are rich in the mineral elements, especially sodium and chlorine, which together form chloride of sodium, or table salt. Eaten thus, in foods, is the only way in which salt can be utilized by the body. When, taken in the inorganic form, as table salt, it is a slow poison, and is eliminated at the expense of the kidneys.

Few fruits are so well balanced in food principles, so rich in blood-building elements, as the black fig. A little lettuce or water cress should be eaten with them to counteract the cloying sweetness. The sun-dried black fig is one of the best fruits for children, in place of candy, confectionery and starchy foods. It preserves the teeth, is easily digested, and prevents constipation. It is food and medicine alike, and should therefore be used freely in every household.

Dried figs can be made almost like fresh figs by the following method: In the evening put the desired quantity of figs, which may be consumed during the following day, in a dish, and add just enough water to cover them. After standing about twelve hours the figs will have absorbed sufficient [illegible] pared in this manner make an ideal breakfast, while the elements of nutrition are more properly balanced in the figs than in cereal foods.

Like other dried fruits, figs are usually sulphured, which is injurious. One Los Angeles firm has for years made a specialty of unsulphured black figs.

CANTILEVER SHOES
Does Your Shoe Bend Like This?

Probably not, because all ordinary shoes are made with a piece of steel embedded in the shank—the old, old method of making shoes and the easiest way.

"The thing people don't seem to understand is that the foot is a cantilever spring so made that when it is allowed to function normally it carries the body with the greatest possible ease and resilience."

Hence, the flexibility of the Cantilever Shoe makes walking easy. The arch of the shoe bends and conforms to the arch of your foot, which likewise is flexible.

The muscles of the foot, not being restrained as in stiff-shank shoes, are free to exercise and keep strong. This prevents the condition called weak arches, or flat foot, which many persons suffer with, and all wish to avoid. Unless the condition is too far advanced, the Cantilever Shoe will help greatly to correct it.

Other splendid features of Cantilever Shoes are the good heels, graceful but sensible; the toe-room, which is important; the natural lines, which follow the lines of the foot instead of compelling the foot to assume the queer shape of a shoe.

tinuously. From the first Jorgenson was bound to beat him.

Jorgenson was a mechanic who had struck out for himself, started a small engine shop, built one thing on another. He lived in overalls, in the shop, working with his hands. Jorgenson wasn't annoyed because his dress clothes were old-fashioned, shiny, too tight. Jorgenson didn't have to wear dress clothes. Jorgenson didn't lunch at the faculty club. He ate his lunch out of a tin bucket.

And as for honor—didn't all the worth-while honors go to men like Jorgenson, men in overalls? It was not the gifted Prof. Langley, who flew the first airplane, but the obscure Wright brothers, with their bicycle shop.

Trumbull Gannett paused, without consciously willing to do so, in front of the open door of an automobile repair shop. He could never pass such a shop without wishing to go in and look around. His original ambition had been to build motorcars.

Trumbull Gannett stood in the wide alley of the shop, his eyes full of dreams and his heart full of wishes. Suddenly the door of the little office at one side of the entrance opened and a workman with his coat on came out. He turned, as he passed through the door, to speak over his shoulder to some one behind him.

"I didn't have to," he was saying, not without a certain bitterness.

A large man in shirt sleeves appeared in the door of the little office. "I'll make it 75 cents an hour and time and a half for overtime," he said angrily.

"Eighty cents or nothing."

"I won't pay it," said the man in shirt sleeves.

"All right," the workman answered. "I'll go find somebody that will."

If Trumbull Gannett had been a professor of Latin he might have shrugged his shoulders and reflected cynically: "Such is the way of the machine age." But he was a professor of gas engineering, and the idea that a boy who had spent three or four years hanging around a garage and picking up tools and the tricks of the trade could earn more money in twelve months than he, who had taken a four years' course in engineering and had done two years of graduate work and eight years of teaching and used tools all his life, rather took him aback. He had perhaps known it before, but he had never realized it before.

Gannett had a sudden impulse to go back and tell the man in shirt sleeves that he would take that 75 cents an hour with time and a half for overtime. But he couldn't of course. What would the president of the university say if one of his professors spent a summer working as a mechanic in a repair shop? Logically he could hardly object to a professor's earning enough money in the summer to go on professing during the college year. But Gannett knew that the president could hardly treat the matter logically.

The small house seemed strangely empty without Dorothy and the twins. The thought of the faculty club did not entice him. He would go there to dinner but that was as much as he wanted. He was sick of professors. Mechanically he picked up the evening paper and read the headlines. He turned a page, reading idly. He saw the line "Eight Dollars a Day" over a brief paragraph. He read:

Kansas City, Kan., June 11—Wages for farm hands in the wheat country have now passed all records. Word comes from the South that harvest hands are demanding $6.50 a day and getting it. E. C. Stiles, who has 1000 acres in wheat near Pawnee City, said today that he would pay $7 a day this year and everybody welcome. Tractor hands are now getting $8 a day.

Trumbull Gannett threw down the paper and started for the faculty club. He met Wilkinson as he was going in. Wilkinson was a professor of geology. He asked Gannett if Gannett intended to teach in the summer session.

"No," Gannett heard himself say. "No, I'm going out West to study power farming. I want to see what they are actually doing in the field."

Instinctively he straightened his body, raised his head. He was taller than the average man, a little under weight, but large-boned. His hands were soft now, but they hadn't always been soft. They were large, strong hands. A week or two of hard work would put him in shape again. Hard work would do him good. He wondered how uncertain following the harvest would be. He wanted twelve weeks of work at $50 a week. Could he follow the harvest and live on $10 a week and save forty? Forty dollars a week would come to $480 for the summer—almost enough to pay all of his debts, almost enough to start even in the fall. He realized that Wilkinson was saying:

"I should think that would be very interesting—very."

Trumbull Gannett proceeded like the criminal he was. He had told one lie; why not a dozen? In two days he had rented the house for the summer season for the flat sum of $100. He wrote Dorothy as much, saying—he was not yet equal to telling her the lie direct—that he was staying at the faculty club, and thus implying that he expected to stay there all summer. He secured a pile of the club's stationery, letterheads and envelopes. He interviewed Mims, who sat behind the desk at the club and sold cigars and attended to the forwarding of mail. He had to trust Mims—there was no other way of concealing from Dorothy his absence from Monroe. And it was necessary to deceive Dorothy. He felt that Dorothy would disapprove of what he was about to do. Dorothy would endeavor to dissuade him. He did not intend to be dissuaded.

In the afternoon of June 14th Trumbull Gannett carried a small traveling bag to his locker in the engineering laboratories. When he returned to the faculty club, the bag contained a suit of khaki-colored overalls, convincingly stained with cylinder-oil and cup-grease, and a pair of heavy pliers that he had made himself, out of exactly the right steel, and a curious socket-wrench of his own design. At the club he added two of the blue chambray shirts that workmen wear, a grain sack, and the club stationery in a heavy manila envelope.

He spent the evening writing two letters to Dorothy. These he deposited with Mims, to be mailed at intervals of twenty-four hours. The first contained a check for $50, half the money he had received for the house. The second one complained, though lightly, of not having received a really satisfying letter from her. He knew in advance that Dorothy would not have time to write a long letter in the first two or three days.

At 11 o'clock he put on an old suit of clothes, with a blue shirt and a disreputable old felt hat. At a little before midnight he slipped down the stairs like a thief and into the street. He walked rapidly. The town had gone to sleep. But the street cars were still running. He avoided the main streets, cut across lots, struck the railway a hundred yards above the station.

He slipped down the tracks to a shed and, standing in the dark shadow, he opened his bag and took out the grain sack. He stuffed the overalls and the shirts and the manila envelope and the tools in it, tied the sack with a cord and threw the cheap bag away. The grain sack, with its contents, made a small bundle that could be carried under his arm or swung over his shoulder. And now, with his disreputable hat pulled down over his eyes and his bundle under his arm, in his blue shirt and his old clothes, he might safely have braved the bright lights of the station. No one would have recognized him.

The train for the West was nearly due but he didn't move. Instead he put his bundle on the ground and sat down on it and waited, as if he were reconsidering his adventure. When the train pulled in to the station, he walked slowly up to a point opposite the engine. As the train started, he stepped alongside, caught the railing and swung aboard the platform of the blind baggage. He leaned his back against the end of the car, braced his feet against the irons, pulled his hat down more firmly over his eyes. As the train gathered speed, clicking over the switches, boring into the night, something like a grin animated the face of Prof. Trumbull Gannett.

Thirty hours later, a tall young man, very pale under a thick coat of cinders, registered at the hotel in Pawnee, Kan., as T. Gannett, ate an enormous breakfast of ham and eggs, and went to bed. He slept heavily. He did not waken until noon. Then he arose, washed off some of the cinders, ate a dinner that would have staggered Dorothy Gannett, and strolled down the main street.

He had seen mile after mile of wheat that morning from his vantage point behind the tender of the express he had caught out of Omaha. He had heard nothing but wheat at dinner in the little hotel. The town was wheat mad. But T. Gannett was not sure he wanted to harvest wheat. He passed two garages with an inquiring eye. The second was the larger. He paused to look in. The place was full of flivvers awaiting repairs. The yard outside contained more flivvers and several trucks. While he stood watching a farmer drove up with a big truck to inquire if there was any chance of getting the valves ground before Saturday.

The proprietor shook his head. "No chance," he said. "No chance before the Fourth of July."

The farmer swore and moved on.

T. Gannett approached the garage man. "Are you the boss?" he asked.

"Sure," he said, "but, didn't you hear what I said just now to that fellow? We're so full up now we can't take care of our regular customers."

"I don't want any work done—I want to do some," T. Gannett said.

The boss looked at him sharply. "You a mechanic?" he asked.

"Yes," said T. Gannett.

"What's the matter with you—why aren't you workin'?"

"Just got off the train this morning—yours is the first place I've hit."

Again the boss gave him a sharp appraising glance. "I've got work all right—work for ten men. But what I'd like to know in advance is are you a real guy or ought I to put you on the gas pump'?'

"I'm a real guy," said T. Gannett.

"Can you lap in a piston?"

"Sure."

"How long'll you stay?"

"All summer—if the price is right."

"I'm payin' 75 cents an hour to real mechanics," the man admitted, "but—"

"How much for overtime?"

"We work ten hours these days—double time on Sundays."

"I'll start at that," T. Gannett said.

"When?"

"In half an hour."

"All right," said the Kansan, "you're on. What's your name'?'

"T. Gannett."

"Tom."

"Tom," said Prof. Trumbull Gannett without a flicker.

"My name's Smith," the boss said.

That night Prof. Gannett sent the first letter on to Mims to be remailed to Dorothy and wired Mims his new address.

For a week T. Gannett suffered all the tortures that await the man who is not accustomed to physical labor. His hands were bruised, blistered, skinned; his fingernails were split and broken; he ached as if he had been beaten with a club. Those first nights he took off his shoes and dropped on the bed, and slept—too tired to undress. But gradually his hands hardened, the soreness left his body, he adjusted himself to his task.

The unaccustomed exertion came easier. He no longer gritted his teeth when he applied a wrench to a frozen stud. He swung the weight of his body against it easily, confidently. He had ceased seriously to try to get the grease out of his skin. It was enough if his hands did not smudge the paper when he wrote to Dorothy. He worked ten hours a day seven days a week.

After three weeks he began actually to enjoy himself. One night he drove twenty miles out into the dusty country with a wrecking-car to bring in a disabled machine. It was one of those July nights when westerners say they can hear the corn grow—one of those still hot nights when no one can sleep happily indoors. But the breeze that came over the the dash of the flying car cooled his sweating body. He hoisted the wreck with a swing. He liked it. He liked the feel of his own physical strength.

In the weeks following he often drove the wrecking-car at night, after his day's work. Sometimes he did emergency repairs by the light of a flaring gasoline torch, sometimes with only the light of the harvest moon coming up out of the wheat stubble like a great red wafer. No member of the faculty at Monroe would have recognized him in his grease-stained overalls, his crumpled felt hat, with the the cud of tobacco in his cheek. His manner, his walk, his speech had all changed. He was developing something very like a second personality—rougher, sturdier, happier than his old one.

Not until the first days of September, after nine weeks of freedom, did the thought of the $500 again obsess him. He had been averaging $60 a week, but it wasn't enough. He had had to spend twenty. Most of the twenty went for food. He ate as he had never eaten before. There was no controlling such an appetite as he had for food. It had to be satisfied.

Dorothy would be back in Monroe on the twentieth. He must be there first. He had safely only two weeks more in which to make that $500. The work was already slacking and he had less than $400 in the money-belt next his skin. The loss of a single Sunday at double time would cut down his week's wages by $15. He wouldn't make it. And he had to make it. He had set his heart on making that $500 clear, on arriving in Monroe with that $500 in cash. He began to hang around the garage after supper whether there was emergency work or not. He wasn't going to miss a trip into the country, with its extra pay.

One afternoon, just as he was washing up for supper, the telephone rang. Somebody was in trouble out on the Pawnee road, five miles west. The wrecking-car was away on a trip, but Gannett assured the man he'd be out in half an hour. He threw a tow-rope into the boss's flivver, cranked it, and started west in a cloud of dust.

The wrecked car proved to be a 1918 Fortner six. The farmer who owned it had tried to turn a sharp corner at twenty miles an hour and struck a telephone pole head-on. The impact had sent him through the windshield and dropped him astride the hood. His face was cut up by broken glass, but his only other injuries were to his temper. The car looked a complete wreck at first glance. The telephone pole fitted neatly between the spring horns. The radiator was dished. The front axle had been bent in a semicircle. There was no telling whether the motor had been driven back on the frame or not.

"How long will it take to get it repaired?" the man asked.

"Couple of weeks."

"Couple of weeks!" the man repeated. "I need it tomorrow. I've got to have it by Saturday. I'm going on a trip Saturday. Promised to take the whole family to Kansas City."

T. Gannett shook his head.

"By Monday then?"

"Couldn't be done—if you go in this car, you'll wait two weeks."

"Guess I'd better get me a new car," the man said. "Can't disappoint the family when I've just put 9000 bushels in the elevator."

"Guess you'd better then," T. Gannett said. He had hooked up the tow-rope and pulled the Fortner off the telephone pole. But he couldn't figure any way to haul it into Pawnee City. The boss's flivver had no crane and the Fortner was in no condition to run on its own front wheels. He would have to come back with the wrecking-car.

"What'll it cost to fix her up

T. Gannett shook his head.

"May be $300—may be $500. You can't tell until it's torn down."

"What's your guess?"

"My guess is that there's about ten days' work on it—they charge you $1.25 an hour for that—say $125—and then anywhere from $150 to $300 or $400 for new parts. A new radiator alone will cost you better than a hundred."

"It isn't worth fixing."

"Sure, the Fortner is a good car."

"It's a hell of a car," the man said. His cuts had begun to sting him.

"I'll take a chance on it if you'll sell it cheap."

"How cheap?"

"I'll give you a hundred for it as it stands."

"Make it a hundred and fifty."

T. Gannett shook his head firmly.

"Nope," he said.

"Split the difference?"

"Nope," said T. Gannett. With forced calm he cranked the flivver and got in. He had never bargained before. This bargain mattered. But if he was going to bargain—he was going to bargain. He wasn't going to be beaten down by a farmer who had harvested $20,000 worth of wheat.

"All right," said the man. "I'll take you—$100 will buy a couple of spare tires for my new car."

T. Gannett got out of the flivver, opened his money-belt, and abstracted five twenties.

"Done," he said briefly.

He came back two hours later with the wrecking-car. He had an arrangement with Smith by which he was to repair the car in the shop in his own time. The next morning he was up at 5 o'clock to tear the car down and learn just how badly it had been injured. The motor was happily all there. By 10 o'clock Gannett was able to make a complete list of parts and wire to Kansas City. Parts were not so scarce then as they became a year later, he got them all within a week. He continued to do his ten hours' stint for Smith's garage. At night he did six or seven hours more on the Fortner. After a week of this he had to take a Sunday morning off for sleep. But he finished the job on the fifteenth of September. He had spent $134.93 for parts. The car was as good as it had ever been, perhaps better; it lacked only painting. T. Gannett hadn't time to paint it. He offered it for sale as it was for $800. Smith said he would give $600. T. Gannett was in a hurry, but he told Smith to come again. Smith offered $650. Two days later T. Gannett sold the Fortner for $750 to a real estate agent who had the cash.

T. Gannett looked at his watch. He could catch the noon train for Kansas City if he hurried. He had won. He had made his $500 on the car alone. He had more than $500 besides. He needn't ride the blind baggage. He could treat himself to a berth in the Pullman. He would arrive in Monroe with $900—in bills.

Smith was so outraged at T. Gannett for quitting that he had to tell Smith the truth.

Smith looked at T. Gannett and did not smile. He was very much in earnest.

CARE OF THE BODY.

so badly by this powerful light that they have refused to heal, though various treatments have been given in outward applications. The bone trouble has practically been overcome, not through any doctor's treatment, but by simple, out-of-door living, sensible diet and nature's curative powers, when let alone.

"In reviewing this case, the X-ray part of which dates back a number of years, it seems to me that this person has been made the victim of medical experiments, and left with these burning, itching and uncomfortable 'brands' of their treatment, which are really a handicap to her in making her way in the world. Do you not think, if justice was meted out to this person, that the institution responsible for these burns should in some manner compensate this person, in a monetary manner, if it can't otherwise?"

As I have frequently said, the X-ray is dangerous, even in the hands of an expert.

It is futile to attempt to recover damages from an M. D. They pay $10 a year to a State institution, which guarantees them against suits for malpractice.

The people seem to like this sort of thing.

A Hard Experience.

A MAN 73 years of age sends me this letter, which illustrates a mode of action on part of a certain unworthy class of physicians that is reprehensible, but all too common. It is an example of letters I receive almost daily:

"Last October I got wet and chilly, and had difficulty in passing urine. I had never been troubled before. A doctor was called and he inserted a catheter, giving me relief, but insisted on an operation, and kept the catheter constantly inserted for twenty or twenty-one days. I did not believe an operation was necessary, but he was determined. He refused to show me how to use the catheter, or allow me to use it myself, nor would he hear of any mode of treatment except an operation. Finally, my urine became bloody and it was painful for me to move around. I could not pass urine at night without getting up and walking the floor for an hour or two, and then the urine was very bloody. Indeed, it was becoming most agonizing and terrible.

"Meanwhile, this physician had insisted upon an examination of the kidneys. He would dig and clasp me around in the small of the back until I had to wince, but I told him my kidneys were all right, and they were.

"The last day of using the catheter, when I was frightened, having walked the floor the previous night with pain and agony, he insisted that I should go through that examination of the kidneys, and fearful of his displeasure, and not wanting to be dug and squeezed in the loins any more, and racked with pain, I consented, thinking it was a simple thing that would cost $2 or $3, but his bill was $16, for about half an hour's work. I was forced into the examination. His diagnosis was 'bad condition' of the kidneys, but another skillful physician two or three days later, after carefully examining my urine, declared my kidneys to be all right. At the close of the examination at his office, I pleaded earnestly not to be taken to the hospital to be operated upon, but to no effect. Then I refused.

"I went home, took out the catheter, felt easy and comfortable and happier than I had been in many a day. After five or six hours I inserted the catheter myself, without any trouble, and had urinal passage without bloodshed, the first for a long time, and you cannot imagine a happier person. The next day I materially improved.

"On the following day around came the

Mecca—California and Egypt—A Contrast.

BY DUDLEY S. CORLETT.

MECCA! Is it not a word that redounds with romance? Partly, no doubt, because it is the one spot on earth that is still forbidden to the ubiquitous tourist. None but a Mussulman may tread its streets, or even approach its walls on pain of death. As one thinks of this strange city of a savage land, one remembers the thrills one experienced in reading that wonderful account of Sir Richard Burton's adventure in penetrating to the Holy City of the Hedjaz. Its white domes and minarets rising from the surrounding desert; its old mosques hoary with legend and haloed with reverence, and finally the mysterious "Black Stone" hidden within its covering of rare rugs. How well Burton describes the teeming population of its narrow streets, the merchants of its crowded bazaars, and the fascinating types of natives drawn from all parts of the Orient to gain the coveted "merit" of having visited the birth and burial places of their prophet, Mohammed the Blessed. Greater "merit" there is if Allah so wills that they die there and are buried in the holy soil, be the grave ever so humble and far from their home.

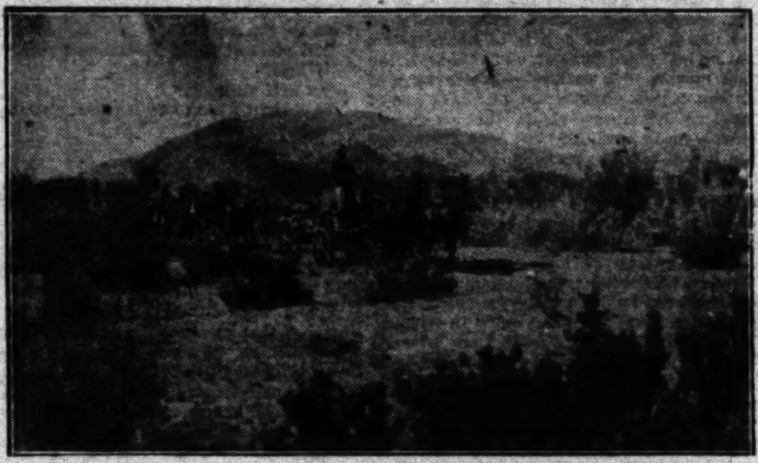
We have seen aged men setting out on the pilgrimage from their village in Upper Egypt with no baggage, save their shroud, wrapped up in a cloth hung over their lean shoulders. These travel by way of the old town of Quenna, near Luxor, famous for the beauty of its dancing girls and the license of its amusements. Here the Faithful partook of the last of the pleasures of the world before setting out over the burning desert to the port of Kossier, where they would embark in an overcrowded dhow to cross the shark-swarming, sweltering Red Sea to Arabia.

Even a Sip of the Water From the Holy Wells is Highly Treasured.

WITH what rejoicing do they return after an absence of a year, when they have never before been away from their village for more than a day at a time? There are flags and music to greet the returned pilgrim, and the whole village hastens to kiss the holy one's hands, feet or the edge of his robe. What transient delight it is to gaze on the earth he has brought back in a tiny bottle from the streets of the Holy City, or to drink a little water from the holy wells, a sure cure for the deadliest ailment. And with what pride the pilgrim binds on his turban the band of green cloth, or decorates the white walls of his house with crudely painted pictures of the sights he saw upon the journey.

Again we have met boys from the west coast of Africa walking all across the continent with not even a rag upon their persons, intent on reaching Mecca—a pilgrimage that would cost them seven years of wandering. For they must stop here and there to work for their food and to lay by a little store to pay for their passage across the sea. In India we have seen the rich Mussulman merchant setting forth with pomp and ceremony and his poor brother from the far Himalayas with naught but a staff and a begging bowl. Both set forth to gain great merit for their future happiness in the next life, and one wonders which reaps the greatest reward?

From Cairo we have seen that spectacular procession of the Holy Carpet setting forth on its pilgrimage to Mecca. The motley crowds of white-robed pilgrims; the weird music of drum and fife; the soldiers mounted on their fine Arab steeds; the dervishes in fanatical excess cutting themselves till they are covered with blood of zeal. And finally the stately camel, gorgeously decorated, treading softly, with his feather-tipped nose carried high above the crowd and a supercilious sneer curving his loose lips. For does he not carry the precious rug of rare pattern, destined to cover the Prophet's tomb in holy Medina?



A caravan of California.

This great caravan slowly journeys by way of the ancient town of Suez and crosses the spot where once the chariots of the Pharaoh pursuing the Israelites were overwhelmed by the returning tide. They encamp beside the very wells, the bitter waters of which Moses made sweet by casting in certain bark of trees. Later on they join forces with a similar caravan from Syria, bearing the Sacred Carpet of Damascus. Joined, the two streams of humanity swell into a mighty concourse of pilgrims. All are uplifted by the same spirit of exaltation so that the trials and tribulations of the long and arduous journey over the terrible deserts are bravely overcome. The strong help the weak; the rich the poor; whilst those of stout heart cheer on those of the frailer soul. All weariness is forgotten as they approach their goal; the emptiness of their stomachs is filled with religious zeal, and the thirst of their throats is slaked by songs of praise to Allah the Compassionate.

Mecca, California, is Striking Contrast to Ancient City.

IN OMDURMAN we met the last surviving son of the famous Mahdi, who for so long ruled the Soudan as the Prophet of God. Our natural sympathy with the Sons of Islam won for us his friendship and a promise that he would bring us back a present from Mecca, whither he was bound on a pilgrimage. A year later we traveled up the Nile together, and, true to his word, he presented us with a precious Islamic rosary of black coral from the Red Sea, that he had worn all the way back from Mecca. Now it was this very rosary of the ninety-nine attributes of Allah that we took with us on starting forth one spring morning recently on a pilgrimage of our own to Mecca.

Are we then of the Faithful? For how else could we hope to reach the Holy City? No, it was not necessary to either disguise our religion or our person, for this Mecca lies in the desert of California. We rode not on a lordly camel, gay with scarlet trappings, soft-footed and sleek, but in an automobile, its padded feet fleeter than the camel's and almost as silent, save when the unwelcome sound of a puncture greeted our ears. The first part of the journey corresponded to the Valley of the Nile, save that Egypt's dusty paths were replaced by splendid boulevards of smooth asphalt, shaded with avenues of pepper trees, eucalyptus, or camphor. Here were the same orange orchards laden with golden fruit and intoxicating the air with the scent of their blossoms. The waters of irrigation flowed down the furrows, making verdant the fields of alfalfa and fruitful the vineyards and fruit trees. Even as the deserts of Arabia are made by the toil of man and the waters of rivers to bring forth abundantly, so do the thirsty lands of California.

For 100 miles in an unbroken stretch of astounding fertility and scientific care stretched this wonderful valley, when suddenly we debouched onto the dusty desert of desolation, a scene of barren rocks and sterile sand. In the oasis of Palm Springs we found our first camp. The date palms of an Arabian oasis were replaced by the fan-leaved Washingtonia filifera, indigenous to these deserts. Up the narrow canyon, down which runs a grateful stream of crystal water, the palms cluster, standing like shepherds wrapped in ragged robes. For, unlike most palms, they do not shed their leaves, which cover their trunks with a protecting wrapper of straw-colored leaves against the burning sun and hot winds of summer. On either side of this fascinating canyon abruptly rise walls of granite, their embattled crests silhouetted against the turquoise of the cloudless sky. On the one side these walls glow with a thousand soft tints of lilac, rose, purple and gold. On the other, where the sun blazes, the rocks shine with a silver-gray, glistening in the brilliant atmosphere.

Many days could we have dreamed in this fascinating spot, but our remorseless caravan bore us away all too soon. Southward we sped over the unpaved desert roads, the car leaping as no demented camel ever bounded in the exuberance of the musth season, when unrequited love drives him to astounding exhibitions in the evolutions of his four lanky legs, and to terrifying bubblings by the protrudence of a crimson bladder from the side of his mouth. Bruised and banged as is the rider unused to the peculiar motion of the camel's trot, it is as the gentle movement of a swan in water, compared to the mad capers of that car. First one was bumped violently against the top, only to be dashed down on the seat amongst the kitchen pans and the camp outfit.

California Desert More Sober in Color than Egyptian Wastes.

IN EGYPT the desert is a limitless expanse of gently-rolling sands of golden color, stretching as far as the eye can see in the brilliant light. These Californian deserts are of a more sober coloring, gray and brown, and bounded by abrupt ranges of barren mountains towering into the air. They remind one rather of the Tihama, or "Place of Heat," which stretches along the seaboard of the Red Sea to where the great mountains of the Yemen arise. But instead of the gum-arabic acacias, the green euphorbias and the "camel-salads" of the Arabian deserts, here one finds a far greater variety of shrubs; a carpet of bright desert-flowers, mauve, yellow and blue, and strange species of cacti. Among the burning-hot rocks or lodged in the clefts of granite cliffs, these latter vegetable survivors of the fittest find nourishment to flaunt their flowers of scarlet, magenta and saffron. Armed with forbidding armories of spears and spikes they present a formidable defense against those who would feed on their fibrous flesh or transplant them to decorate their cactus-gardens. Ball, barrel and branched, they form a striking part of the landscape. The most arresting being the ocotillo, with its slender branches covered with tiny green leaves and the tips with sprays of scarlet blossoms, savage and flaming as the desert in which it grows.

It was evening as our caravan neared the Californian town of Mecca. We passed another caravan heading north. It contained a party of Mexicans, sturdy of physique, bronzed of complexion, with that curious physiognomy of Mongolian inscrutability, brought about by the mixture of Spanish and Indian blood in their veins. Mule-drawn wagons were laden with the family goods, and there was little that was picturesque, as in the Arabian caravan.

In the far distance we saw a clump of green trees surrounding several untidy shacks and a more pretentious caravanserai. It was Mecca! We were anxious to compare this new occidental city with its ancient rival in the Orient, when it was blotted from our view. For there came a violent wind raising the desert to a sandstorm. The clouds of white dust rolled across the desolate plains, stinging our faces and parching our throats. Night had shut down when, with a last lurch, our car stopped in front of the "Caravanserie Inn." It is in these resting places in the Arabian towns that one can best see the real life of the Arabs. Within its gaunt, age-worn walls is herded a heterogenous mass of humanity. In the center of the courtyard will be hobbled a confusion of snarling camels munching their fodder; restless horses stained with the sweat and dust of the desert; vicious mules, and braying asses. All about them will be heaped piles of mysterious merchandise wrapped in rare rugs. Camped in the dark malodorous rooms surrounding the court are the owners of these animals and baggage, cooking suppers, smoking immense water pipes, or quarreling with such invective as would shock the ears of the most hardened westerner. In their dark faces will be found all the types of primitive man, representatives of all the tribes of Asia and Africa.

Instead of Ungainly Camels, Graceful Rubber Shod Automobiles Abound.

AND what found we in this caravanserai of California? Outside its portals stood some dozen automobiles, from a smart Locomobile down to the most disreputable wreck of a Ford that was still able to turn its tires without shaking to pieces. For in California everyone owns some sort of a car, just as in Arabia every Arab owns a camel or has a part share in one. Carpenters, gardeners and brick-layers, all go to their work in a "machine."

We were interested then in seeing who owned the gas-fed animals that stood in the caravanserai yard. The room we entered was brilliantly lit with electric light, and supping at white-clothed tables sat the guests.

A brown man in overalls lustily partook of a mess of beans, washed down with copious draughts of coffee, whilst at the desk a prosperous-looking person in a city suit, with a wife, enveloped in a sable cloak, loudly advertised the fact that he was motoring through from Chicago to San Diego and wanted the best accommodation. But this was already booked by the young couple eating their dinner interlarded by loving been exceedingly versatile and its investigations into both preventive and curative methods for tuberculosis have been far-reaching.

"The report shows that thirty-nine children were placed in hospitals for treatment; twelve were placed in the Preventorium at Burbank; twenty-two lectures in Spanish on the dangers of and preventive measures for tuberculosis were given to Mexicans; thirty-eight patients are deriving benefit from the occupational therapy classes at the County Hospital; 16,000 pieces of literature were distributed and forty-six sweaters were furnished to patients at the County Hospital.

"During the quarter over $19,000 was expended by the association in its work."

Yes, but how many did they cure?

Horrors of Civilization.

WHAT we call civilization has brought us to a point where the wholesale killing of our fellow-creatures has been so scientifically developed that it looks as if the entire extermination of the human race might not be an altogether wild dream of the future.

Poison gas was first introduced by Germany, to which country we owe most of the drug poisons, that have killed hundreds of thousands, and made chronic invalids of millions of others. Not to be behind in the race, America has improved on this poison gas, and our battleship fleet off the coast of Los Angeles was recently experimenting with protective measures against gas shells.

Surely, the cessation of war between nations is by far the greatest question before the people today. If it were left to the masses, an overwhelming majority would emphatically express their desire for peace. What sinister underhand power of financiers, politicians, militarists and armament manufacturers is continually striving to thwart the wishes of the people? And how long shall they be permitted to prevail?

"Harmonial Philosophy."

"THE Harmonial Thinker" is the title of a neatly printed little quarterly magazine, published at 4328 Alabama street, San Diego, Cal. "Harmonial Philosophy" is thus described by a contributor to the magazine:

"The harmonial philosophy is more a spirit with which to quicken already existent conceptions of spiritual things than a new 'cult,' or 'ism' to be added to their number. It is a light by which to discern the hidden truth, the newly discovered helpfulness of all religious and philosophical beliefs and doctrines. It is characterized particularly by inclusion rather than exclusion; by its affirmations rather than denials. It seeks to show the points of resemblance and agreement between ideas and their expression, instead of the differences and distinctions. It deals primarily with principles and secondarily with their expression."

This poor old world certainly needs harmony. Also philisophy—of the right kind.

"Wonderful Medical Discoveries."

I AM constantly surprised at the liberality with which newspapers give prominence in their reading columns, to medical announcements of "wonderful medical discoveries"—impossible "cures" for tuberculosis and cancer and other ailments—"cures" that can never cure, because they do not remove the cause—methods of rejuvenating old goats, with glands of young goats, and so forth.

A few weeks ago an Australian was found dead in his bed, in London. He had just returned from Vienna, where he had been given thyroid gland treatment by Dr. Steinach, whose "wonderful discovery" was widely advertised (free) in the press. The Australian had been singing the praises of Steimach, and was to have lectured in Albert Hall on "How I was Made Years Younger by the Method of Prof. Steinach." He died in time to save some fools.

More recently, a press dispatch from Paris told us that a French scientist believes, from experiments on frogs, that it will be possible soon to change the sexes at will—that is, that any woman who [illegible]

If any discoverer of perpetual motion wanted such publicity he would have to pay for it, by the inch, but it seems that any enterprising physician may make a million by working on human credulity through the press.

The medical fraternity would be better engaged in learning to teach people how to be healthy and live long, by obeying the laws of health. However, neither fame nor money is to be earned in that way.

Syphilis.

AN ACQUAINTANCE told me that a physician assured him there are 6500 cases of syphilis among Los Angeles school children.

I do not know how he is supposed to have counted them.

I have no doubt there are 6500 children in Los Angeles—or perhaps 65,000—whose blood would show a positive reaction in the Wassermann test, considering that their diet consists largely of starches and sweets, which promote an acid condition of the body. A month of right eating would change the positive to negative.

The medical fraternity is just now insane on syphilis. No matter what ails a person, a blood test is made, and then, if the Wassermann test shows positive, there follows a treatment that is worse than the disease for which it is given.

It is time that this criminal foolishness should be stopped.

X-Ray.

FOLLOWING is from a Porterville (Cal.) correspondent:

"A friend was sent to a hospital in the San Francisco Bay district, for treatment for tuberculosis of the bone. She was there about one month. Various lotions and experiments were tried out on her, one of the last being the X-ray. Two places on her body, one elbow and one hand, were burned

Rupture Kills 7000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD, when adhering closely to the body, cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended, so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., Block 298, St. Louis, Mo., for Free trial Plapao and the information necessary.—[Advertisement.

Wilderness Blood

BY EDITH LETTS DUNN.

WHEN the news came up the mountain, that dripping spring afternoon, Martha Hallett flung the dress she had been ironing into a chair and sinking beside it buried great choking sobs in the foamy pink folds.

Now you may walk down a crowded street with the tears prickling behind your eyelids and the chances are no one will notice you. But you can't cry in a four-room house on an isolated California mountain top without being called to account.

Martha's inquisitor stuck her curly yellow head through the kitchen door at the third sob, a lazy surprise in her pretty, rather weak face.

"What's the matter, Matt? Scorch your voile?"

"It's the river," came from the tragic figure on the floor.

"The river?"

"It's up. All this rain—Sam Jim's been down. He—he couldn't cross."

"Well, what's that to cry about?"

Martha lifted an angry face from the pink voile.

"Cleory Allen, don't you know day after tomorrow's Memorial Day? Ain't I been workin' my fingers off to finish this dress? Ain't the whole neighborhood goin' to be at the cem'try to see me put the silk flag on grandfather's grave; the only general's grave in this part of the State? The flag come, today's mail. It's in the box across the river an'," tragically, "it'll have to stay there."

"But if it keeps on raining folks can't get to the cemetery," consoled Cleora. "You can have the flagging Fourth o' July and—"

"Memorial Day won't be rainy," affirmed Martha, bitterly. "It'll clear away by then an' be all blue and sunshiny. I'd set my heart on the flaggin'. You see, Cleora, when you've got soldier blood in you it makes you bound to see things through! I ain't like you; ready to give up just as soon as things begin to get hard."

Cleora flushed. "I'm not very good at sticking," she admitted. "Maybe if some of the Allens had been soldiers—but they wasn't that ever I heard of. 'Nless you'd count granddad. He used to fight Indians and outlaws when the State was new but it wasn't his regular business. He was a prospector. Used to trail around the hills with his outfit on his back. Seemed like he couldn't be satisfied any where but in the wilderness. He'd risk any thing. I remember hearing how he crossed the Tehachepi with the snow waist deep for miles, to get medicine for some awful sick kid in a mining camp. Maybe," with a little laugh, "I've got wilderness blood in me from him."

Martha swept a contemptuous glance over the frail little figure, the dainty frock, tiny, high-heeled white shoes and carefully arranged hair.

"It ain't likely," she sniffed. "You're the kind that's made to take things easy an' be babied an' took care of. You know that nothing in the world but doctor's orders could ever have got you this far from the city. You're scared to death every time a bobcat yelps at night 'r a lizzard pokes his head out at you."

Cleora giggled. "You're right. If I hadn't had to have mountain air to get back my perfect thirty-six, I'd be trying on gowns for society dames at Mme. Vera's, this very minute, as I will be next week unless—"

She stopped suddenly. She had never owned, even to herself, the thing that might lose Mme. Vera the most attractive model on Broadway. The thing which just to think of set her heart fluttering with a shy, sweet ecstacy. She hoped Martha had noticed the pause.

Martha hadn't. She had picked up the pink dress and was grimly testing her iron.

"I s'pose I'll have to finish pressin' this, since it's sprinkled," she gloomed. "There's Harlan Marks ridin' up. You go let him in Cleora; my eyes is too red."

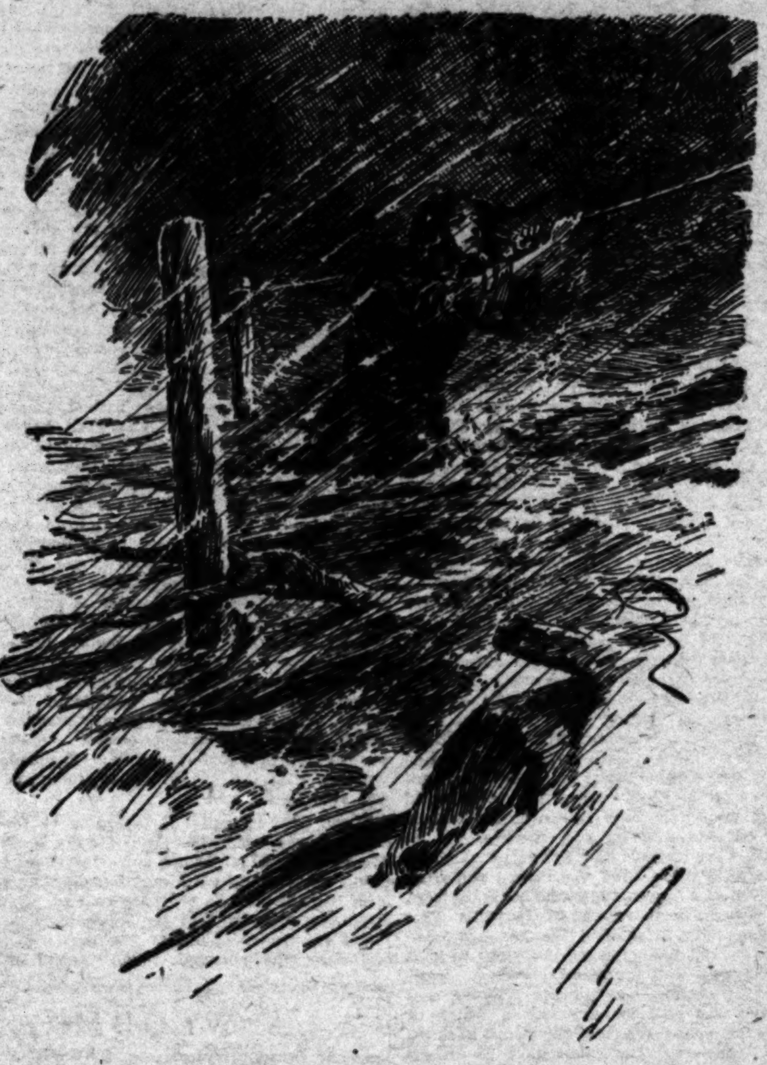
Cleora, opening the door a moment later for Harlan Marks, big and handsome in his dripping oilskins, had a blissful feeling that the dreary gray rain had been suddenly swept aside by a burst of sun.

Back in the city Cleora's sun had futifully appeared and withdrawn according to the schedule arranged for it by the weather man. But in the month she had been at the Hallett's it had shown a tendency to burst into splendor at any hour of the day or night that Harlan Marks rode up from the big ranch house he shared with his cousin David, at the foot of the Hallett's hill.

"Thought maybe you were getting lonesome, shut in so long by the storm, so I rode up," greeted Marks, eyes lighting as he followed Cleora to the fire.

"Oh, I don't mind the rain much," Cleora said, snuggling lazily into a big chair, with the satisfied air of a kitten taking possession of a warm spot. "I'm not crazy about tramping over the hills in ugly, squashy boots like Martha. I like to doll up and be warm and cosy indoors."

"Lazy," Harlan jeered, but his voice was tender and there was a look in his eyes which made Cleona drop her own.



She drew herself forward hand over hand.

"I'm not lazy," she denied to cover her confusion. "And I'm not a fraid-cat like you all think. I've got wilderness blood in me. I—"

"Wilderness blood! I wish to heaven you had. Then I'd dare to—to hope—to ask—oh, Cleora, do you think you could be content to stay here in the mountains? Would—would love make up to you for the loneliess and roughness—"

The kitchen door opened.

"I've shook out the rest o' them clo'es. Matty didn't feel like finishin' 'em." Announced old Mrs. Hallett.

"Well for the land! Did you rain down, Harlan Marks? My, I'm glad to see company."

Harlan's face shadowed but to Cleora the interruption was not unwelcome. It was like pausing on a celestial peak to look down into the Valley of Heart's Desire which one was soon to possess. She knew that Harlan would renew his offer of the valley as soon as they were again alone. She began to look ahead.

She would write to Mme. Vera and give up her place in the shop. She must begin at once to get her things ready. Of course one wouldn't need many clothes in this out of the way place, still she would only be a bride once—and there would have to be household things.

She remembered how she had always laughed at the engaged girls in the shop who spent their noonings ecstatically absorbed in embroidering towels, hemstitching napkins—

She knew now that she had laughed at something holy. The sacred love of home and homely things, expressing itself in near-damask and crocheted edgings.

"Harlan Marks is an awful nice young fellow," old Mrs. Hallett observed when Marks had gone reluctantly, with a murmured word to Cleora about "coming for your answer tomorrow." I do hope his uncle ain't goin' to object to Matty's marryin' into the fam'ly."

"Martha marrying?" Cleora stammered, sitting up.

"Yes, if the old uncle don't put a spoke in the wheel. Dave's been down in the city stayin' with him ever since you come. That's why you ain't seen Dave. The boys take turns runnin' down to see him, now he's got so old. He's awful rich an' he's made it plain that there ain't to be no money expected if his nephew's wife ain't of good fam'ly. Keeps sayin' she's got to have the blood of patriots in her. He's comin' home with Dave tomorrow, an'll be here for the Memorial Day doin's. That's why Matt's so broke up over not gettin' gran'pa's flag. She thinks it 'ud kin'a impress the old gentleman to see the neighborhood payin' its respects to the Hallett fam'ly, an' I s'pose she's right."

Cleora's blue eyes had a dazed look.

"You mean—that Martha is going to marry—him?" She couldn't bring herself to speak Harlan's name.

"That's what I'm tellin' ye. That is, if his uncle agrees. I tell Matt she oughtn't to want him if he ain't willin' to lose the money for her, but my land, she's crazy about him. She's just the kind of a wife he needs. Now, if he'd a' took a notion to you it wouldn't a' been suitable at all. A little baby thing like you couldn't a' made him happy long an' he'd a' found out his mistake an' you'd both been wretched. No, Marthy's the one for him.

Cleora stood up.

"I think I'll go to bed early," she said. "I don't care for supper; my head aches."

Twenty is pitifully young to be fighting battles. There is so much that twenty hasn't learned. Cleora, face down on her bed, had no weapons, sharpened by experience to meet the bewilderment and humiliation of her trial.

Don't get the idea that Cleora developed suddenly into a bravely resigned, forgiving woman. She didn't. She lay on her bed and cried broken-heartedly, as twenty always cries, until the tears cleared her brain and she could begin to think.

She wasn't going to give Harlan up. It was too bad about Martha, but if Harlan no longer loved her and did love Cleora it would be unfair to make him ruin his life by insisting that he keep faith with Martha.

But would it be ruin?

"You couldn't make him happy. He'd find out his mistake and you'd both be wretched."

Mrs. Hallett had said that and Mrs. Hallett was very old; perhaps she knew. All at once Cleora was sure that she did know. It is impossible to let you see the steps by which Cleora reached her decision. You may think you can get a great spiritual triumph on an eight by ten page with a fountain pen. You can't.

Cleora quickly got off the bed. Over head the rain rapped upon the shingles with a heavy hand, as if bidding her hurry. Old Mrs. Hallett and Martha had gone to their room. She could slip into the kitchen and get Martha's big boots, drying behind the stove. One couldn't walk two miles to Round Rock bridge in high-heeled white slippers, and it was by the Round Rock bridge Cleora menat to cross the river.

She wondered why Sam Jim, the Indian, hadn't crossed there. Perhaps he was too lazy to walk that far and then too, Sam Jim was afraid.

Cleora wasn't afraid. She hadn't seen the stream except in summer, and it was hard to take seriously a river which reminds you exactly of the dribble of the garden hose meandering through the baby's sand pile. Cleora had been over the Round Rock trail the summer before and she had a peculiar instinct for roads.

The old, wilderness loving prospector had boasted that, having traveled a trail once, he could follow it blindfolded. His grandchild, who knew no trails but her native asphalt, could have said the same.

It was very dark under the trees and the rainy night sky. The boots were much too large and made walking hard. After she got down the hill onto the level land it was almost imposible, for here it was a continuous splashing through pools that kept getting deeper as she got nearer the river.

Once she heard a cry, from somewhere at her back. That long, sobbing cry that seems to voice all the loneliness and the peril of the night woods. She started to run and fell forward, tripped by the water-logged boots. Terrified, she struggled up and made herself stand for a moment, remembering some words of the old prospector

"Don't never run from a bobcat. He'll ketch ye jest the same, if he's a goin' to an' if he ain't a goin' to, there ain't no use gettin' blowed."

Well, she didn't want to be "blowed." She meant to get to the bridge, unless it had been washed away.

The bridge was still there. She could see it dimly through the rainy dark, a rickety wooden footpath, stretching into the muddy flood. She waded to it, through water up to her knees, felt the sway of the crazy structure and paused. Perhaps, after all, the thing she meant to do was not worth the risk. She didn't want to be fool-hardy nor spectacular; she wasn't even sure that she wanted to be magnanimous, though she wouldn't have called it by such a big name. All she wanted was that the man she loved should be happy. And if marrying Martha would mean happiness to him, and if that cranky old uncle was going to forbid it unless Martha got her flag—. You can see that twenty doesn't have a good sense of values.

To Cleora, at that moment, life, which might end in that whirling muddy flood, was of no importance at all compared with the starry bit of silk in the mail box across the river.

So she went on.

Twenty always does go on; divinely, impassionately, pathetically brave.

There was a wire stretched along the side of the bridge, Cleora grasped it and made her way along the shaking boards. The piling, which supported them, quivered in the flood. There was water on the floor. It came up to her ankles; up to her knees; then it was waist deep. There came a place where her feet missed the boards entirely, and she drew herself forward hand over hand, along the wire, the water tugging

CARE OF THE BODY

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D.

Milk Substitutes.

SOME people seem to think that milk is an indispensable food. This is not so. Milk may either be a food or a poison, according to how it is used.

The milk of many animals is used for food, including the cow, camel, goat, sheep, horse and llama. In Occidental countries only the cow and the goat furnish the milk supply.

Milk is sometimes referred to as a perfect food. It is a perfect food for the young of the animal that gives it, when sipped warm, directly from the nipple. Otherwise it is not.

Cow's milk is a perfect food for the calf; goat's milk for young goats, woman's milk for the child.

Evidently, a food that is adapted to a calf, weighing 100 pounds, cannot be adapted to an infant weighing ten pounds. Therefore, when cow's milk is used for infants it must be "modified."

The cells of cow's milk are much larger than those of human milk. Therefore, they cannot properly be digested and assimilated by human beings, but tend to form tumor-like growths, when milk and milk products form a large part of the diet. This accounts for the prevalence of goiter in Switzerland.

A kid is nearer in weight to an infant. The goat is remarkably immune to disease, whereas a cow, usually kept in close ill-ventilated stables, readily contracts tuberculosis, as hogs fed on garbage and slaughter-house refuse develop hog cholera. Also the fat globules of goat's milk are very small, resembling those of woman's milk, while the casein also forms smaller curds, that are more easily digested.

Goat's milk is being popularized. It should be used exclusively for feeding infants where they cannot get mother's milk.

Mother's milk is, of course, the best, but the milk of a healthy animal is better than the milk of a sick mother.

Here is an approximate analysis of human milk and cow's milk:

	Human milk.	Cow's milk.
Fat	4	4
Sugar	7	4
Proteid	2	4
Water	87	88

From this it will be seen that human milk contains the same amount of fat, more sugar and half as much proteid as is contained in cow's milk. Therefore, not being a fit food for the young of the human being, it is always modified when infants use it—that is to say, water is added and milk sugar—not cane sugar.

Other striking differences are found when we observe the mineral elements of the two milks. Here is a table, showing the percentage of mineral matter, or organic salts, in one thousand parts of water-free human and cow's milk:

Mineral elements.	Human milk.	Cow's milk.
Potassium	11.73	12.70
Sodium	3.16	5.24
Calcium	5.80	12.24
Magnesium	0.75	1.69
Iron	0.07	0.30
Phosphorus	7.84	15.79
Sulphur	0.33	0.17
Silicon	0.07	0.02
Chlorine	6.38	8.04
Total	56.13	57.29

Here it will be noticed that human milk is almost entirely deficient in iron, containing less than one-fourth as much as cow's milk. Nature has made a wonderful provision for this, the infant being equipped with a liver in proportion three times as large as that of an adult, and containing a large amount of iron, which is gradually used up during the nursing period. This explains why, when children are fed on milk alone, after the time when weaning should take place, they become anemic. It also explains why a large consumption of milk overburdens the liver of an adult, the organ not being prepared to handle it.

Pasteurization does not destroy the germs in milk, but it does destroy, or greatly lessen, the food value of the milk. Pasteurization or sterilization of milk is a delusion. The organism and ingredients of milk are so changed by Pasteurization that it is no longer food fit for the proper nourishment of an infant.

Heating milk partly deorganizes the important mineral elements. This is why it is a starvation food, for infants who are fed exclusively on it. They develop rickets, constipation and finally consumption. Because the degree of heat is lower, Pasteurization is less harmful than sterilization, but it is harmful all the same. Of course, when foods containing the organic salts are fed with the milk, it does not so much matter. As, for instance, fresh fruit juice.

Milk that has been Pastuerized or sterilized will decay quickly, when the can or bottle is opened. Raw milk will only turn sour.

Canned milk should never be used, after it has been opened and exposed for any length of time. If you use it, buy small cans and use it all at once.

The tuberculin test for cows is useless and expensive. Like the Wassermann test for syphilis, it is altogether unreliable. Yet valuable cows are killed as a result of this test. In the same way thousands of hogs have been killed by serums for hog cholera, and cattle by serums for foot and mouth disease.

This testing business gives jobs to a great many political doctors, and works great hardship on the dairymen.

Recognizing the limitations of milk as a food, many have endeavored to introduce some form of synthetic or artificial milk. In France, for many years, the soya bean has been used for this purpose, in feeding infants. It is not well adapted thereto, because, like the peanut, it contains starch, and infants cannot digest starch.

Dr. Elmer Lee of New York, recently announced a new synthetic milk, made from oats and peanut meal. This also has the drawback of being made from foods that are largely starch.

The best of all milk substitutes would be one made from nuts, which contain no starch. The peanut is not a nut, but a member of the pulse or legume family. The almond is the best nut to use for this purpose, blanched, ground into a cream, but not heated, and mixed with distilled water.

On such a food, to which should be added a little raw fruit juice, an infant deprived of its mother's milk will thrive much better than on the milk of a cow, while for adults it is greatly superior to milk.

Einstein.

IN FORMER days, when a man said "ein stein"—or "zwei stein"—it meant something wet, and friends gathered around him.

Now, when a man says "Einstein," it means something very dry, and his hearers find that they have an urgent appointment elsewhere.

Premiums on Babies.

THE French government has put a premium on all babies born throughout France. Both legitimate and natural children will draw awards, but in the latter case the child must be recognized.

In the provinces 300 francs (normally about $60) will be paid for third infants, the scale being gradually increased to 650 francs for the tenth child. In Paris these premiums will be increased 50 per cent, due to the higher cost of living. The first payment of 150 francs will be made thirty days after the birth of the child. French mothers only are to secure the awards.

This tends to let down the matrimonial bars still farther.

It is a difficult problem. On the one hand, our attitude toward illegitimacy is always unjust to the child, and often cruel to the mother. On the other hand, marriage is a cement that holds the fabric of society together—a cement that is now rapidly crumbling.

In Mongolia.

I READ that the Buriats of Mongolia are so devoted to their hroses that when a chief dies his steed is tied to a stake, at his grave, there to die by starvation.

Queer form of devotion.

Yet, in civilized communities, we sometimes read that a man shoots a woman "for love."

Too Many Laws.

A SUPERABUNDANCE of laws, many of which cannot be enforced, and some of which are not expected to be enforced, breeds hypocrisy, unrest and contempt for all law. Writing in the Dearborn Independent, Charles S. Thomas, former United States Senator from Colorado, says:

"A good many years ago Herbert Spencer directed the attention of the public of Great Britain to the fact that legislation in free governments tended more and more to place restrictions and impose penalties upon all of the various activities of the individual, repealing statutes, upon the same subject, when the original ones proved unavailing or unsatisfactory, until its societies were irritated and pestered with multitudinous statutes and laws of a regulatory character, necessarily requiring the multiplication of bureaus and official agencies for their enforcement, enlarging the burden of taxation, because of the enormously increased expenditure necessary for their administration, and ending, or threatening to end, in a despotic legal condition, or in the collapse of the social and economic fabric. This he declared to be the most serious of all consequences of so-called free government, when the statesmanship and the caution of those in authority yielded to and thus accelerated that tendency.

"I think that the history of the United States and of the forty-eight States composing it confirms the existence of this evil, the difficulty of checking its operation, and the unfortunate and sinister consequences which must flow from its repeated exercise.

"I have been informed that during the last twenty years the States and Congress together have placed 79,000 laws upon the statute books, most of them designed to produce a better social and political condition by legislation, and many of them relating to the same subject, which seems to have been improperly or unsatisfactorily dealt with at the beginning.

"The nation is not so happy now as it was twenty-five years ago. We are more discontented, more dissatisfied with our condition and that of the body politic, and therefore we are clamoring for more statutes."

Cancer.

"CANCER Cured by Food" was the title of an article in the May Physical Culture. Commenting on the article, the editor of the magazine writes:

"The story of the experience of the medical world in conjunction with the treatment of cancer, is the story of utter incompetence, up to date, at least. Is this because cancer is a problem impossible to solve, a disease that cannot be conquered? Or is it because official medicine simply will not recognize the truth even when it is presented?

"It is recognized and admitted that surgery is an absolute failure in so far as cancer is concerned. At best it is supposed to prolong life. The best medical opinion holds that it is doubtful if even this is accomplished. Meanwhile, however, progress is being made in other directions. It is pretty well established that cancer is not an infectious disease, nor a merely local manifestation. It is known that the basis of cancer is in the blood, and that it is a matter of disturbed metabolism. The treatment, therefore, must essentially be constitutional in nature, tending to promote more perfect metabolism and a purer, more normal state of blood. That this may be accomplished in large part through diet is the conclusion arrived at by different investigators."

Cancer is caused by the ingestion of more proteid food than the system can assimilate. An operation can never possibly cure, for it does not remove the cause. After an operation the cancer always returns with increased malignance, while non-malignant tumors, after an operation, often become cancerous.

Poultices remove cancers. Radium is now widely advocated. It is dangerous. I frequently receive reports of irreparable injuries caused by radium and the X-ray. Moreover, these methods do not change the blood, and the cancer will inevitably return, if the wrong method of body feeding is persisted in.

The only way to avert cancer is to eat only enough to maintain the effective working of the bodily functions, and the only way to cure it is by fasting and an abstemious, non-stimulating, non-mucus-forming dietary that will cause the growth to be absorbed and eliminated.

Some Early California Filibuster Expeditions.

J. M. SCANLAND.

SOON after the admission of California into the Union the attention of a large element of the new State became centered on the adjoining Mexican provinces of Sonora and Lower California. The people from the Southern States desired those provinces for the extension of slavery—either to be annexed to California, or as independent "republics." They preferred the latter, as this would give to the southern party additional representation in Congress. The antislavery element desired these provinces for their natural advantages—a port at Guaymas, possession of the Gulf of California with its valuable pearl fisheries, and the rich mines supposed to exist, particularly in Sonora. Both parties were agreed as to these natural advantages. Another reason for the possession of these provinces was to prevent them from falling into the hands of France, which power was then reaching out for them. In one of the movements France was aided by the Mexican government. The understanding was that France should not actually possess the entire provinces, but only part of each, and thus protect Mexico from the Indians, and serve as a bulwark against the probable aggressions of the United States. The hold of Mexico on these distant provinces never was firm, and it was powerless to defend them against the savages.

France was first in the filibuster field, and two expeditions sailed from San Francisco composed entirely of Frenchmen, to conquer these Mexican provinces; and both of them failed. Two American expeditions also landed on those inhospitable shores, and failed. The first was commanded by one De Pindray, who claimed to be a marquis. He was of large size, with an assumed air of dignity, talked of great schemes, and hinted at being rich. He had been compelled to leave France owing to a shady transaction in money matters, and turned up in San Francisco, in the spring of 1850. At a fandango he met another titled Frenchman, the Count Gaston Raoul de Paousset-Boulbon. Among other large schemes for raising the wind, or advancing their broken fortunes, the count told the marquis of a project he had in the back of his head, which was to organize an expedition and establish a republic in Sonora. The marquis thought that it was a good idea, and again thought that he would prefer to be "president," rather than divide the honors with the man who let him into the scheme. That is politics. Accordingly, the marquis set about raising an expedition of "patriots" to liberate the oppressed Mexicans.

In the meantime, the count delayed his scheme temporarily, and took a trip to Los Angeles, and as far down as the Mexican border to spy out the land. Incidentally, he bought a herd of cattle and drove them to the north. But his venture was unprofitable, and then he decided to turn filibuster, and began recruiting for men and money.

In the meantime, the marquis had sailed with his expedition of about 150 men, and in the winter of 1851, landed at Guaymas. It was supposed that he had been encouraged by the Consul for France at San Francisco, and also received advice from the Consul for Mexico at the same place. When the expedition landed, the count offered their services to Mexico to protect it against the Apaches in consideration of a concession of twenty-five leagues of land near Arispe, which was granted. Not long after their arrival the Sonorans showed "marked displeasure," and the Apaches raided the "bulwark against the United States," killing about half of the expedition. The body of the count was later found with a bullet hole in his head. It was said that he had been killed by one of his men in their flight. These men concealed themselves in a mountain pass, until rescued a few months later by the Count Paousset.

This failure left the field open for Paousset-Boulbon. He was of an ancient family, well educated, small and of slight build, a good talker, active though not physically strong. He had squandered his part of the family fortune upon grisettes and parasites, and then went into politics and started a newspaper to advocate his claims to office. He was defeated, and his paper died, and then he came to San Francisco as a steerage passenger. But not liking hard labor, he became a filibuster. He had his plans before Patrice Dillon, the Consul for France at San Francisco, who secretly encouraged the scheme—arguing that not only fortune but also fame awaited the Frenchman.

The French Consul, it was charged, then wrote to the French Minister at the City of Mexico to bring about the offer of a new concession of land to a new French-Mexican company known as the "Compania Restauradora," the principal object of which was to reopen the rich mines which had been abandoned owing to the raids of the Apaches. Dillon sent Paousset to Mexico, and he got the concession and a large amount of money from the bank of Jecker, De La Torre & Co. He returned to San Francisco, no longer a penniless adventurer, but rich in funds, and with an expedition of 250 men descended upon Guaymas in June, 1852. He was well received, and the bells were set ringing in honor of the conqueror. But the general in command of the Mexican troops showed his displeasure and objected to the expedition marching inland. The filibuster was next ordered to report at Arispe. He hesitated, but finally started. On the way he found the half of Pindray's expedition which had escaped from the Apaches. They advised against going to Arispe, and the expedition turned back. The count then wrote to the Mexican general that the object of the expedition was either misunderstood, or that he was acting without orders, as the matter was understood by the President of Mexico. The count was again ordered to leave, he and the men were held to be pirates, and would be so treated, if captured. Paousset then raised the standard of the "Independent Republic of Sonora," and took all the horses and provisions required from the Mexican ranchers. He then marched toward Hermosillo on the Sonora River, eighty miles north of Guaymas, where he arrived in September, 1852, and established his little republic.

The fandangos and the mescal saloons were liberally patronized by the gay Frenchmen for several weeks. The commander, Blanco, had about 1200 troops and three batteries of cannon. Yet he hesitated to attack, and offered to pay the French commander a sum of money if he would leave. But the count did not wish to give up his chances of being President of a republic and perhaps of all of Mexico, and, besides, they were having a very pleasant time flirting with the senoritas. Finally Blanco attacked the French, and lost 200 killed or wounded, while the French lost only seventeen killed and twenty-three wounded. Hermosillo was now in possession of the count—it was a French "Republic," and he dreamed of greater conquests. The Mexicans were demoralized—no such victory had ever before been heard of. Had the count waited for a short time, the disaffected Mexicans would have rallied to his banner and perhaps some of the Apaches, and he would have become the President of all of Sonora. But his head was turned and from a dream of a larger empire, he began to treat for permission to retreat to Guaymas. This strange offer astonished the Mexican commander, who had expected the count to hold Sonora and wait for reinforcements. However the request was quickly granted, and $11,000 was paid for a vessel in which to ship the count and his command back to San Francisco. The count gave as an excuse that his health was impaired.

At San Francisco the count was lionized as a hero—only half of the story being told. This reception rekindled his failing spirit, and he at once began to organize another expedition. He again went to the Mexican capital and proposed to land 250 men in Sonora and protect that province against the Apaches. But President Santa Anna betrayed him and ordered his arrest, notwithstanding he had been guaranteed a safe conduct for his return. Finally he escaped and arrived in San Francisco. Upon his arrival he found that William Walker was organizing an expedition to descend upon Lower California. Walker's aim was also to capture Sonora, but the count thought that the Americans wanted only Lower California and would leave Sonora for the French. Consequently he began to raise another expedition with the view of founding a French empire, which would eventually absorb all of Mexico. He raised about $3000 in the French colony, and a number of "patriots" had enrolled under his banner, when news was received that Mexico had sold Sonora to the United States for $10,000,000. His expedition disbanded and further payments of subscriptions were refused.

The report was only half true. The United States had bought from Mexico a strip of land now forming the southern boundaries of Arizona and New Mexico, and was known as the "Gadsden Purchase."

The French count's bubble having burst, the field was now clear for the Americans, who from the beginning had secretly opposed the French expeditions, and had informed our government of their movements.

William Walker, the "gray-eyed man of destiny," now undertook to carve out a republic on our border; or, rather, republics, for his aim was to make an independent government of each province, and extend his conquests beyond—even including the Empire of Mexico.

Walker was a native of Nashville, Tenn. He was a lawyer by profession, and after a trip to Paris, went to New Orleans and engaged in journalism. He arrived in San Francisco in 1850, during the "gold rush," and engaged in journalism in that city as editor of the Herald. In this paper he advocated the acquisition of the provinces of Sonora and Lower California, and denounced the judges for not enforcing the laws. He was fined and imprisoned for "contempt" of court, but a mass meeting of citizens compelled Judge Parsons to release him.

After the failure of Raousset's expedition, he went to Guaymas to examine the field, its prospects, and to learn if anything was to be feared from the French. He learned that the French were not so successful as reported, and that the people were not favorable to them, and also that the government had changed its policy as to French occupancy of any part of the country, for any purpose. But he concluded that a small force could conquer the country and hold it. However, the Mexicans were now suspicious, and refused to grant him a concession of land to "protect them against the Apaches." Walker then returned to San Francisco, and organized an expedition. With fifty-one men he descended upon La Paz, Lower California, captured the port and raised the flag of the "Republic of Lower California," Nov. 7, 1853. However, he soon found that the place was untenable, and sailed back to Ensenada, which place he captured and raised the flag of the "Republic of Sonora." The Mexican flag was lowered, and, in a proclamation, the Mexicans were released from their allegiance to Mexico. A government was formed, consisting of William Walker, President; Frederic Emory, Secretary of State; John M. Jernigan, Secretary of War; Howard H. Snow, Secretary of the Navy; Charles H. Gilman, Captain of Battalion. The code of Louisiana was adopted, which included a slavery clause. Money script was issued and sent to San Francisco, together with the flag of the republic, and was sold by brokers.

There was no rally of Mexicans to the flag of the new republic. They did not know the meaning of freedom, and Walker was soon confronted with an overwhelming force. He decided to evacuate La Paz. His force was attacked and six Mexicans were killed and seven wounded. Not one of the filibusters was wounded. The expedition then sailed to Magdalena Bay, on the coast of Lower California. A Mexican man-of-war pursued the expedition to Ensenada, sixty miles south of San Diego. Walker issued an address to the people, and forwarded it to San Francisco, together with an account of the battle of La Paz. This created great excitement in the Bay City. More bonds of the republic were sold, and recruits were enlisted to be sent to reinforce the army of Lower California. About 150 men, under command of Henry P. Watkins, left San Francisco on the bark Anita. There was no attempt to stop this vessel from sailing as in the first instance when Walker sailed. The commanding general who stopped the sailing of the first expedition had been removed by the Washington authorities.

The impressment of horses and cattle by the filibusters aroused the Mexicans to action, and they attacked Walker's forces at La Grulla, but were defeated. Several were killed on each side. Shortly afterward about seventy-five of Walker's command left him, led by Henry P. Watkins, who had been appointed Vice-President upon his arrival with reinforcements, and Frederic Emory, the Secretary of State. This left Walker an army of about 100 men with which to hold the two republics. He started across the peninsula with a herd of cattle upon which the men were to subsist. Before reaching the Colorado River the Indians attacked the filibusters, killing several. The cattle were turned loose, and the men crossed the river on rafts. Desertions continued, and when Walker arrived at Yuma, his force was reduced to thirty-four men. He now abandoned all hopes of future conquest and empire and marched toward San Diego. The Mexicans surrounded his forces at Tijuana, but the filibusters cleared the way and, when within one mile of the boundary line, the filibusters turned, faced their surprised pursuers, and gave them a well-aimed volley, killing several. No Americans were wounded. A number of people came out from San Diego to see what they thought would be a battle and watched the charge from the foothills. But the Mexicans retreated, leaving their dead and wounded upon the field. At San Diego, Walker surrendered to the commander of the American garrison, and, with thirty-four men, the remnants of his army, was sent to San Francisco to answer the charge of violating the neutrality laws.

Walker again took up the editorial pen. He and Watkins were indicted by the Federal grand jury for violating the neutrality laws, and both were fined. The fines were not paid, and as there was no prison sentence alternative, they could not be collected. Finally the sentences were revoked, per-

A WEDDING TRIP IN 1867.

BY ETHEL R. SHORB.

AT THE home of B. D. Wilson, known to the early Californians as "Benito" Wilson, the marriage of his daughter Maria Jesus Wilson to J. de Barth Shorb took place on the 4th of June, 1867. Mrs. Shorb on her maternal side came from Spanish ancestry. Her mother was Ramona Yorba, daughter of Bernardo Yorba whose mother in turn was an Alvarado, a name closely identified with the earliest history of California. Going a generation further back on her maternal side Mrs. Shorb's great-grandmother was an Amador from whom Amador county was named.

In the early fifties B. D. Wilson bought the Cuati tract in the San Gabriel Valley from Hugo Reed, an Englishman who acquired the land by marrying the daughter of an Indian chief. At the same time or possibly at a somewhat later date he acquired "Orizaba" (Rising Sun,) part of which he gave as a wedding gift to his eldest daughter, Mrs. Shorb, and which was subsequently named "San Marino" after Mr. Shorb's home in Maryland. Pasadena was originally part of this tract of land and the Cuati tract.

On the fringe of hills below what is now known as Pasadena Mr. Wilson retained as his home some 500 acres, naming it "Lake Vineyard," now owned by Mr. Wilson's daughters, Miss Wilson and Mrs. George S. Patton. Shortly after acquiring the Cuati tract Mr. Wilson built an adobe house. To the east the living-rooms and bedrooms of the household stood, the servants' quarters, kitchens and storerooms lay to the west of a court, the south side of which was walled in. Mr. Wilson, after whom "Wilson peak" is named, built Wilson trail for the purpose of obtaining pine roofing for his home and other buildings. The home stood until some ten years ago, when it was torn down. It was here that the wedding took place.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Bishop Verdagur, known throughout the country more familiarly as "Father Peter," assisted by Father Miguel. The guests who came from all the country around included the well-known Americans and Spaniards of the time. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. John B. Rowland, Don and Donna Ignacio Del Valle, Don and Donna Pio Pico, Gen. and Donna Andreas Pico, Mr. and Mrs. William Workman, Don and Donna David Cota, Col. and Mrs. E. J. C. Kewen, Gen. and Mrs. Phineas Banning, Mrs. Albert Sidney Johnston, Don and Donna Juan Avala, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Rose, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Childs, Mr. and Mrs. Ogier and many others. As was the custom then, many of the guests stayed all night. The following morning Mr. and Mrs. Shorb left for their wedding journey, their destination being Camulos, the home of Don and Donna Ignacio Del Valle, in Ventura county. Travel naturally was not then what it is today and Mr. and Mrs. Shorb were driven to their destination, a number of the guests accompanying them in their separate conveyances as far as Los Angeles. Their first stop was San Fernando where they lunched with Gen. Andreas Pico, brother of Gov. Pio Pico. Luncheon was served in the old monastery connected with the San Fernando Mission where Gov. Pico, after the church was dispossessed of its lands, made his home. I may add here that Gov. Pio Pico married Mrs. Shorb's great aunt one of the Alvarados. Leaving San Fernando the bride and groom reached their destination toward evening.

MECCA—CALIFORNIA AND EGYPT—A CONTRAST.

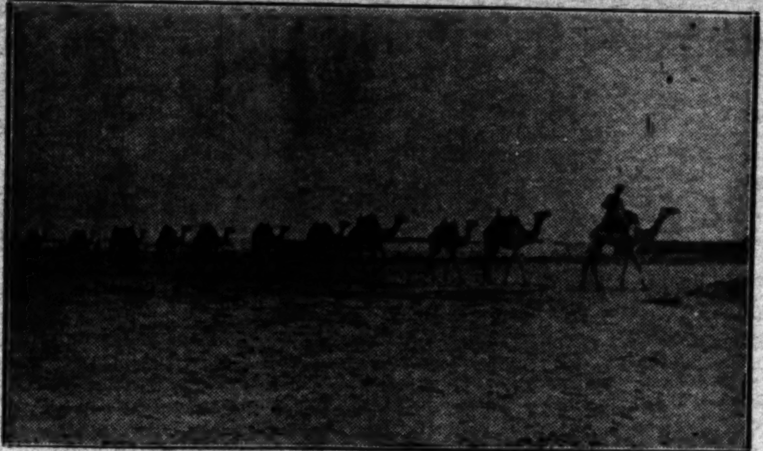
looks and prodigious sighs. They appeared to be a run-away couple from some university, and though the girl could not have been more than 18, she was more painted and "dolled-up" than any dancing girl who might haunt the lowest caravanserais of Arabia. There were obvious artists and writers in search of local color and incidents for "copy." The one touch of Africa in the room was to be found in the young colored lady who condescended to wait upon us. But so high were her heels that the natural grace of the barefooted gait of her race became an unsightly waddle, and the thickness of her lips were accentuated by a liberal application of rouge!



An Arabian caravan.

For such an atmosphere we were relieved to escape and make our way out into the desert. For the wind had gone down, leaving the air cool and clear. Above us the stars glittered in a vault of purple hue, and about us lay the silent emptiness of great spaces.

In the morning we found that we had chosen wisely, for our camp lay amidst silver sand dunes. In the distance gleamed the waters of the Salton Sea, lying some 200 feet below sea level. It is a vast lake of alkaline water haunted by pelicans.

California Date Groves Produce High-class "Bread of the Desert."

NEAR by were the first of the date gardens which are beginning to take possession of the Coachella Valley. But here the Arabs' "bread of the desert" becomes the millionaires' "plum for dessert." For whereas the Arab can purchase his pound of dates for a few cents, here the same weight sells for from $1 to $2 per pound. The date of the Arab is picked ripe and dried in the sun. His methods of picking, handling and packing may not be strictly hygienic, in fact we have visions of the sticky masses of fruit being pressed into palm-woven baskets with the bare feet, regardless of the number of flies impressed into the rich sweetness. But the result is a wholesome and nutritious food beloved by all Arabs. In California the modern American requires all he eats to be certified hygienically free from germs—or flies. Thus the dates are carefully picked, electrically dried, fumigated, sorted and packed in fancy boxes by expensive young ladies. The product produced is certainly far superior in appearance and flavor to the Arabian date, and when they are stuffed with delicate pistachio nuts, they are undoubtedly suitable to the Epicurean palate of a millionaire—at $2 a pound. The whole production of dates is a costly business, for land and irrigation water are dear, and the wage of even the cheapest Mexican laborer for one month would keep a whole Arab family in affluence for a year. The climate is hot and dry—even reaching 120 deg. in the summer months, and white folks are loath to remain and tend to the work. Only the very best varieties, and palms specially selected for heavy bearing, can meet the cost of production. But the industry promises well in spite of the competition of their poor relation of the real Mecca.

It is not till we had left the deserts behind us that we remembered our rosary of Islam. Somehow the atmosphere of this modern Mecca had not seemed propitious for its production. And as the smooth beads slip through our fingers, it is of the pilgrimage of holy Mecca of Hedjaz that we prefer to conjure visions, rather than the caravanseral of California.

The First Actress.

There are so many actresses today that it is hard to believe there was a time when there were none. Yet, before 1656 A. D., no civilized country could boast a woman "star." There was no law against it, but it was considered a disgrace for a woman to appear on the stage, and women's parts, as in the Chinese theater of today, were taken by boys and men.

Rose Coleman broke the ice in 1656. She appeared in "The Siege of Rhodes," and her success was so great that scores of English women followed her example, and France, [illegible]

An uncouth-looking individual mounted the platform to discourse on the iniquity of the capitalist and the integrity of the workingman. He was plainly ill at ease. "Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "I ain't used to talk. I'm a bricklayer by trade, an' my proper place is on the scaffold."—[London Morning Post.

Fear is man's greatest enemy. Fear only your own conscience.

A CLANSMAN SPIRIT

BY ETHEL R. SHORB.

MUCH interest has centered around the fast disappearing Indians of California and to the old Californians, particularly to those of Spanish ancestry, the Mission Indians hold a particular appeal. As we all know, who are in the least bit familiar with early California history, the Franciscan fathers when building the missions gathered together many Indians, taught them masonry, agriculture and other crafts and in time they became known as the Mission Indians. When the Mexican Congress in 1826 passed an act for the liberation of the Mission Indians, which, however, was not enforced until 1834, many of the Indians dispersed, returning to semi-barbarism, but some lingered in the environs of the Missions where their descendants are still to be found. Remnants of the San Gabriel Mission Indians, Belarde and Louise, who lived to be a hundred and more years of age, dying some ten or fifteen years ago, lived in a hackel of crudely put together boards, the roof being assisted to keep out the rain by dried fan palms, within the shadow of the San Gabriel Mission. Dried ropes of chiles hung from the rafters of the porch and the usual collection of mongrel dogs gave atmosphere to the surroundings. Some clansman spirit of feudal times seemed to have inspired the necessity for a head in the minds of many of the old Indians and Mexicans and Mrs. J. de Barth Shorb, whose mother was Spanish, spoke their tongue and understood them, seemed to stand to them in that light. They came to her when money was needed for marriages, christenings and burials, for flowers to decorate their graves and even when assistance was not needed they unfailingly came several times a year to visit her. Some in time had grown more or less prosperous and they brought gifts of fruit and flowers. Mrs. Shorb's father, B. D. Wilson, had been their friend, too, and had always shown them kindness and helped them in many little ways.

For some intangible reason the San Gabriel Mission Indians looked upon the San Fernando Mission Indians as their head. They visited each other yearly or several times yearly, as they did the neighboring missions, bringing back with them gifts and blankets and different other things that they had exchanged.

Due to his interest in and knowledge of the Indians Mr. Wilson was appointed Indian agent for the Southern District in 1852. Owing to friction over the disbursing of government moneys and difference of opinion over policies employed in connection with the Indians Mr. Wilson resigned a few years after taking office. In that time, however, he had done much in the interest of the Indians and upon his resignation the prominent citizens of Southern California presented him with a very beautiful and exquisitely wrought gold pipe of great value. It was of eastern workmanship and was said to be once the possession of an Indian prince. In workmanship many have compared it with Benvenuto Cellini's work. It is now owned by Miss Wilson, having been given her by her sister, Mrs. Shorb, shortly before her death.—[From notes dictated by Mrs. J. de Barth Shorb.

"On With the Dance."

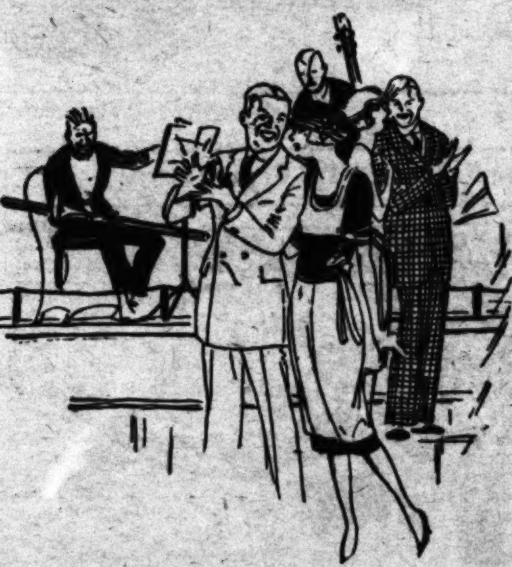
PROLOGUE.

Toddling is wresting set to music . . . as in wrestling, the first step is learning the holds . . . the rest is easy because you merely hold on and keep moving . . . it doesn't make much difference what you move so long as you move and pay no attention to the music except to applaud when it stops . . . you applaud when it stops because that is the best part of it . . . it is very easy to toddle, especially for the men, for they have not only the floor to toddle on, but their partners' feet also . . . "I love to dance with you," says the lady, "you're so light on my feet" . . . married couples cannot dance well together, except when they are not married to each other.

Act I.—A Restaurant.

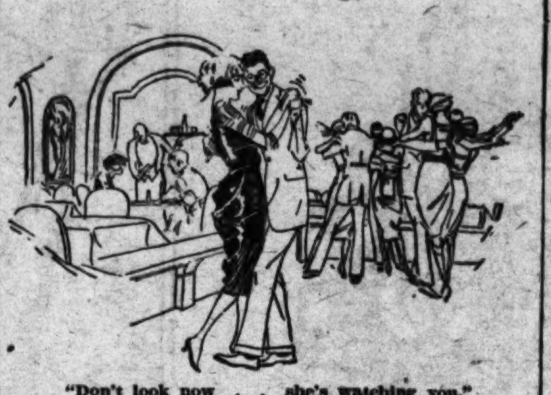
SCENE I: Bill Potter and his fair companion-in-arms, Betty, are toddling with what Harry Newman would call "great good will."

BILL: Ain't the music swell?
Gee, the floor is slick!
BETTY: My, you toddle well!
How d'ya learn so quick?
BILL Well, the kid is smart;
All he need's a start.
BETTY: I'll tell the world you're clever;
It takes some boys forever.
BILL: Lookit over there.
The one with the yellow hair—
Isn't she a curly wolf,
Isn't she a bear?
BETTY: What a funny suit!
Do you think she's cute?
BILL: Well, she ain't so worse at that.
BETTY: But lookit what a funny hat!
BILL: Gee, the music's grand!
Don't you love that moan?
Give 'em another hand—
O, you saxophone!



"Give 'em another hand."

BETTY: Well, violins for me—
They thrill me through and through;
I just adore the Humoresque;
Don't you love it, too?
BILL: It's rather good, you know,
But gee, it's awful slow . . .



"Don't look now . . she's watching you."

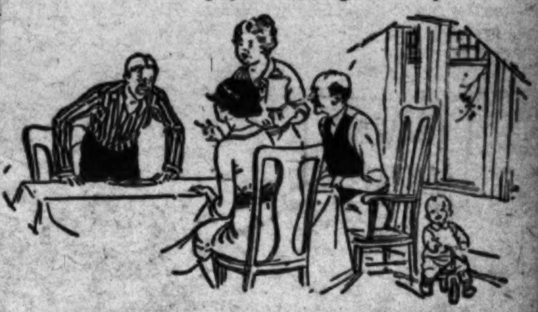
SCENE II: Meanwhile Mamie Potter and her gallant lad (his name is Joe) have dropped in for some tea, toast and toddle, and each is a child again, just for tonight. Ah, well, it's all in fun. As Ma Potter would say, man's a vapor full of woes, cuts a caper, down he goes . . . here today and gone tomorrow . . . after that, nobody knows.

JOE: Ain't the music swell?
Gee, the floor is slick . . .
MAMIE: My, you toddle well!
How d'ya learn so quick?
JOE: Simply used my bean—
Easy, what I mean!
MAMIE: Well, I'll say you're pretty clever;
Takes a lot of boys forever.
JOE: Lookit the little baby vamp . . .
Back of you, by the yellow lamp . . .
Don't look now . . . she's watching you. . . .
The fellow with her's looking, too.
MAMIE: Why, that is Bill!
JOE: And who is Bill?
MAMIE: My brother Bill . . . why, you know Bill.
(Nods.)
He knows me now . . . I think he's sore . . .
I never saw that girl before. . . .
D'ya know her, Joe? Who can she be?
Well, she isn't so much, that I can see.
JOE: Let's ask them over after the dance.
MAMIE: Bill at our table? . . . Not a chance.
JOE: Ain't the music grand?
He slides a mean trombone.
Give 'em another hand—
O, you saxophone!

Act II.—The Potter Dining-room.

It is the morning after, and the Potters have toddled down to the breakfast table straggling in late, as usual. Bill and Mamie are both perishing with curiosity. Who was he? Who was she?

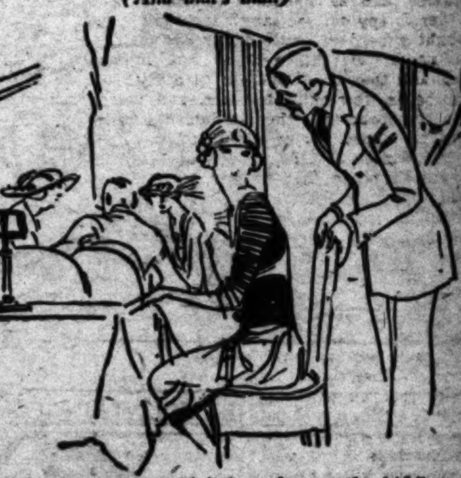
MAMIE: What time did you get in last night?
BILL: Who wants to know? I got in all right.
MAMIE: It's a wonder you could break away—
She held you tight enough, I'll say.
Where did you meet her? What's her name?
My, what a helpless looking dame!
BILL: You ought to talk—with the guy you had,
I suppose you think he's a collar ad;
The way he stumbled around the floor!
I never seen such a simp before.
MAMIE: If you could dance as good as Joe,
You'd be a dancer . . . I'll say so.
But you haven't told me about the dame;
Where did you meet her? What's her name?
BILL: "Dame?" Say, how d'ye get that way?
She's a mighty nice little girl, I'll say . . .



"The kid's in love . . ain't that a joke?"

MAMIE: O, right away he goes up in smoke;
The kid's in love . . . ain't that a joke!
You should have seen him, Ma, last night;
You wouldn't have known him . . . so polite.
Held her chair until she sat . . .
And "have some of this" and "take some of that."
And when she got up he jumped to his feet
And helped her on with her coat so sweet!
Why, Ma, you wouldn't have known the kid—
He acted human . . . honest, he did.
BILL: Say, you was the one that made me sick,
The way you smirked at that silly hick,
And batted your eyes and fluffed your hair,
And looked up at him with that helpless stare
And you danced as though you were doing your best
To crawl inside of his coat and vest.
MA: Now, Bill, you mustn't be so rude.
PA: Cut out the gab and eat your food,
And get off to work or you'll both be fired,
This jawing around here makes me tired.
MAMIE: He's got a nerve to talk, all right,
The way she danced with him last night.
BILL: Gwan and knock her . . . she don't care.
And it ain't gonna get you anywhere.
PA: And wrangling won't get you no place;
Cut out the battling . . . feed your face.
MAMIE: My, what a taste!
BILL: You're not so smart—
Lookit your goof!
PA: Aw, have a heart!

(And that's that.)



"Why, ma, you wouldn't have known the kid."

A LITTLE TALK ON THRIFT.

By S. W. STRAUS, President American Society for Thrift.

THE unemployment that exists in this country today should prove a wholesome lesson in thrift.

Not so many months ago we were in the midst of the wildest extravagance. Wages were at a higher point than ever before. Production was at a low ebb. People were spending recklessly. Thousands of our citizens were making no effort to lay by for the day of adversity.

Now those days of adversity have come to many. Thousands of men are out of work today who a year and a half ago were earning more money than they ever made before in their lives. Happily many did act with prudence and in the days when work was plentiful and wages were high with them they took practical thought of the morrow.

Perhaps the first value that comes from thrift consists of the preparation it gives one for the future.

Thrift is personal preparedness. Those who neglect to practice it are playing with fate. It is just as necessary for the individual to be safeguarded against future calamity as it is for a nation or a business concern to make preparations for future emergencies.

Thrift is fundamentally an economic application of the law of self-perservation. Whatever progress has been made by nations of men is due in the final analysis to an application of the thrift principle. Mankind has progressed because of the instinct of laying by for the future—of piling up resources today against tomorrow's opportunities and requirements.

The lesson in thrift one reads on the page of current history should be taken in a personal way by every citizen of America. The man who is employed or is in comfortable circumstances today should bear in mind that the days of adversity may come to him as they have come to many others.

Life is made up of sunshine and rain, of success and failure. No man is too rich or too prosperous or too independent to be above the need of thrift. It is a fundamental of correct living. To neglect it under any circumstances is to court failure and disaster.

Judges Off the Bench.

Horatio Lloyd, long Recorder of Chester, who died recently, once finished hearing a case at law in a railway carriage.

But he was not the only distinguished jurist who performed his judicial duties wherever he chanced to be.

An application for an injunction was made to Justice Stephen while he was driving in a cab along Piccadilly and he granted it.

The late Lord Brampton, better remembered as Sir Henry Hawkins, who was Judge of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court for twenty odd years, made a court order while walking on Brighton Pier.

But the strangest case of all is that of Sir Lancelot Shadwell, the last "Vice-Chancellor of England," as equity judges were once called. He was president of the Society of Psychrolutes, all whose members undertook to bathe in the open daily during the months from November to March. While bathing in the Thames near Barnes Sir Lancelot was applied to for an interim injunction, which he granted.—[London Correspondence, New York World.

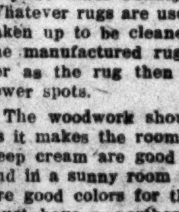
AN ATTRACTIVE NURSERY.

THE color, order and harmony of the nursery or child's room undoubtedly make a lasting impression upon the child. Until recently the architect often failed to recognize the fact that sunshine and light were necessary qualifications for the nursery and the family often thought that old pieces of furniture which were too old and dilapidated to be used in the rest of the house, could be put in the nursery where they would do for the children to scratch or break up.

Today when we step into a nursery we find not only the hygienic atmosphere produced by the lack of much "stuff," the educational aspect of the toys, the scientific arrangement of lights and furniture but also we feel the romance of the spirit of childhood. We have stepped into the child's world where the floor is the sea over which he sails by day in fairy boats. The ceiling is the place where "baby's boat, the silver moon goes sailing in the sky" to the Land of Nod. There too, are the walls where queer animals walk and flowers nod their heads and tell strange tales of Elfin lore. The room is full of symbolism in every corner.

Thoughtful Planning of Many Nursery Details Needed.

HOW necessary then that these rooms should be the most carefully planned. The child's room should have a southern or eastern exposure. The floor should be of some neutral tone and not too highly polished. It may be covered with linoleum which can be bought with a suitable border. Many people prefer carpet all over the floor as it is warmer than small rugs, but in a warm climate this precaution ned not be taken.

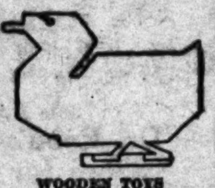


WOODEN TOYS

Napless rugs are best, such as cotton wash rugs and art squares or a good grade of Wilton rug. Scotch wool rugs are very durable as are home made rag rugs. These may be made round, oval or rectangular. Whatever rugs are used they must be easily taken up to be cleaned. Small patterns in the manufactured rugs are sometimes better as the rug then shows less dust and fewer spots.

The woodwork should be white or ivory as it makes the room lighter. Pale buff or deep cream are good colors for the ceiling and in a sunny room a warm green or blue are good colors for the walls. If the room must have a northern exposure the walls may be a glowing but pale yellow, in a lavender or dull rose. A very sunny room may have gray walls.

Painted walls are best for hygienic reasons as they may be wiped down with a disinfectant. Waterproof papers also may be bought. In case there is an unattractive paper already on the walls, it may be painted or calcimined over.



WOODEN TOYS

A Surbase of Painted Burlap Will Resist Hard Usage.

THE lower part of the wall to a height of three feet may have a surbase of burlap. This may also be painted over to match the shade of the walls, although it is attractive if it is a shade or two darker. This burlap is a great protection to the walls and stands many rough knocks.

If flowered papers are used on the walls then the drapes and rugs should be plain. If the walls are plain the decoration admits of flowered drapes. If the window shades are made of figured chintz then no curtains at all are necessary. These chintz shades produce a very pleasing color effect in the room and most people now agree that rather strong colors are better for the child's room than the delicate pinks and blues which formerly monopolized nursery color schemes.

The most attractive window decorations are white scrim or Swiss curtains with a valance of colored rep or bright chintz to match the general color scheme of the room.

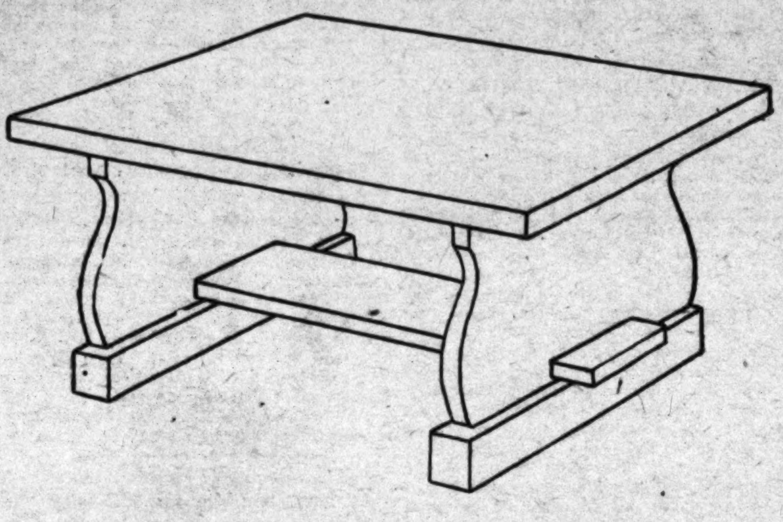


TABLE SUITABLE FOR NURSERY

The rag rug and the bedspread may match the curtain valance. One successful bedspread was made of pink lavender Japanese crepe with a three-inch border of unbleached muslin. The curtains in this room were of unbleached muslin with a valance of the lavender crepe.

A frieze of flowers around the wall is always suitable while one of Mother Goose characters is soon outgrown. The frieze is well placed at the top of the burlap surbase.

Beauty Combined With Durability in the Children's Room.

ALTHOUGH some suggestions may be given about nursery furniture, the space left in the room is much more important. Children must have plenty of space in which to play.

The furniture for the nursery should be both graceful and durable. An iron bed is considered more sanitary than a wooden one but it is also colder. Another necessary piece of furniture is a blackboard. Cupboards and shelves for toys and books should be provided. A window seat is important, so that the child may see out of doors, and it should be made into a box for toys. Larger toys and games that will not fit into the cupboards may be put at night into the corner of the room, in front of which is a screen made out of a clothes-horse enameled and covered with some attractive material. A design may be stamped or stenciled in the center of each section.

If there is a large clothes closet in the room one of these clothes-horses enameled and stood inside to hold clothes is a great help to the busy mother.

All of the furniture should have curved edges. The chairs should be comfortable and the large easy chair for mother when she tells the goodnight story, should occupy a prominent place.

Pictures For the Nursery Need Discriminating Selection.

THERE should be few pictures in the nursery and these of the very best subjects and artists. It is well to change these from time to time. If there are four pictures to hang in the room, it is best to hang two and then exchange them for the others. This may be done two or three times a year or oftener. There are many beautifully illustrated books from which pictures may be cut and framed. Pictures by Jesse Wilcox Smith are good ones for the rooms of very young children. Boys always enjoy those by Remington and such subjects as Vandyck's Children of Charles I are suitable for all ages.

Stuffed woolen or cotton toys and wooden ones are today made very lifelike and attractive but if it is possible, children should grow accustomed to masterpieces of animal sculpture. The most expressive attitudes of animal life have been caught by the Frenchman Fremiet. His images of the cat, rabbit and chicken are ones which appeal to old and young. If you imagine that the child, however young, does not appreciate these, give him the choice between one of these and one designed by a novice and see toward which one his hand reaches.

The older boy is always an enthusiastic admirer of Cyrus Dallin's Indians. They are most attractive pieces of single statuary and are an education as well as a decoration.

The boy also enjoys in his room a glass cabinet for his collections. Practically every boy gets the collecting craze at some time. He must have his treasures some place where they may be seen and the cabinet with glass doors is the solution of a difficult problem. If the rocks, or feathers or balls are kept on open shelves they soon become dusty and disorderly.

Growing plants or seeds should be found in children's rooms. Window boxes built to stand inside of the window are a great attraction if they contain growing plants. Seeds are placed on wet cotton in a bowl. Children are interested in seeing them sprout.

Care is to be Exercised in Regard to Heat and Light.

NEITHER plants nor the children thrive in rooms which are heated with gas stoves or radiators. The ideal way of heating the room is by an open fireplace.

Besides the use of gas for heating, another injurious custom is the use of bright electric lights which are not shaded. An inverted center light or shaded wall lights are not harmful to the child's eyes.

One nursery had on the walls Mother Goose wall paper with the groups of well known characters dressed in soft blue, yellow or pink. At the windows were curtains of pink and ivory barred scrim with overdraperies and valance of soft, pink cotton rep. The rep was also used for slip-over covers for the couch, chair cushions and play box.

The ivory enameled lighting fixtures had little parchment shades decorated with sprays of flowers. Braided rugs were made from strips of cretonne showing pink, blue and ivory and an outer border of several rows of plain pink.

In another room finished in blue there was a good sized blue-gray linen rug. Strips of blue and white cretonne were used for hangings. The walls were in a flat tone of blue calcimine and the woodwork, white. Casement curtains of white barred muslin had overdraperies of blue and white cretonne.

Side Lights.

BABY PENS.

Most of the wicker stores have in stock, or will make, pens. These are usually from three to six feet square and about two feet high and may be placed in the center of the floor for the baby to play in. The wicker has the advantage of being light and easily moved about.

VALUE OF SOLITUDE.

Every boy and girl should, if possible, have a room to himself. The value of an hour or two of solitude in the daily life of the youth cannot be overestimated.

HAVE A TEA TABLE.

The girl appreciates the luxury of having a tea table in her own room where her friends may come for a cup of tea in the afternoon. It gives her a feeling of home appreciation and a desire to keep her room in a faultless order that little else will.

CLOSET HELPS.

Closets should have two shelves in them—a wide one at the top and a narrower one at the bottom for shoes. It is also better if the floor of the closet is even with the threshold, as it is more easily cleaned. A window in a closet is necessary both for light and air. Moths seldom bother clothes hung in a light, airy closet.

THE HANGING BASKET.

On the porch or in the arbor there is nothing more attractive than a hanging flower basket filled either with flowers or ferns. There are some, in our shops, of very good design. One recommendation for them is the fact that they won't leak and will hold enough water so that they may be left over the week end without any danger of their becoming too dry.

GAY FURNITURE.

Simple painted furniture for bedrooms is being placed in the most beautiful and expensive homes. The solid colors of rose, blue, gray, green and ivory with a conventional decoration in harmonious tones are replacing the dark tones in furniture as they express a gaiety and charm unequalled for these rooms. The movement toward painted furniture does not seem to be a passing fad. People are awakening to the value of well chosen color in developing imagination and in satisfying an aesthetic demand.

THE GOLD BRICK TWINS.

The moment Sweet Caps lays eyes on the gentle stranger he says to him. 'Friend, ain't I seen you somewhere before?' 'Well,' says First Aid, 'I wouldn't be surprised, because as far back as I can remember I've nearly always been somewheres or somewhere's else.' After that it don't take no time at all to come to an understandin'.

"Now, if you don't mind we'll just skip along to Friday night. Everything works like it's been greased. The chairman of the Railroads Committee receives his bonus of two thousand and tucks it away in his wallet. He starts to go, but the general suspects there's somebody snoopin' round in the hall outside—so they ooze into Parlor B for a few minutes. Much to their surprise, they finds me and Sweet Caps and the gentleman known as P. Alex. settin' there together, fussin' with the pastboards in a bored and nonchalant way. From this point you know the route. It is sufficient to say that on the fourth deal the limit is removed by general consent and everybody starts bettin' his head off. Pretty soon the pace gets too warm for me and I throws my pat flush into the discard. Then the Sweet Caps Kids decides his little seven-full on trays is also outclassed and he retires graceful. But the general and the chairman and First Aid keep right on slingin' their frogskins into the center until when the showdown finally comes off, the general to all appearances is out two thousand on four nines and the chairman has gambled his two thousand away on four lovely kings, and First Aid is in the rocker with a little straight flush of hearts.

"So First Aid gathers up the dough and shoves it into various pockets. He then arises and says it's gettin' on towards his bedtime and he thanks everybody for a pleasant evening and says goodnight and blows himself out, all of which is part of the played as agreed upon. The chairman likewise departs, but without thankin' anybody, and if it's been a pleasant evening for him he forgets to mention that, too. That leaves me and the general and Sweet Caps, and we sets awhile waitin' for First Aid to come slippin' back and return to us our ostensible losses and cut up the chairman's two thousand with the rest of us. But he don't come, and Sweet Caps goes out to see what's detainin' him.

"In a minute Sweet Caps comes tearin' back in to say our new little playmate is missin'. He ain't in his room, and the night clerk reports that a person answerin' to the general plans and specifications of P. Alex. just now paid his bill and departed in a taxi.

"At this I jumps up with an agonized cry, rememberin' that there perfidious Izzy has just about got time to get the 11:15 if he hurries. Simultaneous, the same horrible thought comes to the general and he jumps up too. But I reminds him, while we were grabbin' for our coats and hats, that it won't never do for him to be seen engaged in a personal altercation with a common crook. 'You stay here, general,' I yells to him as me and the Sweet Caps Kid makes for the door, 'and we'll go ketch up with him. Stay right here,' I says, 'until you get word from us.'

"When it comes to lettin' somebody else do the rough work and take all the risks, the general is certainly old Col. Buck Passer's favorite nephew. He falls back into his chair, beggin' us to lose no time, and as we tears down the hall we hears him utterin' moanin' sounds.

"Take it from me, we loses no time. We jumps into a taxicab that happens to be waitin' outside the front door and tears for the station. We arrives there just as the little 11:15 choo-choo is on the point of departin' for Chicago and all points east. We runs through the gate and piles aboard her and goes rampagin' into the sleeper and shoves open the door of the stateroom. And sure enough, Mr. First Aid Izzy is hidden away there. He's engaged with his back to the door, and he's engaged in pullin' money out of all his pockets and pilin' it up on the seat in front of him preparatory to sortin' and countin'.

"He looks up, but before he's had time to say a word we've got the stateroom door fastened on the inside. Just as we falls upon him with joyful cries, the train pulls out, bearin' me and him and the Sweet Caps Kid far, far away into the stilly night. So when the first excitement has died down, I take charge of the dough and divides it up proper. And as for Izzy he appears to be perfectly satisfied with what he gets."

I broke in here.

"Surely," I asked, "you didn't give him anything after he'd tried to run away with the entire pot?"

"Why shouldn't we give him any of it?" countered Mr. Doolan. "Look at all the trouble he had been put to—leavin' his regular engagements and jumpin' all the way out from Saint Louis on the strength of the telegram he got from me Wednesday morning. And anyway, ain't he the Sweet Caps Kid's own half-brother? No sir, he gets all that's comin' to him—he's done earned it.

"But I knowed the dear old general would be settin' up waitin' for the word I'd agreed to send him, and I always believe in keepin' my promises. So from the next station I sends him a wire readin' as follows:

> Dear General:
>
> You was dead right. It's better to cut a melon three ways than four. Which we have just done so.
> (Signed) SCANDALOUS,
> SWEET CAPS,
> BROTHER IZZY.

"But," concluded Mr. Doolan, "I don't sent it C.O.D.—I sends it prepaid, right out of my own pocket. I judged the general might not have the cash with him to pay for it if it comes 'Collect.'"

A WEDDING TRIP.

Camulos was then representative of the highest civilization in California. The adobe house, two storied, was built around a large court which in pleasant weather practically served as the living-room for the family. Here tea was always served when the weather permitted. The upper story of the house, before the chapel on the left wing of the house was built, served as the chapel. As gruesome as it may seem, a coffin was kept in an adjoining storeroom. Distances were great in those days, travel slow and Donna Isabella Del Valle, the mistress of the household, deemed it a wise expedient. Much formality was observed in the home of Don and Donna Del Valle and the routine of the day was never interrupted. At 8 in the morning breakfast was served, consisting of coffee, chocolate and a Spanish bread; at 12 lunch was served and tea at 4 was as regular a function as it is in an English household; at 7 dinner was served. The old Spanish custom of everyone sitting at table was observed. The household sat according to their rank at a long table seating a hundred people. First the host and hostess, their guests and family, the major-domo and vacqueros. They were waited upon by servants (servientes.) Before dessert (frigo) was served the major-domo and vacqueros arose, bowed to Don and Donna Del Valle, saying "gracias" (thanks) and left the room. One of the entertainments given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Shorb was a large ball (bala.) This was held in the "salla," a long room decorated with a frieze-effect of small mirrors, with painted landscapes and figures set in the frames above the mirrors. Violins, guitars and Spanish harps formed the music, the guests arriving from all parts of the country to attend the festivity. In the bedrooms, trunks were placed around the room, filled with satins, silks, laces and shawls. There were large camphor trunks and varying sizes of the red Chinese trunks, decorated with flowers and studded with nails, so identified with the Spanish people and often known as Spanish trunks. Donna Isabella Del Valle had an exquisite collection of shawls, mantillas and jewels which she inherited from her family, the Sepulvedas, one of the best known of the early Spanish families. Don Ignacio Del Valle (translated "Rock of the Valley") was of pure Aztec descent, a fact of which he was very proud. He represented in character and features the attributes we associate with that wonderful and vanished race of a one-time great civilization.

On their homeward journey Mr. and Mrs. Shorb lunched with Senator Thomas A. Bard at his home at Hueneme and again visited Gen. Pico at San Fernando.

While at San Fernando a shadow was thrown over an otherwise ideal wedding trip. The old chief of the Mission Indians refused to leave his home for a reservation and had to be bound, put in a wagon and driven away. The pathos and tragedy of the old man being forced from the scene of all that his Indian heart held dear, his despair and refusal to go and his doglike look of pleading when bound were never erased from the witnesses' minds. During Mr. and Mrs. Shorb's visit at San Fernando they purchased a Piru Indian basket, the last made by that tribe, the remnants of the Piru tribe, of whom there were only a few left, joining another tribe. The basket was to be burned as a sacrifice but Mr. Shorb persuaded the old woman that a hundred dollars would buy a number of things and as equally acceptable to God. Quantity over quality seemed to have its appeal and the purchase was consummated. It seems strange that as late as 1867 that the Mission Indians, although they had embraced Catholicism for nearly a hundred years, continued to practice a mixture of paganism and Christianity. They still held festivals, made yearly pilgrimages to neighboring missions, returning with baskets, beads, fruit and flowers which they offered by burning to God. They apparently accepted the Christian God but worshiped Him according to their own ideas. On leaving San Fernando Mr. and Mrs. Shorb returned to "Lake Vineyard" where they made their home with Mr. Wilson for some years before building their own home at "San Marino."

The New Calendar.

Spring breezes that reach even the most sluggish of city hearts drifted into a classroom on the lower East Side the other day, where for four hours daily a young and spring-loving teacher struggles to teach English to adult foreigners. The breezes reminded her of the world out-of-doors, and she wrote the word "seasons" on the board and asked the class, "Now, can anyone tell me how many seasons there are and what they are called?" In unison the class promptly responded, "Two—busy and slack." —[Lucy Price's New York Letter.

Waves Measured.

The size of the waves of the Atlantic Ocean has been carefully ascertained as a result of extensive investigations made by the officers of the hydrographic office of the United States Navy Department. In height, we are assured, these waves usually average thirty feet, but in rough weather they will attain forty to forty-eight feet. During storms they are frequently from 500 to 600 feet long and endure ten or eleven seconds. The longest wave measured by the hydrographic office officials was half a mile, and it did not spend itself for twenty-three seconds.—[Indianapolis News.

The Naming of Haddam, Kan.

An interesting legend is told about how Haddam, Kan., got its name. The town is bound on both the north and south sides by creeks, quite wide, and having deep water and swift currents. In the early days, when Kansas was inhabited mostly by Indians, a band of redskins captured some white men, imprisoning them between these two creeks.

"Got 'em!" yelled the savages, who knew just enough English to express triumph or defeat.

But the pale faces were clever; they escaped their sentence of perhaps ninety-nine years by a "swim in the night;" and the Indians were forced to wail long and loud—"Had 'em. Haddam."—[Kansas City Star.

Sight Unseen.

Oscar Hartley, an automobile salesman of Brazil, greatly admired the khaki bag in which his wife keeps her clothespins, so he persuaded her to make one for his fishing tackle.

A few days ago Hartley went several miles from home fishing and was just preparing to assemble his line for a good day when he discovered that instead of bringing his fishing tackle kit he had carried out his wife's bag of clothespins.—[Indianapolis News.

Champ Clark's System.

Uncle Joe Adams, who had been caretaker of Champ Clark's old home in Bowling Green for a number of years, declares Champ was a wizard for knowing right where to put his hand on things. Although he had not lived in the house for a number of years, Uncle Joe says he would frequently get letters like this: "Dear Joe—Look on the third shelf, six papers from the end, and get me So and So's speech on So and So and mail it right away." Sure enough, it always was right where he said it was.—[Kansas City Times.

Donald has reached the age where his presence at social affairs is much in demand. Recently he was invited to a birthday party and mother was giving him final instructions as to etiquette. "What will you say," she asked, "if they ask you to have something that you like?" "I would say 'thank you,'" was the reply. "And what would you say if you did not want any?" "Well," said the young hopeful, "I would say 'No, thank you,' but I don't think I'll have to say that."—[Columbus Dispatch.

Experience Teaches.

A WOMAN heard that her two sons were in the habit, each at separate times and quite unknown to each other, of taking one of the maids "out for a lark."

Fearing to bring down on their heads the wrath of their father by making a bother about it, she asked them if it were true, but could get no satisfactory answer to her inquiry.

It occurred to her that by a little strategy she might get the truth from the girl, so she said, in a jocular manner: "Now, Mary, I want you to answer me candidly. Which of my two sons do you like going out with best—George or Joseph?"

"Weel, madam," replied the girl, reassured by her mistress's manner, "if ye maun ken, o' the twa I like George best; but for a rale donwricht guid spree, gie me the maister!"

Brothers.

A HARVARD undergraduate, contrary to regulations, was entertaining his sister, when they heard someone on the stairs. Hastily hiding his sister behind the curtain, he went to the door and confronted an aged man who was revisiting the scene of his youth and was desirous of seeing his old rooms.

Obtaining permission, he looked around, and remarked, "Ah, yes, the same old room." Going to the window, he said, "The same old view," and peeping behind the curtain, he exclaimed, "The same old game!"

"My sister, sir," said the student.

"Oh, yes," said the visitor, "the same old story!"

Matter of Precedence.

IN A COAL mine in Nevada each man marked with chalk the number on every car of coal mined.

Ole Hanson, having filled the eleventh car, marked it with a one and after hesitating a while let it go at that.

Another miner, noticing the mistake, called Ole's attention to it.

"Yas, I know," said Ole, "but I can't tank which side the odder number wan go on."

Homesteading.

PRESIDENT CHARLES S. BARRETT of the National Farmers' Union said at a Washington banquet:

"We have been passing through bad times, but I believe the worst is over. Yes, I believe we are on the way back to normalcy now.

"But times were bad for a while. An immigrant farmer out my way got a letter from his parents some months ago. The letter said if he didn't send them help they would have to go to the poorhouse.

"The immigrant farmer wrote back:

"'Dear parents—wait a couple of weeks and I'll come home and go with you.'"

Perfect Law.

A WELL-KNOWN judge dined recently at a hotel where the man who takes care of the hats is celebrated for his memory about the ownership of headgear.

"How do you know this is my hat?" the judge asked, as his silk hat was presented to him.

"I don't know it, sir," said the man.

"Then why did you give it to me?" insisted the bewildered judge.

"Because you gave it to me, sir," replied the man, without moving a muscle of his face.

Some People Are Lucky.

A GOOD story against himself is being told by a Nonconformist divine of the severe old school, who, however, is not without a sense of humor. He was traveling north. Just before he got to York he opened the carriage window, with the result that he got a piece of grit in his eye. He rubbed it and did all the usual things, but it still troubled him and every now and again he had involuntarily winked.

When he got to York he went into the buffet and asked for a glass of milk. This being served, he gulped it down and then realizing that something was wrong, he said to the barmaid: "That wasn't milk, was it?"

"No, sir, rum and milk."

"But I asked for milk."

"Yes, sir, but you tipped me the wink."

Then the Fight Started.

AT A MESS dinner the conversation turned on animal thaining.

"Ah," said Maj. Binks, "I remember when I was at Boggleywallah. I tamed an oyster. He used to follow me all over the house like a dog. He would sit on the table at my side with his shell open and crack nuts—most affectionate little creature."

"Have you still got him, major?" asked the doubting auditor.

"No, sir; he came to an untimely end. A friend of mine came into the dining-room in my absence, saw the oyster with his shell open and swallowed him. I shall never have another pet," said the major, with a sigh.

"No doubt your friend found it easier to swallow the oyster," said the colonel, "than we do the story."

Silent Reason.

TWO young men supposed to be busily employed in the rear of the establishment while the principal looks after things in the front were recently startled by the appearance of their employer while they were engrossed in a game of checkers.

The proprietor was indignant. "How is it," he demanded, "I scarcely ever find you fellows at work when I come in?"

"Well, sir, I'll tell you," volunteered one of the youths. "It's on account of those rubber heels you wear."

In California.

AFTER a block of new houses had been partly finished the builder and his foreman went on a tour of inspection. The former left his assistant in one house and went into the adjoining one, when the following conversation ensued:

"Can you hear me, James?"

"Yes."

"Can you see me?"

"No."

The builder rejoined the foreman and remarked with a self-satisfied air: "Now, them's what you can call walls!"

Unfailing Guide.

SENATOR Willis of Ohio met Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi outside the main door of the Senate. The Ohio Senator was just entering, the Mississippian just going out.

"Senator," said the Ohioan, "I wish you would stay in the chamber. How will I know how to vote unless you are here? When I hear you vote 'aye' I know I should vote 'no' and when you vote 'no' I can vote 'aye' without paying any more attention to what is up."

Social Distinction.

THE commander of a converted yacht which was patrolling off Porto Rico had been sent to round up a bunch of "generals" in the northern part of the island, and, a southerner by birth, had been obliged to entertain a luncheon party of ten or a dozen sable "generals."

There was one in particular, a splendid specimen of manhood, six foot four and broad in proportion, who had been silent during the conference and lagged behind as the others went out on deck. Approaching the commander, he said in perfectly clear American:

"Say, boss, you ain't got an old pair of shoes, has you? I ain't no Spanish nigger; I'se American, I is."

At Home.

JUDGE PENNINGTON was talking at a Washington banquet about the war investigations.

"It is true that one magnate recently got a complete white-washing from the Investigating Committee," he said, "but that magnate was a very clever man. The others accused had better look out, for they are apt to give themselves away like the prisoner, you know."

Smiling, Judge Pennington continued:

"A new guard was on duty at a New York prison and was conducting a prisoner to the cells.

"'Look out,' he said as they came to a dark corner, 'there's a step there.'

"'G'wan, partner,' muttered the prisoner, 'I knew that step before you was born.'"

Bound to Win.

ORVILLE WRIGHT was talking at a Dayton dinner about the new Caproni biplane which carries 100 passengers.

"What will the scientists say now?" he laughed. "When my brother and I were trying to fly, the scientists proved time after time that flight was impossible to man. Afterwards, when flying was actually accomplished, they proved that airplanes would never be more than dangerous toys—big, stable ones couldn't be made—they'd be too heavy to rise.

"Those scientists were like the old lady who was taken to see the first trolley car to start in her village. She looked at the car and sniffed:

"'It'll never go.'

"But the car did go. It went beautifully. Then the old lady, staring after it, shrieked:

"'It'll never stop!'"

Purely Ornamental.

HE WAS crusty and rude, but as a celebrity he was entitled to indulgence in these matters. And his pretty hostess was not one to shirk any conversational encounter with him.

"Tell me, Mr. Highbrow," she inquired, "what is your idea of marriage?"

The celebrity frowned.

"Madame," he replied, "my idea of marriage is very much the same kind of vague but inarticulate protest as a dog's conception of a tin can that is tied to his tail!"

Drew a Blank.

IT WAS in the early morning, and two sad cases in the Connaught Rangers were wending their way towards the back door of the wet canteen. Just as they were all but there the provost corporal spotted them.

"Now, phwere do ye two fellows t'ink you're goin' at this hour?" he shouted; and immediately one of the two dropped behind his friend, while both raised their hands to their shoulders as though carrying a heavy weight.

"Goin' to the wet canteen, corporal!" replied one of them.

"Phwat for?"

"We're takin' this plank of wood to the canteen, sergeant."

"Phwat plank?"

"Indade, now, corporal," came the answer in a tone of absolute surprise, as the two glanced down at their shoulders, "Hanged if we haven't gone and forgotten the confounded thing."

Personally Conducted.

AN EMIGRANT ship was wrecked and many survivors landed on the Falkland Islands. When the news reached home, the minister of a church to which some of the emigrants had belonged included in the service a prayer for the victims of the wreck.

Being a very cautious man, he worded his prayer in this way:

"Be with our brethren stranded in the Falkland Islands, which are situated in the South Atlantic Ocean."

A GRACEFUL story of Mrs. Harding's popularity is going the rounds of New York.

It appears that on a recent visit to New York Mrs. Harding attended the first performance of a new play. At the end of the play the young playwright was presented to her, and she said:

"I like your comedy very much, indeed, and I shall send all my friends to see it."

The playwright made a grateful bow and answered:

"In that case, madam, we are going to sell exactly 100,000,000 tickets."

Experiences With Young Life I Have Met.

BY ARTHUR D. CARPENTER

[Arthur D. Carpenter is probably more widely known among school children through Western Canada, Western United States and New Zealand, than any other lecturer appearing on the public platform at the present time. His popular talks on astronomy and meteorology never fail to captivate the youngsters. He has just finished a tour of the public schools of Southern California, and here gives an account of his experiences with some young life he has met.—Ed.]

I HAVE to confess right at the start that I like "kids." I like their enthusiasm, their curiosity, their genuine, gay laughter at a joke, their tense and untiring interest in a talk that is put up to them in a way to make an appeal.

I have addressed teacher institutes, high school and college assemblies, rotary clubs, church audiences, and have toured chautauquas. But the most interesting audience in all the world, to me, is one made up of youngsters who are not so far removed from the graduating exercises of the nursery as to forget it, nor so near to high school life and the social functions as to be too self-conscious, and preoccupied with thoughts of the coming dance. The rollicking schoolboy and schoolgirl age is the age of the greatest delight. It is the most impressionable age of the entire life.

Southern California swarms with multitudes of such youngsters. I am thoroughly conscious of it. I have just come from six months of continuous contact with these youngsters. Day after day I have listened to the tramp! tramp! tramp! of grammar school feet as they have, by the hundreds, marched from classrooms to assembly-room to "hear a man talk" on meteorology or astronomy. These assemblies have often meant seats all filled and the overflow standing around the walls and sitting on the floor in front of the stage. But they soon forgot the inconvenience of standing, or of sitting on the floor as they became interested in a storm center forming off the Aleutian Islands and filling with cirrus, cumulus and nimbus clouds, and the whole show starting for a transcontinental tour over the Great Lakes, down the St. Lawrence River and out to sea. Or when they take their place on the little planet Mars and go whizzing around the sun in three months; or when they tour out to Prof. Michelson's recently measured star that is so large it would swallow up the earth if it were placed where our sun is.

But the most interesting times came with the opportunity furnished the youngsters to ask questions. After having carried the children through some tremendous star-depths in one of my lectures in Long Beach, a byo not more than 10 years of age asked me a question semiprivately. The assembly of 500 children had been dismissed and were passing out, when three little fellows sitting right down in front appeared very intent about something. Question marks were in their faces. As I stepped down in front of the stage, one of these lads with a most serious and solemn manner and a still more serious tone of voice that would have done justice to a child addressing the astronomer Ptolemy in the second century, asked me in the presence of his two devout companions: "Who made the bottomless pit?" As the answer would have involved a discussion of religion in the public schools, I decided to refer that question to their Sunday-school teacher. Incidentally I was relieved from considerable embarrassment.

On another occasion a boy in an intermediate school appeared very confident that he had me cornered, for I had said that the atmosphere of the earth extended into the sky not to exceed 300 miles. When this boy had the opportunity, he arose in the assembly and said: "If the air extends upward but 300 miles, how could anyone live on the planet Mars?" Then a thousand youngsters turned to me with breathless interest to see if I were to make good, or go down in defeat. Instantly I drew a picture of the planet Mars on the blackboard, with an atmosphere around it, and explained how each planet has its own atmosphere, and Mars was no exception to that condition. The boy sat down with a new idea in his head; the crowd was satisfied; I had scored a victory, retaining the confidence of the alert young assembly.

Occasionally, without intention, the speaker springs a local joke that awakens no end of fun at the expense of someone present. In one large assembly I had placed all of the children, in their imagination, on the Mexican border looking up the Sierra Nevada Mountain range, and with one stroke of the crayon I had portrayed the entire range on the board. I said: "There is the range. Can't you see old Baldy up there?" Instantly every eye left my blackboard illustration, and every head turned to look at a certain teacher in the room. At the same time there was a hearty laugh from the crowd. It was evidently a very rich joke. At the close of my lecture I got the particulars. It seems that this teacher at whom all the school looked, was a Mr. Baldwin. He was most decidedly bald headed, and he was known among the children as Baldy. So when I appealed to the imagination of the crowd by asking them to see Old Baldy, every child eye in that audience turned to the shiny dome of that teacher. And there he sat and could say nothing.

I always enjoy my front rows of school children under the big chautauqua tent in the summer time. In New Zealand a year ago during their summer of December, January and February, I faced English and Scotch audiences, and my crowds of school children were ever present. On one particular occasion I had been explaining that a red cow looks red because the hair on that cow was so constituted that it absorbed all the vibrations of a pure ray of white light except the vibration that gives the effect of red, and that vibration it rejects, and is reflected back through the ether of space to the observer's eye, creating the impression that the cow is red. Down on a front seat at my right sat a red-headed boy intently taking in all I was saying. That evening at the dinner table, at the home of that boy, the family were indulging in a little merriment at the expense of the lad's vigorous growth of brilliant hair. The youngster stood it as long as he could and retain his self-respect, when he retorted: My hair is not red, for Dr. Carpenter said so this afternoon. Thus the New Zealand lad scored one on the family.

Southern California convinces me that it is the most remarkable place in all North America for the geographical varieties of its boys and girls attending its schools. In my discussions of climate, winds and weather, boys and girls from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, the Dakotas, Gulf States and Atlantic States are always on hand to verify my statements of local climatic conditions from where they came, tropical hurricanes, tornadoes, violent hail storms, are of familiar personal experience to some one of the units of almost any grammar school assembly in this Southland of tropical calms. In certain large communities I discovered that many tourists had come from colder climates, and had brought their children with them where the young tourist life takes advantage of the excellent public school facilities, and return to their homes in distant Saskatchewan, the Dakotas or some other home land for the summer. What a mixing of young life, and what an education in itself is this intermingling of the youth from all quarters and climates.

Though I am now through with these delightful schools and will soon be facing adult audiences from lyceum and chautauqua platforms, no applause from matured men and women will ever drive from my memory the cordial, inspiring reception accorded me the past winter from the scores of youngster assemblies in the public schools of Southern California.

"WE ARE IN MEXICO."

viciously at her dangling body till her feet again felt the sagging, uncertain floor. And then, suddenly, in the midst of her peril, a strange thing happened to Cleora. She stood still on the swaying bridge, halted by the glory of the thing that had come to her.

"Why," she said aloud, wonderingly. "I don't believe after all that I'm doing this for Harlan and Martha. I believe I'm doing it for —them. For the general and—and the men at Bunker Hill, and Antietam, and San Juan, and—the boys in Flander's Field; for all of them. And it isn't enough, not near enough. What's a little thing like rain and being half scared to death, or even drowned compared to what they went through? I've been restless all the time Matt's been talking about Memorial Day, and I didn't know it was because I owed them something. It's a small way to pay; just bringing a flag to one of them, but it's the best I can do."

Clinging to the wire she got to the end of the bridge.

She could not tell how she made the rest of the trip. Some where along the way she fell, gashing her head deeply upon a rock. She lay on the ground a long time and when she went on she was dazed and light headed from shock and loss of blood.

For a time she thought Harlan walked beside her, then she seemed to be keeping step with old men in blue and very young men in olive-drab. But at the last and worst it was a very old man, with a miner's pack, who tramped beside her.

"I'll not go back." She told the tramping company. "You didn't go back, you at Antietam," to the ones in blue. "You didn't go back—you at Chateau Thierry," to the men in olive-drab. "And you didn't go back, that time the snow was waist deep on the Tehachepi," this to the limping figure with the miner's pack.

Memorial Day was as blue and sunshiny as Martha had said it would be.

To Cleora, opening her eyes in a room of the Marks ranch house, after hours of exhausted sleep, all the sunshine seemed to center in Harlan Mark's face bending over her.

"Oh, Cleora, I've got you safe!" Harlan said huskily as their eyes met.

"I—I got the general's flag," Cleora whispered weakly.

"I know. You had it tight in your little hand when I found you."

"Found me?"

"Yes, dear, I went straight to the river. I don't know what made me, when Matt came to tell us they'd missed you. You'd got the flag and started back. I found you, right where the Round Rock bridge used to be."

"Used to be? Doesn't it—isn't it—?"

Harlan shook his head. "And you might have been on it when it went out. It couldn't have been but a little while after you crossed. I swam across. Sam Jim followed. We made a raft—and now I've got you safe here and you're never going away."

Cleora tried to smile.

"You're good but—I think Matt—would want—just the two—"

"You needn't worry about Matt. Dave's going to build a new house. My uncle's staking them to it. He's mighty pleased with Dave's future wife. Over in the cemetery now, helping her with the general's flag. Mrs. Hallett wants you to meet Dave. Said she told you about the engagement the night you—Oh, Cleora, girl, all the flags don't belong to the soldiers today. You've won yours. That night proved your soldier blood.

Cleora shook her head.

"No," she smiled. "Wilderness blood."

American Typewriters in Siam.

When the typists in Siam sit down to their daily grind they do their pounding on the keys of American made typewriters, according to our vice consul at Bangkok, who reports that American typewriters reign supreme in that far off country. This is due to the fact that the United States manufacturers were the pioneers in fitting their machines with Siamese type. This was no easy job, for the Siamese characters, twenty-four letters, seventeen vowel symbols and eleven or more diacritical signs and marks of punctuation, have no resemblance to the Roman alphabet. The fact that our machines are in daily use in the various government departments throughout the kingdom shows how well the American makers did the trick.—[New York Herald.

Canada's Frozen North.

There was a time, and not so very far distant, either, when any reference to the area of Canada being greater than that of the United States brought forth a reply that much of it was practically waste land, the climate being too cold for cultivation. But nature has many ways and some valuable secrets that she does not reveal all at once. She evidently intended that Canada should be practically a self-supporting country with her wonderful wheat fields, fisheries, forests, mineral lands, harbors, rivers and lakes. Just now she is unfolding some more treasures in what some people have more or less sneeringly called the "Frozen North." It is thawing out enough to prove that it has valuable oil deposits, also that lead, zinc, gold, copper and tar sands have been backed up in that cold bosom. Timber also promises to prove a valuable product. Canada has every reason to have a warm liking for her frozen north, which is proving so rich in mineral deposits.—[Halifax Chronicle.

Doing Their Best.

"Couldn't you find any eggs, dear?" a woman asked her little city niece who was visiting her on her farm.

"No auntie," said the child, "the hens were scratching all around as hard as they could, but they hadn't found a single egg."
—[Boston Transcript.

A Joke that Recoiled.

A young man was walking up and down the platform of a country railroad junction in England trying to see a car that had a vacant seat. He didn't find it, and assuming an official air, he walked up to the last car and announced in stentorian tones: "All out here; this car isn't going."

There were exclamations loud and deep from the occupants of the car, but they all piled out, and made their way to cars ahead. The smile on the young man's face increased as he took possession of a seat and appropriated another for his luggage.

"Ah," he murmured, "it's a grand thing to be born clever! Now I wish they'd start."

By and by the station master put his head in the door; "Are you the smart young man who said this car wasn't going?"

"Yes," said the clever one, smiling.

"Well," said the station master, with a grin also, "it isn't. The brakeman heard what you said, and he uncoupied it. He thought you were a director."—[Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

When Prices Soared.

The fall in the price of sugar led Kingdon Gould to say at a dinner party:

"Thank goodness, we're getting back to normalcy. Wasn't it terrible the way prices kept jumping up and up last year?

"They used to tell a story last year about a golfer who went into a shirt shop and chose a half dozen silk golf shirt patterns, the price to be $180.

"The golfer was led into a dressing-room and measured carefully for his shirts. Afterward the salesman helped him on with his coat and vest, ushered him to the door and said with a genial smile.

"'Thank you, sir. And the shirts will be ready Monday a week, without fail, price $210 net.'

"'But,' faltered the golfer—but you said $180 before.'

"'Ah,' said the salesman with a smile, 'but that was twenty minutes ago.'"—[Washington Star.

Carry Heavy Tea Bricks.

Thibet takes a great deal of tea from China and it is all carried across the border on the backs of men. The tea is packed in what is called "bricks," long shaped parcels which are roped together and carried on the back but towering over the head of the bearer. The load weighs about 300 pounds, often more, and the roads followed are roughest and hardest that can be imagined over high mountains. The men make six miles a day.—[Columbus Dispatch.

The GOLD BRICK TWINS

BY IRVIN S. COBB.

[illegible] It was my highly improper friend Scandalous Doolan who put the question, thereby starting the conversation off on an entirely new tack. Until this, nothing whatever had been said about fables or the authors of fables. As I recall, the talk at the moment dealt with the habits of whales—he-whales and she-whales.

We had been speaking of whales in the first place, and whales had suggested ships, and ships suggested icebergs, and icebergs suggested soda fountains, and soda fountains suggested frothy things, and frothy things suggested mad dogs, and mad dogs suggested hot weather, and hot weather suggested light underwear, and light underwear heavy underwear, and heavy underwear suggested polar explorers, and polar explorers suggested walruses, and walruses suggested whales. So here we were back again on whales, breezing along beautifully, when Scandalous's mind suddenly jibed and went about.

Had it been anyone else who interrupted, I am quite sure I should have felt a momentary sense of pique. A whale is one of the best things to talk about that I know of. In regard to whales and their peculiarities you can make almost any assertion without fear of successful contradiction. Nobody knows any more about the subject than you do. You are not hampered by facts. If some one mentions the blubber of the whale, and you chirp up and say it can be noticed for miles on a still day when the large but emotional creature has been moved to tears by some great sorrow coming into his life, everybody else is bound to accept the statement. For after all, how few among us really know whether a distressed whale sobs aloud or does so under his breath? And who, with any certainty, can tell whether a mother whale hatches her egg like a hen or leaves it on the sheltered bosom of a fjord to be incubated by the gentle warmth of the midnight sun? The possibilities of the proposition for purposes of informal discussion, pro and con, are apparent at a glance.

Personally I would give it first rank. The weather helps out amazingly when you are meeting people for the first time, because there is nearly always more or less weather going on somewhere, and practically everybody has ideas about it. Breakfast also is a wonderfully first-aid topic to bring up in a mixed company. Try it yourself the next time the conversation seems to lull. Just speak up in an off-hand kind of way and say you never care much about breakfast, that a slice of toast and a cup of weak tea start you off properly for doing a hard day's work. You will be surprised to see how the conversation livens up and how eagerly all present join in. The lady on your left feels you should know she always takes two lumps of sugar and nearly half cream, because she simply cannot abide hot milk, no matter what the doctors say. The gentleman on your right will be moved to confess he likes his eggs boiled exactly three minutes, no more and no less. Buckwheat cakes find a champion, and oatmeal rarely lacks a warm defender. Weather for strangers, but among friends, breakfast and whales—bear these in mind and you will never be at a loss for pleasant ways of spending the long winter evenings which are now upon us. But the greater of these is whales. We had hardly skimmed the subject of whales when Mr. Doolan leaped headlong into fables.

Nevertheless I gave him leeway by waiting in silence for what was to follow. Through long acquaintance I have come to learn his idiosyncrasies, which are many and unique. For a brief space, after his interrupting remark, there was silence. I held my tongue and he peered contemplatively down the slant of his cigar to its glowing tip and with the bottom of his glass made little patterns of rings upon the marble top of the table. Anon he resumed:

"Now, f'rinstance, speakin' of fables, you take that one about the grasshopper and the ant. It's been a favorite of mine ever since I first heard it. From what I've been able to gather, that particular fable was first pulled by an old guy named E. Sopp. I wonder did he spell his last name with one 'p' or two? Anyway, it's no matter. By all accounts he was a foreigner and most foreigners have funny monakers, anyway. Even if he was a wop, he must've been considerable of a deep thinker—that old boy. The party that first brings this fable to my attention tells me E. Sopp lived three or four thousand years ago. Naturally, I couldn't stand for that. I says to this party, 'Quit your kiddin',' I says to him; this is only 1915 that we're livin' in now. You can't go behind them returns,' I says. And of course he didn't have any comeback because I had the figures on him. Just the same, I jedge the old bird dated clear back to before the year of the big wind in Ireland, and that's plenty far enough back for me.

"But speakin' of this fable, the grasshopper went pikin' about all summer wearin' snappy clothes for 'varsity hoppers and havin' the time of his life. Easy come and easy go—that was his motto. Every time he got a dollar he spent a dollar and fifteen cents of it right away. He couldn't break a five without developin' some new friends. But all this time the ant is workin' like a bird-dog, hivin' it up and saltin' it down. Pretty soon the heated term is over and fall has came and went, and now the crool winter is upon us and the grasshopper finds hisself as busted as a ha'nt. Bein' out of money, it's a cinch he is out of friends too. When your riches start to fly away, there's quite a few that ketch the sound of them restless rustlin' wings almost as soon as you do—I've noticed that myself, and I'm no member of the Sopp family either. I guess it's because they've been cuddlin' up so close to you that they can hear the warnin' with such a cute acuteness.

"Well, anyway, the grasshopper starts down the big road. He's limpin' on both feet, fallen arches havin' come on him just as soon as he deprived his insteps of the constant support of the bar-rail. His hair is stickin' out through the top of his straw hat, and the chill wind of December is rattlin' his white duck pants. He comes by the ant's house, and sees the smoke pourin' out of the chimney. The ant is settin' at the front window smokin' the best cigar that any amount of money up to 10 cents will buy, and readin' funny pieces out of the comic section. The grasshopper remembers him and the ant used to belong to the same college fraternity back in the old care-free days. He goes up to the front door and knocks. The ant takes a peek through the window and sees who it is, and, bein' a tender hearted little cuss, the sight of his old chum standin' out there shiverin' in the bitter cold affects him so he can't bear to look at it any longer. So he pulls down the shades and goes and calls the dog. And the next mornin' the grasshopper is discovered frozen to death in a snowdrift and the ant has liver and onions for breakfast. The moral, as I figure it out, bein' that it's tough to be an ant but a blame sight tougher to be a grasshopper.

"I'm reminded of that fable every time I think of the fix in which me and the Sweet Caps Kid finds ourselves one winter about two winters ago. The summer precedin' was the finest summer for grasshoppers that I ever encountered. And me and the Sweet Caps certainly was one gallus little pair of hoppergrasses. We spent the heated term and all we made at one of them hot-bath resorts in the Middlin' West. It was a great place for losin' symptoms, bankrolls, waist-lines and reputations. An old boy would blow in there ridin' in an invalid chair and sayin' 'Ouch!' every time the wheels went over a crack in the planks. He'd be kinked up into a nice, tight, hard knot, with his joints so full of rheumatism that when he took a step he creaked like a new pair of corduroy pants. The sanatorium folks would take him in hand and begin givin' him the treatments. Inside of two weeks he'd be hirin' a fluffy blonde to teach him the fox-trot and his wife back home would be consultin' an alimony specialist. I never saw so many human pretzels converted into animal crackers in my whole life before.

"For persons in our line of endeavor, it was certainly a lovely spot to be at. The place was as wide open as oysters on the half shell. Everywhere you looked you could see wise guys from the city in the act of bein' trimmed by suckers from the high grass. Not since the old days when I worked the shells with a wagon-circus that carried its own troupe of porch-climbers and let out the safe-blowing privilege to the highest bidder have I seen the plums hangin' so low and the pippins so easy to pick. For three months me and the Sweet Caps Kid took in coin with both hands; the trouble was that we let it go with both hands too. We couldn't figure how the crop would ever run short, for the harvest was most plentiful, and the reapers, they was few.

"But you can't always tell. All of a sudden something happens. There's a change of city administrations, and no sooner does the new crowd get into office than they start house cleanin' something frightful. The word goes out to close the dampers and bank the fires. One or two hardy adventurers disregards the gipsy's warning, whereupon a grand jury leaps upon them with shrill cries and inside of four weeks they're bein' measured for nobby outfits of striped suitin's at an institution for the promotion of indoor occupations run by the State. So me and Sweet Caps Kid takes advantage of this period of enforced inactivity to hold a consultation.

"'Sweety,' I says to him, 'something seems to inform me it's our next move. Personally I have no desire,' I says, 'to have a large, coarse creature called a deputy warden standin' over me teachin' me how to make chair bottoms. Any time I need a hair-cut I want to be able to pick my own barber. Let us,' I says, 'proceed to show these zealous reformers that us two are the boys that put the syrup into surreptitious. Let us go hence with all the silent yet sincere alacrity of hot sorghum "runnin' out of a leaky jimmyjohn.'

"Sweet Caps, he sees the wisdom of my remarks and he allows we can't be startin' too soon to suit him. But the main drawback to our mappin' out an extensive travelin' debauch is that we're down so close to the cloth. We've been fritterin' our substance away on frivolities when we should have been buryin' it in a preserve-jar back of the smoke house. So we compromises on a short, quick trip to the city of Hot Springs in the State of Arkansas, pronounced by the home-folks Arkansaw, the 'sas' being silent as in juniper and the 'saw' bein' prominent as in planin' mill. We departs therefore in a speedy and unostentatious manner.

"Well, sir, it certainly looks like misfortune is doggin' our steps, because we arrives just twenty-four hours behind another reform wave. For persons in our perfession there is positively absolutely nothin' doin'. the only doormat in town with a 'Welcome' sign on it is the one in front of the county jail.

"Sweet Caps undertakes to horn his way into one of the leadin' card clubs with a view to replenishin' our exchequer by a little judicial play at faro and kindred sports. They throws him out twice and he goes back for the third time—and the doorkeeper climbs a-straddle of his neck and rides him all the way down the front steps, clear across the sidewalk, out into the street, and leaves his mussed and prostrate form on the car tracks. And then it seems to dawn on Sweet Caps that they really don't want him there. So he takes the gentle hint and comes away.

"In a quiet by-way openin' off one of the main thoroughfares we rigs up a simple little green baize table and produces the educated pasteboards, our intent bein' to teach the trustin' souls of them pastoral wilds the Three-Card Montessori system for the education of our little ones. The understandin' is that I'm to do the rifflin' and Sweet Caps is to make change. But before I've had time to make more'n one pass, up comes a bull disguised as a plain-clothes native, reinforced by a whole passel of the infuriated peasantry, and they chases us four or five blocks.

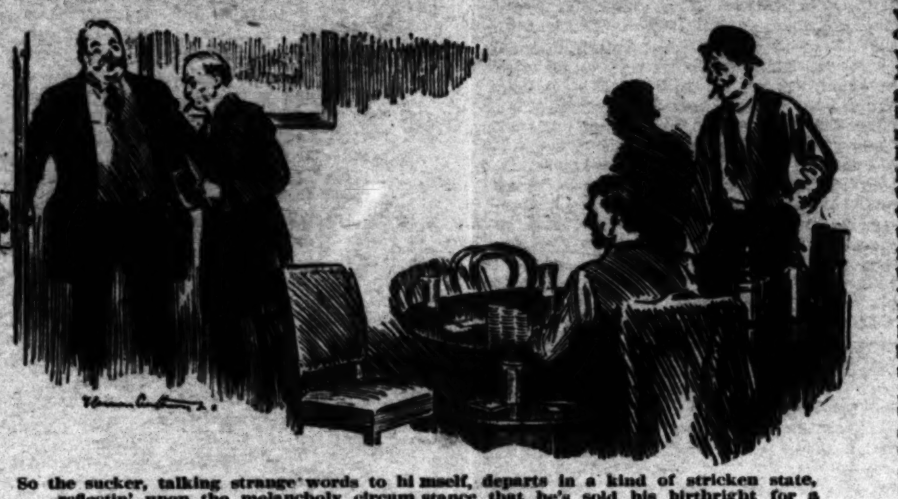
"After that, conditions continue to get no better rapidly. Pretty soon we're down to a small stack of thin white chips. Jitney by jitney our little hoard vanishes from us. All summer I've been burnin' up those large dark-brown imported Havana back-logs at 40 cents each. The best I can do for myself now is to blow a nickel about once in so often for a Peter Panatela, the cigar that never grew up. Domestic goods they are, too, and I'm no domestic. I belong to one of the learned callin's.

"We ain't eatin' with our accustomed regularity, neither. I don't scarcely remember a time when toothpicks plays such a small part in my daily life. We feels that we are indulgin' in a spell of unbridled extravagance any time we spend a dime for a crock of Chilly Con Carney, which is a Mexican dish named for an Irishman. And the Chilly part is stuck on for a joke, because the stuff is so hot you can't notice the taste. I never knew before red pepper could be a blessin' in disguise.

"We used to go up against the Greaser uprisin' for dinner. At breakfast time and lunch time we'd bestow our patronage upon the free-lunch emporiums. That is to say, we did so at first. We'd drop into a saloon, all organized to accept anything that might be passed out, except the bar-check. But it wasn't long before the lookout got to know us, and no sooner had we breezed through the swingin' doors than he'd throw his protectin' form between us and the cracker jar and start whistlin' for the bouncer. Whereupon we would withdraw in an abrupt but dignified manner and go for a long walk on an empty stomach, meanwhile broodin' upon them happy, happy days when we et only white meat, with a little of the dressin', and throwed the second joint and drumstick away.

"We has ample time for all such bitter reflections. There we are, us two, both of us, me and him, marooned on a desert island in the midst of plenty—two poor little famishin' grasshoppers from the effete East entirely surrounded by thrifty but highly inhospitable ants. I hadn't heard about the fable up to this time, but as I look back on it now, I know old Mr. Sopp certainly calls the turn on us. Nearly everybody else in our line of trade has hurriedly shut up shop and gone away to give the moral spasm time to quit spassin', and them that hasn't gone is stayin' on for the same reason that we stays—they didn't have the price.

"Well, to make a long story just as long, things continues in this heart-breakin' way for several days—only they seems like weeks to us—and then we meets the general. . . . Don't get tired and go 'way before I tell you about the general, because he's really the star of the piece. How does he get to be a general? How should I know? Maybe his paw kept a general store or his grandmother suffered from general debility. Out in that far country some folks is born with a title and some inherits one, I guess, though, the general borrowed his when nobody was lookin'. He didn't fight for it—I'll swear to that. He wasn't old enough to have been in our late Civil War, and besides, no Civil War that thought anything of itself would 'a' let him be in it. With the general infestin' the vicinity it couldn't have stayed civil more'n a week at the very longest.



So the sucker, talking strange words to himself, departs in a kind of stricken state, reflectin' upon the melancholy circumstance that he's sold his birthright for a mess of jackpottage, and then lost that too.

"One day me and the Sweet Caps Kid are settin' in our lonely lodgin's, for which we are now two weeks behind with the rent and no prospect of ketchin' up, neither. Not havin' anything else to do, we are engaged in wonderin' how long a growed-up man with all his facilities intact can continue to go on livin' after he's become a strict noneater and a total anti-imbiber, when there comes a knock on the door.

"We figures it's the landlord again. He's been up to see us twice already durin' the day, makin' pointed inquiries touchin' upon a subject which we would greatly prefer not to have discussed in our hearin'. Still, if he wants to keep on payin' duty calls upon us, we can't object without hurtin' his feelin's.

"'I 'spose it's our estimable host once more,' says Sweet Caps. 'He told me the last time he was up that when he came again, he hoped to see a little money. What an optimist that guy is! Seems almost a pity to disappoint him, don't it? S'pose we match to see which one of us goes to the door and tells him we aint neither one of us in?'

"'No,' I says, 'let us remember,' I says, 'we are guests today beneath his roof and tonight are liable to camp on his sidewalk. Come right in, little one,' I says, raisin' my voice.

"With that the door opens. But it ain't our hopeful friend, the proprietor, that stands beamin' upon the threshold. It's a large, influentially dressed person in a high hat. He has a wide, warm smile, one of those long, cream-separator mustaches, a bad eye, a high hat, and a spirituous breath. It's the general. Of course we don't know at the moment he's the general, but we know just by the way he looks he's something. I seem to ketch the hauntin' aromas of wines, ales, liquors and cigars the instant I lays eyes on him; also hot vittles.

"We bids him welcome and he comes in and introduces himself and says our names have been suggested to him by a mutual friend in the city. We didn't know until then he has any friends in the city, mutual or unmutual, but we begs him to proceed. Then he wants to know if we are open to a proposition to make a little piece of change.

"'Well,' I says, 'murder is out of our line, and we aint never done any grave-robbin' or kidnapin'. But,' I says, 'we're willin' to try. Let the Gold Brick Twins do your work,' I says. 'Pray proceed,' I says; 'your openin' remarks interests us strangely.'

"So then he sets down amongst us and outlines his scheme, and if he'd been singin' it and accompanyin' himself on the zither, his words couldn't 'a' sounded more dulcet than what they sounds in the ears of me and the Sweet Caps Kid. Long before he gets through, each of us is holdin' him by the hand.

"Well, the net result is that he advances us certain sums of money with which to get the rest of our wardrobe out of retirement, and he stakes us to a regular human meal. And the descendin' shades of night finds us all three spraddled out in luxurious ease in the smokin' compartment of a sleepin' car goin' away from there at forty miles an hour. It's just like a dream. There we are with cigars in our faces and soothin' mixtures in our pockets and one of the brightest graduates that Booker T. Washington ever turned out of his seminary to wait upon our slightest needs. The general is puttin' up for the travelin' expenses and payin' all bills incurred on root; yet still I can't seem to care for him as I maybe should. I'm willin' to do business with him, but I aint prepared to love him.

"It's plain though that he didn't feel that way with regards to himself, personally. Anytime the general gets on the subject of the general he's prepared to speak for hours and hours without becomin' wearied. He's a very consistent absorber, too. I figure out he's part Scotch and the rest seltzer. If he aint got a flask travelin' between his hip and his mouth, he feels something is missin' from the landscape. The more I see of the general, the more prone I am to unlike him excessively. But as I said just now, he don't share none in them sentiments. He's passionately addicted to himself.

"Shortly before midnight, when me and Sweet Caps has a moment of privacy together in the washroom prior to retirin', I find my little playmate entertains practically the same feelin's that I do.

"'It strikes me with great forcibility,' says Sweet Caps, 'that this new-found benefactor of ours is considerable of a Camembert. Sizin' him up casual, I would say off-hand that he's mostly deep yellow, with a fleck of green mold interspersed in him here and there,' he says.

"'Sh-h!' I says, 'naughty, naughty,' I says, just like that. 'Let's not be uncharitable,' I says. 'Probably he was born that way. As the Latin puts it, Semper Edam, meanin',' I says, 'once a cheese always a cheese.'

"'I don't like them milk strainers he wears on his upper lip, neither,' continues Sweet Caps, in a petulental tone. 'Burnishers has gone out of style for wear upon the human face,' he says. 'When we get to know him a little better, let's club in and buy him a nice clean shave.'

"'Sweet Caps,' I says, 'never look a gift horse in the mushtash. There are several things about the general that I don't deeply care for, he himself being chiefly one of them. But let us bear with him,' I says, 'until he ceases to bear. At the present he's our staff of life. Never,' I says, 'never, never punch a meal ticket until you have to.'

"And with that I leaves my shoes in the aisle, and puts my feet in the hammock and goes to bed on the bottom shelf of Mr. Pullman's perambulatin' pantry.

"The next morning we arrives where we're goin' to. It's the capital city of one of the flattest and most enterprisin' commonwealths in this entire sisterhood, bein' located in the heart of that favored district which people in New York regards as the Far West and people in San Francisco regards as the Far East. I prefer not to name it by name. It is true that the general is now no more, and he never was very much; he passed away last spring, as I read in the papers at the time; but the State itself is there yet, and the statute of limitations continues to hang on, and I'm afraid some of the folks out there is still a little mite fretfully inclined whenever they happens to think of me and the Sweet Caps Kid. So I will not burden you with too many details. Howsomever, any time you should chance to be out in that neighborhood you shouldn't have any trouble findin' the place. Just take the first turn to the right after you cross the Mississippi Valley, keepin' the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Coast on your left, and after a while you'll come to it. It's got a Carnegie Library and a new fire station; some of the streets run one way and the others run the other way, and the Eagles met there once, and the Elks are expected to drop in almost any time. You'll be able to recognize it easy. Oh, yes—here's another hint to help you: The people livin' there always speak of it as the garden spot of the world. It may be a garden spot, but it needs cultivation.

"By a strange coincidence, we arrives on the very day that the State Legislature convenes. We takes rooms at the leadin' hotel, occupyin' what the Kid, who's a mighty literal pronouncer, insist on calling a suet, meanin' by that a sweet. The general takes one parlor and fits it up regardless with boot-leg bottled goods and corkscrews and other necessities of life, and in the adjoinin' parlor me and the Sweet Caps Kid rigs our cosy little deadfall; and then we sets back and waits for business to open up.

"We don't have long to wait, neither. You see, it's like this: The general is a lobbyist by profession. He's one of the hottest little lobbyists that ever come out of a loblolly. Naturally, though, he don't call himself by such an obnoxious title. He speaks of himself as a promoter of helpful legislation. He's been retained by the principal railroad traversing that part of our common country to do its plain and fancy corruptin'. All the railroad desires at this time is for the Legislature to give it about the half the State in the shape of franchises. And all the general has got to do is to see that the Legislature comes through. He turns in an expense account every week that would make a rivers and harbors bill look puny, and from what I can gather he's drawin' a pretty fancy salary, besides which he's entitled to keep what he can make by chiselin' down a member from his regular price for bein' corrupted. Any time a corn-fed statesman who's set forth in the past performances-book at the figger of five hundred, can be induced to sell out for, say, three hundred and fifty, the general goes south with the differences. It's his legitimate commission on the deal. And at that he ain't satisfied. He hankers to get the three-fifty back without losin' said statesman's vote. That's where me and the Sweet Caps Kid come in. That's why he took that trip all the way to Hot Springs to dig up a couple of specialists. That's why we're now on the job in Parlor B of Sweet A.

"It's so easy it's right simple. The general sets his eye on a promisin' rube-member from the tall and uncut. He honeys up to him, wearin' the greasy smile of a fish-duck that's just located a fat minnow, and soon the hellish deed is done. In the dusk of the evenin' the general takes his young friend by the hand and leads him into his room and pays him the price of his shame. Maybe he gets him for two hundred, and maybe he has to pay him as much as two hundred and fifty—you'd be surprised to know how cheap you can buy shame in some sections of this favored land.

"Well, they closes the deal and then right away the member gets impatient to go. If he's an old timer at the game, he's worried for fear he sold out too cheap, and if this is his first offense, he's low in his mind to think of what his constituents will say if they ever find out on him. That's the general's cue to slip a drink or two into him. Then the general goes to the door and opens it about an inch and a quarter and takes a quick peek outside. He slams the door then and comes back and tells the member there's a suspicious lookin' party snoopin' round the hall. He suggests they slip into the next room to wait until the coast is clear. So they slips into the next room and, lo and behold, me and the Sweet Caps Kid is settin' there playin' show-down for pennies. The general introduces us to the corrupted guy as a couple of friends of his, and then me and the Sweet Caps Kid invites 'em both to set down and play a little nickel-ante with us, jacks or better to open, 10-cent limit. The general says they've got a little time to kill and maybe they might as well draw a few hands.

"I guess I don't need to tell you the rest of it—you must know how the Big Mitt is worked. No? Well then, p'raps I had better explain briefly. The deck goes round a few times and nothing happens. Then it comes my deal, and the Sweet Caps Kid takes a flash at the cards I've slipped him, and he says sort of wistful-like that he certainly wishes we was playin' for something substantial, because he's got a hand that he'd like to adventure a little real money on. Them words sound like a message from heaven to the general's young friend, and he seconds the motion. So just to humor him and Sweet Caps, me and the general agrees to remove the roof temporarily, and them two starts in bettin'. In order to show that he's perfectly calm and collected, the sucker knocks his stacks of clips over and turns pale as a sheet and keeps swallowin' his Adam's apple and trembles all over. And the Sweet Caps Kid keeps on a-h'istin' him and a-h'istin' him.

"After a while the legislator's money is all up, and then Sweet Caps calls him; and he spreads out his little throbbin' king-full on palpitatin' queens. But Sweet Caps, he merely smiles a sad, pensive smile and reaches for the coin, at the same time layin' down four rattles and a button.

"What's four rattles and a button? Why, that's my pet name for a complete set of tens with an ace on the side for a confidence card. So the sucker, talkin' strange words to himself, departs in a kind of stricken state, reflectin' upon the melancholy circumstances that he's sold his birthright for a mess of jackpottage, and then lost that too. When the sound of his draggin' footsteps has died away in the distance down the deserted hallway, me and Sweet Caps and the general splits the winnin's three ways, and then we all retires to our downy couches, filled with the comfortin' thought that tomorrow will be a new day.

"It's a payin' business, with some profits and no risk, but at that I don't care deeply for it. I reckon I'm too honest—that's always been my principal drawback. But the general, he thrives on it. While we're cuttin' up the proceeds, he sets there combin' his droopers with his fingers and takin' on flesh so fast it's visible to the naked eye. Every night that passed I seems to care for him less and less, until after a while I could be arrested for thinkin' the thoughts which I thinks about the general. I want to kick him so bad it makes my foot hurt. But I restrains myself. As I says to the Sweet Caps Kid,, 'Business before pleasure,' I says.

"Well, things jog along very comfortable and cosy for a while; leastwise, they would be comfortable and cosy if I could only quit dislikin' the general long enough to take some interest in my surroundin's. Sometimes a statesman that's been trimmed in our little game refuses to stay bought, but generally he does.

"And then one day, in comes the general and tells us he's garnered enough ordinary [illegible] two thousand bones, cash down, paid in advance. So he feels that we mustn't take no chances on lettin' any part of that large and succulent mass of dough get away from us. The gent in question is plum' addicted to flirtin' with the playin' cards so the general tells us, and you can't bet 'em too high to suit him when he's got his sportin' temperature up, but he's a toler'ble wise bird, and there mustn't be any slip-up. He thinks the deal will go through on the comin' Friday night, after the Legislature has adjourned for the week. This is a Tuesday when he unloads all this valuable and timely information upon us.

"Immediate, I has an idea of my own. I says to him, 'general,' I says, 'it occurs to me that for this special and extraordinary occasion there maybe oughter be a new face round our happy fireside. The fact that me or Sweet Caps has won every time we had one of our little sessions is liable to have caused talk amongst the classic shades of that there State-house. It is possible,' I says, 'that sinister rumors, founded upon unjust suspicion, has already come to the ears of this wise young friend of yours. Don't you think,' I says, 'that we'd better have a fourth player present at our next little gatherin'—somebody who's a perfect stranger to Mister Chairman. And then, if the stranger holds the winnin' hand and all the rest of us goes through the form of droppin' our bank rolls too, why there'll be no reason for the principal loser to beef or renige. Do you,' I says, 'get my drift? Or don't you?'

"'I get you,' says the general, or words to that effect, 'but that means there'll be four instead of just us three to divide up the surplusage. I'm constitutionally opposed,' he says, 'to cuttin' a melon into so many pieces, where it can be avoided. Besides,' he says, 'whereabouts are you goin' to find your added starter? Remember,' he says, 'this is a close corporation and regular dwellers in this sweet community is barred.'

"'Well,' I says, 'don't know myself yet where we'll find him. But at least we can be lookin' round between now and Friday. I'm liable to run upon a promisin' nonresident almost any time,' I says. 'I've been suspectin' for some time,' I says, 'that there was sharpers loose in this fair metropolis I'll keep my eyes skinned,' I says.

"The general, he grumbles some more, but he's bound to see the force of my reasonin', and so finally he consents. The next day and the day after I goes snoopin' round, spyin' out the land, and late on the afternoon of the second day, which is Thursday, just after the train from Saint Louis gets in, I goes and looks up the general and am able to report progress. I tells him a well-dressed party who looks like he might have ulterior motives on other people's bank-rolls has just blowed in on the 4:03 from Germantown-by-the-Eads-Bridge and that if he's the person I think he is, we've located what we've been lookin' for.

"'How'll you find out if he is, or if he ain't?' says the general.

"'That,' I says, 'is one of the easiest things I do. Come with me,' I says.

"So I takes the general with me and we goes up to the suspect who is leanin' against the cigar case in the lobby, pickin' himself out a suitable smoke.

"'Howdy do, Izzy,' I says, 'How did you leave things at Joliet?'

"'Excuse me,' he says in a hauteurful manner; 'I'm afraid you have the wrong party. My name is Montague—P. Alex. Montague.'

"'Probably so,' I says, 'probably so, for this day and date. But what's a name more or less between brothers in the same lodge? And besides,' I says, 'I've seen your picture in the paper too often to be mistook. Come with us,' I says, 'for,' I says, 'we wouldst have speech with you in private. I'll hate it something awful,' I says, 'if some gossipin' busybody was to overhear us and go runnin' round tellin' people that Mr. P. Alex. Montague is no other than First Aid Izzy Wexenbaum, the well-known and popular card-wizard.'

"He looks worried at that. 'Is this a pinch?' he says. 'Because if it is,' he says, 'I'll have to tell you now that nobody's got anything on me.'

"'Our sole desire,' I says, reassurin'like, 'is to introduce you to some easy money. General,' I says, 'allow me to make you acquainted with Mr. P. Alex Montague, Et Cetera Waxenbaum.'

"So with that we all repairs to our snug retreat, where Sweet Caps is waitin' for us.
